Fire guts dining lodge at Camp Sea Gull

A fire destroyed the main dining lodge at the Camp Sea Gull resort Friday night.

The fire apparently started in the kitchen. By the time the Charlevoix Fire Department was alerted of the fire and was able to respond the main dining lodge was already "engulfed."

Firemen attempted to contain the blaze and called the Charlevoix Township Fire Department for assistance. Before the fire could be brought under control a nearby cabin was also torched. Damage was estimated at several thousand dollars.

About 30 cross-country skiers were staying at the resort at the time of the fire, but no one was injured.

Firemen were called to the scene at about 8:25 p.m. The fire was completely extinguished about seven hours later. Camp Sea Gull is located on the Boyne City-Charlevoix Road along Lake Charlevoix.

The resort is owned by Lewis Schulman, superintendent of Farmington schools. Schulman's sons, Jack and Bill, were at the resort when the fire started. It is expected the resort will be closed for the remainder of the winter.

A city fire official said the fire was one of the worst in recent years.

It took firemen nearly seven haurs to extinguish a blaze at the Camp Sea Gull resart Friday night.

Firemen work to contain the blaze.

Osterberg honored for saving girl's life

John Osterberg has received a Citizen Award from Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater for saving the life of nine-year-old Karal Ice.

Karal and a friend were feeding ducks in Round Lake just two days before Christmas when Karal lost her footing on a dock and fell into approximately 12 feet of water.

Karal's companion was unable to pull her from the water and ran for help. The companion, Michelle Mallioux, found Osterberg who was working at the Finn Lumber Yard. She told Osterberg that her friend had fallen into the lake was about to drown.

Osterberg ran to the lake, saw Karal, and then positioned himself on the dock and reached out and grabbed ahold of Karal and pulled her to safety.

According to Lasater, Karal was a non-swimmer and had winter clothing on at the time of the incident "and was becoming exhausted to the point that she could not have held on much longer.

"It is obvious that the quick actions of John Osterberg did in fact save the life of Karal Ice," Lasater said. "Therefore, on behalf of the citizens of Charlevoix County, I am pleased to present a Citizen Award to John Osterberg."

Osterberg, 22, resides at 202 E. Dixon Street.

Karal, a third grader at the Charlevoix Elementary School, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Ice, 205 W. Upright Street.

Senior citizens to get deduction on cable TV

Senior citizens in Charlevoix County will get a $1 a month deduction in their cable TV rates starting Feb. 1.

To be eligible for the discount, senior citizens must be over 62 years of age and have a household income under $10,000.

The discount was announced by Gil Clark, general manager of Lake Charlevoix Cable TV Company.

The cable TV company started investigating the possibility of a senior citizen discount after it applied for a rate increase last summer to offset the cost of adding three additional channels. The company was granted a 75 cent increase which will take effect April 1, Clark said.

Area residents now pay $6.85 a month. Starting April that will jump to $7.60. For senior citizens eligible for the deduction, the cost will be $5.85 in February and March and $6.60 starting April.

To receive the discount, senior citizens must report in person to one of the company's offices in either Charlevoix, Petoskey or Gaylord and sign an affidavit confirming they are 62 years of age or over and have a household income under $10,000.

The new channels the cable company have secured include religious programming from the Christian Broadcasting Network, sports shows from Madison Square Garden, and a Canadian station CBET out of Windsor.

Atlanta Ballet coming to northern Michigan Jan. 10, 11 and 12

A very special treat is coming for northern Michigan residents in January. The Atlanta Ballet, the first ballet company in the United States to be formed outside of New York City in the 1920's, will be spending Jan. 10, 11 and 12 visiting and performing in Emmet and Charlevoix county communities.

During the daytime, dancers will entertain and educate school-children from Harbor Springs, Petoskey, Charlevoix, Boyne City, and East Jordan. During their residency, these talented dancers will also give two performances for the community.

Scheduled for Petoskey's High School Auditorium Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 10 and 11 at 8 p.m., the performances offer special student rates of $2, adults $5, and patrons $10. The patron ticket includes an invitation to an "afterglow" Thursday evening and a chance to chat with some members of the dance troupe.

The Atlanta Ballet was proclaimed "State Ballet Company of Georgia" by Jimmy Carter in 1973 and has traveled more than 30,000 miles to teach about and perform the intricacies of classical and contemporary dance.

The ballet is able to come to northern Michigan through the efforts of the Crooked Tree Arts Council, and a grant from The National Endowment for the Arts Dance Touring Program through Michigan Council for the Arts, Detroit.

Tickets for the Jan. 10 and 11 performances will be available at the door, by calling ballet chairperson Sue Fisher at 526-2370, or at:

Charlevoix woman makes X-Mas merrier for other families

D'Ann Rothenberger made Christmas a little merrier for two Charlevoix area families.

Mrs. Rothenberger was the winner of an eight foot Christmas stocking that was filled with toys. The stocking was given away by Crown Drug.

"I couldn't believe my ears when I was informed that I was the lucky winner," she said. "Everybody in the family was elated because I'd never won anything in my life."

But after the thrill of winning had worn off, Mrs. Rothenberger was faced with the problem of what to do with the toys. Her son, Carl, and her daughter, Danya, weren't in the market for toys.

"What can you do with about 30 toys for children when you haven't anyone to give them to?" she said.

Well, just two days before Christmas, Mrs. Rothenberger found homes for the toys.

She remembered a little boy from East Jordan, where she teaches, who was not going to have much of a Christmas. Mrs. Rothenberger made a phone call to a friend and got the names and ages of all the children in the family. She then sent several of the toys to the family.

She also remembered a family in Charlevoix whose Christmas was going to be pretty slim, too. She collected the rest of the toys and delivered them to the family where, once again, they were greatly appreciated.

"I never dreamed that winning something like a Christmas sock could be so much fun," Mrs. Rothenberger said. "But the biggest thrill of all was sharing it with the others.

"It certainly made my Christmas."

County to participate in jail study

Charlevoix County has joined the growing number of northwest Michigan counties applying for federal funds for a regional jail needs study.

By resolution, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners last week agreed to cooperate with the Northwest Regional Planning Commission, and its designated consultant in providing relevant county data about jail facilities. They will also appropriate the necessary funds to provide a pro-rated share of the 10 percent local cash match necessary to obtain the federal grant.

The project is designed to provide a needs analysis of jails in the area in light of recent court and administrative rulings. The study will identify existing and potential deficiencies in jail facilities that participate in the project.

The commissioners' resolution pointed out the importance of recent rulings and the fact that "many counties may be required to substantially upgrade their facilities." However, Sheriff George T. Lasater recently told the Courier that to date he has had no complaints from officials about his facilities. The Charlevoix County Jail was completed in 1971.

Doing your house-hunting early meaning some weeks or months ahead of the big buying season that gets under way in April or May of each year can make house-hunting easier and also more economical. A pre-season buyer often gets much closer attention than a buyer during early buying times. Also there may be a better chance for negotiation in the off season months. A seller who needs to make a move may cut prices on such items as fixtures, carpets, drapes, garden and game room equipment.
Congratulations to Dick and Bonnie Russell on their new home on Eaton.

BRUCE SANDERSON points to the wall of his new home to which the vertical solar collector will be attached.

Frenetic world of technology follows Bruce Sanderson

By TOM DAMMANN

Bruce Sanderson has discovered it is not possible to escape the frenetic world of technology he foresook for the tranquility of his rural birthplace on the South Arm opposite Ironton.

Sanderson, 82, and his wife Charlotte, 57, have been building their solar home across Sanderson Road from the farm-house in which he was born.

"In this rural background one becomes aware of nature's delicate balance and of the dangerous impacts upon it by technology's mad rush for power and profits," Sanderson told a visitor recently.

Sanderson was educated in the nearby one room school house, now Eveline Township Hall, and East Jordan High School.

His father, William Martin Sanderson, a graduate of Northwestern University of Evanston, Ill., and the University of Michigan Law School, had taken up farming the family property rather than the practice of law.

"We were able to live off the farm comfortably," his son recalled. "Dad was never admitted to the bar, but his legal training helped him because he was supervisor of Eveline Township for 35 years, chairman of the township board for most of the time."

Mrs. Sanderson described her late father-in-law as a philosopher, said he had written several homilies on the sides of the farm's big red barn, such as "To be rich is to want little," and "Sympathy is another's troubles, courage in our own."

After high school, Sanderson worked in Boyne City at a plant which manufactured an ultrasonic Diathermy machine. He moved with it to Cleveland, Ohio.

There is signed up with the National Guard and was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1941 and served with a signal battalion in General Patton's 1st Armored Corps in North Africa. Later he served in the South Pacific in a Signal Service Battalion.

He came home for Christmas in 1945 a first lieutenant but was active in the 125th Infantry Regiment based in Flint until 1962.

In 1950 he received a BA degree in journalism from the University of Michigan and since then has worked as a writer and editor of technical publications for such developers and manufacturers of missiles and space craft components and Chrysler, Bendix, and Chevrolet.

Sanderson wrote the instruction manuals for the Redstone Weapons system and was involved in early space research and the first recording probes into the stratosphere.

In 1978 he was helping write and edit a book by a prominent Detroit cardiologist Lawrence H. Krohn, M.D. entitled High Resolution Electro Cardiology.

Sanderson describes the book as a research tool utilizing a computerized display that reveals the heart and its actions which the electrode cardiogram cannot.

With no specific assignment in view and his only child, Bruce, Jr., 28, also a graduate of the University of Michigan, well along in a career as a computer systems engineer with Ford Motor Co., Sanderson decided the time to retire had arrived and moved up here to finish the book and supervise the construction of the shell of his new home.

For the past two years he and Mrs. Sanderson have been enjoying the close view of the South Arm, whose waters lap the shores some 100 feet below, while finishing the interior of their new home.

"We've had three partridge to eat this year, and we're not hunters," Mrs. Sanderson told a visitor. "They flew into our windows and killed themselves."

The house is heated by a wood stove with an oil burning furnace which will operate when the Sandersons are absent.

Basically the house is a solar house. It has 200 square feet of windows on its west side. Eventually the Sandersons will install a vertical solar collector on that wall outside with a thermal storage unit in a pit already in place.

A few paces west a small wooden structure, grayed by age and weather, sits in a small clump of cedars.

"This was my grandfather's office," Sanderson explained. "He brought it across Lake Michigan on one of his ships from Milwaukee in 1910."

He added that his grandfather, who had come from Norway, in the 1850's had built a successful coal and wood business in Milwaukee and that he supplied the iron foundries on Lake Charlevoix with coal.

"He fell in love with this area and purchases 51 acres on the south shore of the South Arm at Ironton from the old Grand Rapids and Ironton railroad for some $735 in 1883 intending to retire here," Sanderson explained.

"He brought the office, lumber, doors and windows from an old Milwaukee church and other supplies over here on board the three-masted Schooner THE LUCIA SIMPSON, one of the last sailing vessels to carry coal and lumber on the Great Lakes. She burned up in Milwaukee some 30 years ago."

He pointed to some barely discernible lettering above the door to the office, which read "M. Sanderson & Co. Wood and Coal."

"When we get the house finished, I'll have to put this building back in shape," Sanderson observed. "Dad and granddad built the farm house with the ship's crew in 1910-11. I was born there in 1918."

Building this home the Sandersons became acquainted with other people in the Petoskey, Boyne City, Charlevoix area, who were pursuing such alternative sources of energy as wood, wind and sun.

Living near the Big Rock nuclear power plant they were convinced that nuclear power is not only a dangerous source of energy but so inefficient that private bankers and investors will no longer invest in nuclear power plants.

"While nuclear power might appear to be the cheapest form of energy, it isn't when you analyze the hidden government subsidies for the manufacture of uranium rods and the costs of reprocessing the fuel, not to mention the unsolved problem of waste disposal," Sanderson said.

The Sandersons and their friends became exercised by the financial involvement of the area's rural cooperative system in the building of Detroit Edison's Fermi 2 nuclear power plant and in talk that it may give financial assistance to Consumers Power Company's Midland nuclear plant.

Sanderson ran unsuccessfully for the board of directors of Top O Michigan Rural Electric, which is the state's largest cooperative utility, and of which he is a member-user.

Now he serves on a committee of Top O Michigan member-users directing a petition drive for the recall of the co-op's board of directors.

"The utilities are out of control in so far as nuclear power goes," Sanderson says. "There are better ways to boil water.

"The utilities are caught up in technology's mad rush that doesn't reckon with the downstream consequences, such as the long term and hidden dangers of radiation and the problems of what to do with nuclear waste.

"I'm a second generation embattled farmer trying to obtain a more representative control of our member owned utility and a more open management that will be responsive to other ideas and suggestions," Sanderson concluded.

Hampton recalls early Charlevoix merchants

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the sixth in a series of articles taken from Will E. Hampton's "Memories of Charlevoix the Beautiful Six Decades Ago," written in 1955 when Hampton was an octogenarian. In this installment, he writes about Michigan Avenue in 1894, some of the merchants in town, and bicycles:

When my house was built on Michigan Ave. in 1894, there was but one other house on the lake front side of the street, and that house was occupied by a man named West, about opposite where Petoskey Ave. starts. The rest of the lake front was all wild, trees and underbrush. On the east side of Michigan Avenue, the Mayne residence, opposite my home, was the farthest building north on that side of the street. There were a few Indian homes near Mount Mizsaba but none on Michigan Ave.

On the south side, there were very few homes more than two blocks beyond the top of the hill, the Sherwood house, owned by Morris Stockman on State Street, and which I occupied during the first summer and fall of my residence being one of them. Mr. Sherwood had lost two of his children by diphtheria only a short time previous to his vacating the premises, and while the house had of course been fumigated, we were the first to move in, and as Mrs. Hampton was quite understandably nervous over the situation, which we did not know of until a considerable time after moving in, we vacated as soon as a suitable house could be found, and moved into what was later known as the Bedford house opposite the Congregational Church on Park Ave., where Victor H. Hampton was born on March 1, 1891.

I stated at the beginning of this narrative that it was in no way "history". A historian has to collect data and have it all in hand when he starts. I have no way to get hold of dates and have had to set down from memory what happened and what conditions were over a half century ago.

Since typing the foregoing, I recall that on the west side of Bridge Street, between Clinton and Mason, was Jay Price's barber shop, the Journal office, a shoe repair shop, and that there were lunch rooms on both sides of the street that I have not mentioned, as well as a commercial establishment on the round lake front in the block between Mason and the Carpenter & Bartholomew establishment, owned by two brothers, Upright and Emrey. Am not sure, but think there were two of the Uprights in the firm. One lived in the large house top of State Street hill that I hear has recently been wrecked.

In 1890, some of the more or less prominent citizens of the town were John Nicholls, of the Lumber Company and bank; Egbert Carpenter of Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.; Frank C. Hines; Byron E. Miller; Harrison Bedford, connected with that company; Amos Fox, head of the old firm of Fox, Rose & Buttars; Archie Buttars, twice Lieutenant Governor; L.D. Bartholomew, hardware; George Miller, clothier, and his father, shoe store; George W. Crouter, dentist and owner of drug store; also manager of the Telephone Co.; incidentally, Charlevoix in 1890 and for many years, had the highest number of phones per capita of any city in the state; Major E. H. Green, lawyer; Mr. Brown of Brown's private bank; Willard A. Smith, editor of the Sentinel; Morris J. Stockman, hardware; O. S. Washburn, machine shop; James Washburne, ship yard, and sons William, A. T. drygoods, and Edward, who for several years was foreman of my Courier office, and possessor of a wonderful voice that covered a reach from low bass to a high tenor, and was a member of the male quartette where I was trying to squeeze along with a baritone that was neither high or low, but did permit me to sing bass in the Congregational choir for two years. (They couldn't find anyone else).

Chas. H. Bellinger, jeweler; Frank Wood, barber; Horace S. Harsha, real estate and a perennial office holder, city clerk most of the time, and a very genial chap of whom I was very fond; Fred Smith, in the bank; J. Milo Eaton, lawyer; Fred W. Mayne, lawyer; Dr. Lewis, and Grand Opera House Manager; Dr. Frank W. LeFevre, who moved down from East Jordan late in 1890 and bought the home and practice of a red-headed doctor whose name I do not recall.

In connection with the last two named, an incident occurred that I did not print, though it would have pleased a lot of people who would have been happy to have witnessed it. I had sold Dr. LeFevre a Columbia bicycle. (I sold them to make money enough to get me a new one every spring). We were taking it out of the crate in front of the doctor's house when O. S. Washburne, who lived next door, came by and told Dr. LeFevre that Dr. Lewis had said something derogatory to him in Harsha's office.

LeFevre got to his feet, white as a sheet, and said – "I'm going there and knock his block off." In five minutes, back he came, grinning like a chessy cat and said to me – "I did it". Later I learned from Harsha that he walked in, asked Lewis if he had said such and such, Lewis said he did, and "Wham". One punch and down went Dr. Lewis and home walked LeFevre.!

WHEN WILL E. HAMPTON moved to Michigan Avenue in 1894, there was only one house other than his own on the lake side. The rest was all "wild, trees and underbrush". This picture was taken in the 1920's.

Sen. Davis reviews legislature's 1978 record

By ROBERT W. DAVIS

The end of the year is traditionally a time when we look back on our past accomplishments and forward to upcoming challenges.

As I review the legislature's record for 1978, I find that solutions were developed to a number of pressing state problems. I also see several areas where action is needed next year.

I would like to devote my column this week to providing you with a brief rundown on the major issues tackled by the legislature during the past 12 months:

A Balanced Budget: We spent the early months of 1978 reviewing the Governor's proposed budget for fiscal 1978-79, finally adopting a balanced budget which meets the needs of our state's citizens. In addition, we were able to set aside an additional $104 million for the Budget Stabilization Fund, thereby significantly improving our capability to continue essential services in the event of an economic downturn in future years.

Public Health Code: Following some four years of study, we approved a new Public Health Code for Michigan which is designed to ensure adequate health care for all our citizens and to curb rising health costs in our state.

Nursing Home Reform: Residents of nursing homes in Michigan will be assured adequate and humane treatment under the Nursing Home Reform Act approved by the legislature this year.

Drug Enforcement: A package of four new laws was passed this year in an effort to crack down on hard drug dealers in Michigan. The measures sharply increase the penalties for drug-related crimes, establish mandatory minimum prison sentences, and restrict parole for those convicted of such crimes. Voter approval of a separate measure we placed on the ballot will allow judges to deny bail for violent and habitual criminals.

Energy Conservation: 1978 was an energy-active year in the Legislature. We established a new Energy Committee in the Senate and approved a number of measures aimed at encouraging energy conservation in our state. Among the new energy-related laws approved were those which provide tax credits to persons who install alternative energy devices, allow utility companies to loan their customers money to insulate their homes and install fuel conservation devices, and establish permanent home heating assistance and home weatherization programs.

Product Liability: Another new law we approved this year is designed to provide a solution to the growing problem of product-related injuries. This new law establishes clear guidelines regarding legal actions covered under product liability claims, while maintaining consumers' rights to sue in cases of legitimate product-related injuries.

Probate Code Revision: One of the final measures to clear the legislature this year was a new Probate Code. The Code updates and streamlines the procedures for probating estates in Michigan, and is aimed at eliminating the frequent delays and heavy costs often associated with this process.

Opea Caucuses: I am also pleased to report that Senate Republicans became the first legislative caucus to open their meetings to the press and public.

As I indicated previously, I still see several areas where action by the legislature is needed. I am particularly hopeful that the new legislature, which takes office in January, will be able to reach agreement on badly-needed revisions of our state's workers' and unemployment compensation systems. In addition, I hope action will soon be forthcoming on revisions of Michigans' no-fault insurance law, implementation of the Headlee Tax Limitation Amendment, and decreased regulation by government.

1927 was eye opening year

As a product of the early days of the 20th Century, I have always considered television a Johnny-come-lately invention, right up there with electric can openers and battery-operated swizzle sticks.

However, I was looking through a little book the other day published by the Merit cigarette people and discovered that television is older than I am, having first been demonstrated publicly April 7, 1927. A newspaper story of the event appeared in the New York Times on the following day and the story was produced in the book "Breakthrough", which chronicles a century of progress through the eyes of the Times.

The article on television recounts how a political speech by Herbert Hoover (he was not yet president) was transmitted from Washington to New York, a distance of 200 miles, by wire.

"As each syllable was heard, the motion of the speaker's lips and his changes of expression were flashed on the screen in the demonstration room of the Bell Telephone Laboratories at 55 Bethune Street," the Times reported.

"When the television pictures were thrown on the screen two by three inches, the likeness was excellent. It was as if a photograph had suddenly come to life and had begun to talk, smile, nod its head and look this way and that. When the screen was enlarged to two by three feet, the results were not so good."

In an accompanying article which appeared in the Times in early 1931, RCA President David Sarnoff predicted that television would be ready for limited public use by the end of 1932. He said it would enter the ear phone stage of radio.

I don't think that prediction came true, because I don't even remember hearing about television until the summer of 1945 when my sister and her new husband returned from a New York honeymoon and reported seeing TV demonstrated at a theater. They thought it was sort of neat.

A few years later a hot-shot instructor in the Journalism Department of Michigan State College let his students in on a secret. A new medium was being developed which was supposed to flash pictures into everybody's parlor. He said it would either be called "television" or "video" – he didn't know which.

I didn't think the man was playing with a full deck.

Then, very quietly and unobstrusively, television antennas began to sprout on the rooftops of Detroit. Bars changed their signs to indicate that they now offered television. And TV stations erected huge billboards telling which hours of the day and night they would be on the air.

Twenty-four hour television – or even 20-hour television – was virtually undreamed of in the early days, simply because the industry didn't have enough events to photograph on a daily basis for more than a few hours of viewing at a time. Early TV addicts got their bellies so full of the Roller Derby they went to bed with their eyes spinning.

It was suddenly fashionable to follow wrestling, since almost every station broadcast wrestling matches ad nauseum every night of the week. The fights were strangely popular among older women. I wish I had a dime for every newsstory I read about 67-pound grandmothers decking burglars and muggers with tricks they learned from Gorgeous George or The Russian Bear. Your average run-of-the-mill housebreaker didn't stand a chance.

By the time I entered the Army in 1951, television was still a novelty. I remember one cold winter night at Camp McCoy, Wisc., when word spread around the barracks that a bar in Black River Falls, some 30 miles distant, had installed a set. A few of us jumped in the car to run over and have a look.

When we arrived at the tavern the crowd inside was hushed; all eyes focused on a little TV screen at the end of the bar. The set was turned on but there was nothing but snow on the screen, punctuated by occasional zigzag patterns.

"What do you think of her?" the bartender asked proudly as he set us up with a pitcher of beer. "Reception is better tonight than usual. I think it has something to do with the weather."

He was right. It was snowing like crazy outside.

Ingredients for a party

There's supposedly an old family recipe for thowing a successful party.

Mix together equal parts of brilliant, stimulating guests, good food and drink. Toss in a piano th key and blend into a bare room void of chairs. Mix for about five hours. Yield: A fantastic evening.

I'm not good at parties, no matter how closely they follow the recipe. I hit for a chair, preferably within arm's length of the chips, and dip and eat myself into a coma.

For me a good party depends on who I meet. I have my own guidelines of what constitutes a perfect evening.

It's a good night for me when I meet another mother whose children are rotten. Deliver me from the woman who sits around all night telling me her son used his paper route money to send her to the Greek Islands, her daughter is happily married with three wonderful children and is running for Governor, and her "baby" was born with capped teeth, makes his bed every morning and doesn't want to drive until he is 35.

It's a great party for me when I sit next to a woman who has been on a diet for three weeks and has lost two pounds in her neck and one pound in her bust. The rest of the measurements remain the same. I don't want to hear from the woman who comes in wearing an Industrial Strength bra and tells me how being endowed makes you look fat.

My evening is made when the woman who comes in wearing a dress like mine – and she's pregnant – spills marinated herring down the front of it and must go home early.

It's a grand night for me when anyone asks for my recipe for anything.

It's a great evening when I don't encounter a woman who wears wet lipstick that stays wet, is trying to gain weight, is into white wine, loves football and wants to know who that "interesting older man is" and it's my husband.

Coming home the other night my husband said, "Did you have a good time?"

"I had a wonderful time," I said. "Louise is unfulfilled as a mother. Brenda doesn't have her screens out yet. Ann is naming ABC Sprots in an alienation suit. Helen told her son they couldn't afford $2,000 at the orthodontist and he would have to develop a pleasant personality, and just as that lecherous Fred asked Mary to dance, her sitter called to tell her Kathy was throwing up."

Now that's a party!

A course in learning how to crash parties

The only sensible reason for guests to walk backward at big parties is if they are exiting, not entering.

Rozanne Weissman is going the wrong way. She lives in Washington, where she teaches a class in, social climbing. This class is called "The Washington Connection." Don't you just love it?

Ms. Weissman's class lasts 3 hours and costs $9. In a recent newspaper interview, she said she has taught 400 students since last January. One of the things she teaches them is how to crash parties. If you're a social climber, you always want to attend parties to which you haven't been invited.

One way you can do this, Ms. Weissman advises, is to hold a glass in your hand and walk backward through the door leading to the party. When you turn around, you'll immediately look as though you've been there awhile.

It has been my experience that a party that can be crashed is a party that sensible people should leave. So it seems worthwhile to point out that the backward approach can be used for sneaky exits as well as sneaky entrances.

For a party to be reasonably crashable, it must be large, with dozens of people wandering around looking for someone they know. The host of such a huge party can't be surprised to see a strange face in his punch bowl. Party guests always come in twos, as though boarding the ark. When he invited so many of his acquaintances, Noah realized some of them would bring along partners he had never seen before.

Also, it has become common for hosts of large parties to extend corporate invitations. That is, the president of the Brown Tool Co. will be invited, but if he's going to be busy that evening, he's asked to pass the invitation on to another representative of his firm.

During the holiday party season, it's possible for a corporate invitation to be passed down through many departments before it lands on the desk of someone who has time to attend the party. Thus the strange face in the punch bowl may have a legitimate right to be there because it belongs to the man who picks up the trash at the Brown Tool Co., or to his date. Which explains how snakes got on the ark.

When parties are this large, there is usually 1 chair for every 100 people. Champagne is served in paper cups, and 6-course dinners are served on toothpicks. It's possible for a man to stand in line at a buffet table for 30 minutes before discovering he is waiting to get into the women's john. Strolling musicians must stroll in place.

This is the type of party that can be crashed with no one hearing a sound. According to Rozanne Weissman, social climbers are eager to attend such parties. Mountain climbers with similar ambitions would plant flags on the peaks of subway stations.

But there are many of you people who prefer smaller parties that can be cleaned up after by rinsing 4 glasses and putting the card table away. When you find yourself at a crashable party, all you want to do is get out. I'll tell you how to do it and I won't charge $9 for the advice because if you were dumb enough to pay it, you'd stay at the party.

Actually, you should wise up before the party begins. Refuse all invitations from people you don't know, especially if the party is being held on an ark. Never substitute for your boss. And if you're not certain what type of party is going on inside, leave your coat in the car.

The coat is important. Many a party escape has failed because the escapee stopped to retrieve his coat from a cluttered cloakroom or a dark bedroom. This costly pause can give the host a chance to demand to know why you're leaving so early and why your boss didn't come himself. Under these circumstances, it's easy to be embarrassed into having another toothpick of roast beef.

Without a coat, it's easier to walk backward through the door while carrying a full toothpick. Walk out on the heels of some nervy guy who is leaving frontward. Your heels will be on his heels.

The host won't realize you're going instead of coming until you're gone, you rascal, you.

'Changing' stands out

In the spirit of retrospection the season inspires, I was trying to decide just the other day, which book of all those digested this past year, I would choose as the most significant. Hesitation: about one minute. One book has never completely left my mind. It is the only one I found myself wanting to take notes on in my personal journal. It is one which I will buy for my collection and probably pick up now and again to refer to for some sort of emotional index. The book is "Changing" by actress Liv Ullman.

As a prologue, the author sets up an objective for her writing this personal account. She wants "to write about love – about being a human being – about loneliness – about being a woman." All those goals are accomplished effectively by a series of memoirs, diary entries and a letter to her young daughter. There is so much sensitivity among these pages. To risk the vulnerability of revealing the side of herself that her stage and film audience might never have known is an admirable endeavor for a woman who is still very much in the midst of public scrutiny.

Liv Ullman writes about love: the love she feels for those who have been close to her over the years, for her daughter Linn, and especially Ingmar Bergman, the man who she claims has changed her life. "She had undergone a change. And when bitterness and hate and despair were gone, she was sure she had experienced love and had been enriched."

She also writes about being a human being, about being sensitive to people whose lives her own had touched and had perhaps changed in its own way.

Liv Ullman tells a story of her loneliness as a child without a father and that continued self-imposed loneliness ensuing as a result of her chosen career.

But most of all, she writes the story of what a woman has meant to one woman. Although involved in endeavors none of us are likely to encounter, her search for personal identity, is in a sense, that of us all regardless of gender or status. We are all, in effect, children seeking security and love and some accurate picture of who we are and where we are going.

"Changing" is a sensitive account of one woman's feelings about her grawth and change as an actress, a mother, a woman and a person. I think I'd like very much to know Liv Ullman. Someone who has enough depth and compassion to write as she does and still is able to possess the objectivity about life to draw a conclusion like the following must be quite a woman.

"No one owns anyone. Together we have each other and nature and time. It is as simple as that."

A one newspaper town

People may not realize it, but I think we are fortunate to have two financially solvent daily newspapers in Detroit.

In most cities, one newspaper usually controls a large slice of the advertising pie thus eliminating the competition. And, after all, it's the advertising dollar which makes or breaks a paper.

It appears Washington will be the next one newspaper town. Reportedly, the Washington Star has been suffering losses of up to $1 million a month. In order to continue publishing, the Star's management has asked the unions to renegotiate all outstanding contracts. The newspaper has contracts with 11 different unions. It is believed the Star is asking some employees to accept a five year wage freeze. That's how severe the crisis is.

The paper is owned by Time Inc., which has pumped $4 million into the paper since purchasing it from a Texas banker, Joseph Allbritton. Reportedly, if Time Inc. can get assurances from the unions that there will be no labor strife for the next five years it is willing to invest another $60 million in the revitalization the paper, which has seen its advertising revenue and circulation slip drastically in recent years.

In retrospect, the situation is rather ironic. For years the Star was Washington's dominant newspaper. It was the Post which had to scrap for the market. Now the roles are reversed.

Although the newspaper profession is very competitive, there exists a comradery between journalists. It is no different in Washington. Post columnist David Broder had this to say about the Star:

"The loss of the Star would be a calamity, not just for this profession and this city but for the country.

"The notion of this nation's capital having only one newspaper – even as good a one as the people in this building would like to think the Post is – is appalling to anyone who believes in the free market of ideas.

"Washingtonians have available on their newsstands each day a variety of first-rate newspapers. Quality papers are trucked in from Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York, and flown in from cities as distant as Atlanta, Boston, Chicago and even Los Angeles.

"But, rich as those newspapers are in their reportorial resources, it is still the Star that helps set the competitive standard in many respects.

"Without the Star, there would be no full-scale, locally drawn portrait of the complex, elusive reality called Washington to compare with the likeness we try each day to sketch.

"The beat New Year's present this city could receive would be a reprieve for the Star."

Well said. Let's hope our two Detroit papers can continue to co-exist.

Commission raises moorage fees

The Michigan State Waterways Commission has voted to raise the transient moorage fees charged at harbors under the commission's jurisdiction for the 1979 boating season.

According to City Manager Norm Gaffney, Charlevoix is under the commission's jurisdiction.

The proposed fees per 24 hour period are:

Boats less than 20 feet in length, $2.75; boats 20 feet and over but less than 30 feet in length, $5.50; boats 30 feet and over but less than 40 feet in length, $8; boats 40 feet and over but less than 50 feet in length, $10.75; boats 50 feet in length and over but less than 60 feet in length, $13.50; and boats 60 feet and over in length, $18.25.

The commission also voted to raise the rate per connection of boat sewage pump-out service to $2.75, which includes a tank flushing.

According to Keith Wilson, chief of the waterways division, the rates are effective immediately and will continue "until further notice."

In 1978 Charlevoix operated on two fee schedules – one schedule from May 1-15 and from the day after Labor Day until Sept. 30 and the other from May 15 - Labor Day.

The 1978 rates from May 1-15 and from the day after Labor Day until Sept. 30 were: $1.25 for boats less than 20 feet; $2.25 for boats 20 feet and over but less than 30 feet; $3.50 for boats 30 feet and over but less than 40 feet; $4.50 for boats 40 feet and over but less than 50 feet; $5.75 for boats 50 feet and over but less than 60 feet; and $7.75 for boats 60 feet and over.

The rates between May 15 and Labor Day were: $3 for boats less than 20 feet in length, $5.50 for boats between 20 and 30 feet, $8 for boats between 30 and 40 feet, $11 for boats between 40 and 50 feet, and $13 for boats between 50 and 60 feet and $18 for boats over 60 feet.

The fee for boat sewage pump-out service was $2.

Ironton ferry closed...

The Ironton Ferry across the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix stopped operation for the season last week.

The ferry will resume operation when weather permits, probably some time in April.

Last year the ferry was out of the water for approximately seven months due to difficulties in installing a new engine.

...and so is Beaver Islander

The Beaver Islander, the 96 foot ferry that operates between the mainland at Charlevoix and Beaver Island, has made its last trip of the season, according to Lawrence McDonough, manager of the Beaver Island Boat Co.

The ferry made its last trip on Wednesday. McDonough said the ferry did not need to make anymore trips this season because supplies are already on the island.

The Beaver Islander made 299 trips to the island this year.

Volleyball invitational Saturday

The Charlevoix High School girls volleyball team, coached by Mary Gengle, will launch its 1979 court season Saturday with a invitational double elimination tournament to be held here.

The tourney will open with a rules meeting at 8:30 a.m. with play at two courts scheduled to begin at 9 a.m.

Participating in the post-holiday tournament will be Petoskey, Boyne City, St. Ignace, Cheboygan and Charlevoix of the Michigan-Huron Shores League, East Jordan, Elk Rapids and Leland, defending Class D state champions.

The tournament will feature two games per hour with a lunch break between 12 and 12:30 p.m.

Charlevoix and East Jordan will clash on one court and Petoskey and Elk Rapids on the second court at 9 a.m. followed by Boyne City vs Cheboygan and St. Ignace vs Leland at 10 p.m.

Competition will begin in the loser's bracket at 11 a.m. and, after a lunch break, action will begin in the winner's bracket at 12:30 p.m. Games will continue every hour on the half-hour until the finals at 4:30 p.m. If another play-off game is needed, it will be played at 5:30 p.m. Miss Gengle said.

Tournament officials will be Barb Miller and Cheryl Thayer of Charlevoix and Sherrie Dostader and Celeste Fryzynski of Petoskey.

Charlevoix will open its league schedule on Jan. 10 when the teams, the JV and Varsity squads, travel to Gaylord.

Returning veterans from last season are Chris Lehman, Karen Lamoreaux, and Kris Fiedler, seniors, and Carolyn Loper, a junior. Alternates are juniors Dori Olach and Tami Noirot.

Other candidates for the squad are Sherrie Selissen, a senior who is out for the sport for the first time; juniors Marie Buday, Aimee Elzinga, Kim Mitchell, Debbie Resch and Janet VanWieren who have had experience on the junior varsity squad; three sophomores also up from JV ranks, Mel Kerridge, Amy Kroll and Teresa Noirot along with Melinda Klooster, a sophomore who is out for the first time.

The team has a 15-game schedule which includes two games with all league teams plus games with other area non league teams.

Tennis tourney scheduled

The Junior Tennis Committee of the Little Traverse Racquet Club in Petoskey is sponsoring a junior and adult open tennis tournament Jan. 13-14.

This U.S.T.A. sanctioned tournament includes divisions for men's and women's singles and doubles, men's singles 35 and over, and boy's and girl's single 14-17 and 18 and over.

Entries may be obtained at the Little Traverse Racquet Club, Harbor-Petoskey Road (347-6450).

Area cagers off to good start

Ellsworth's Sue Elzinga and Central Lake's Julie Vincent are having banner seasons thus far for the Lake Superior State women's basketball team.

Elzinga is averaging 12 points per game, but more importantly the sophomore center is getting over 13 rebounds a game. She has led the Lakers in rebounding in four of the first five games. She had a high of 20 rebounds against Michigan Tech.

Vincent is averaging 14.2 points per game. The freshman forward is grabbing over eight rebounds a contest. Vincent had 21 points against Muskegon Community College.

Lake Superior is 4-1 on the season.

X-country ski race planned

BOYNE CITY – A cross-country ski race which runs up and down a former ski hill is being planned for Saturday, Jan. 27 in Boyne City.

The 10-Kilometer (6.2-mile) race will start and finish at the base of Avalanche, a former downhill ski area. The race is being called the Avalanche Ski Classic.

The race course will take a gradual climb up the side of the hill. At the top, the course follows a ridge overlooking Boyne City and Lake Charlevoix, then goes down the hill, through woods and fields and back to the starting point.

"The view from the top of Avalanche is spectacular," said race committee chairman Gary Schafer. "I think this might be one of the most beautiful ski trails in the state."

Schafer expects 100 to 200 skiers from all over the Midwest to participate in the race.

Race committee members feel the 10 kilometer race is long enough to provide a challenge to expert skiers, yet it is short enough to be completed by average skiers.

Participants will be divided according to age, sex and skiing proficiency. Racer and tourer classes have been established for adults, and a junior class will include youngsters in age groups of 9-under, 10-13, and 14-17.

Souvenir race T-shirts will be given to all who enter the race, and prizes will be awarded to winners in 19 different classes.

Entry fee for the race will be $6 from now through Jan. 15. From Jan. 16 through race day, Jan. 27, the fee will be $10.

The Dilworth Restaurant will be race headquarters – from check-in in the morning through the awards ceremony and partying during the evening.

The race is being sponsored by the City of Boyne City, The Charlevoix County Press, Schafer's Store, and the Dilworth Restaurant.

For entry forms, write the Avalanche Ski Classic, P.O. Box 232, Boyne City MI 49712

Dr. Henderson leads drive to wipe out smallpox

By WILLIAM J. O'NEILL
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — When Dr. Donald A. Henderson agreed to head a United Nations drive to wipe out smallpox, a colleague warned him bluntly, "You don't stand a chance."

Three years later, when a massive campaign had rid several countries of the dread disease, a professor from England cautioned him: "Bear in mind that Asia is the ancient home of smallpox. Eradication in South America or Africa is one thing; Asia is quite impossible."

Yet in just a decade the disease that had scourged humanity for thousands of years apparently has been vanquished. The last known smallpox on earth is frozen in a few glass vials held in a dozen laboratories around the world.

KEPT FOR AN EMERGENCY

The closely guarded virus is being stored so that it can be used to produce vaccine if the disease should reappear.

In the December National Geographic, Dr. Henderson, dean of the School of Hygiene and Public Health at the Johns Hopkins University, recalls the day last April that he received word his efforts had been successful.

"The telegram from Nairobi, Kenya," he writes, "lay on my desk. 'Search complete. No cases discovered. Ali Maow Maalin is world's last known smallpox case.'"

Maalin, a cook in Somalia, contracted smallpox in October, 1977. He was quarantined and health workers vaccinated 161 people who had been in contact with him. Maalin lived, but he wasn't the lost victim of the disease.

Last September a British medical photographer, Janet Parker, died of smallpox as the result of a laboratory accident. Her mother also became ill, but survived. There have been no known cases of smallpox since then.

3,000-YEAR-OLD CASE

The earliest confirmed smallpox fatality may be Ramses V of Egypt. Examination of his mummy has revealed scars on his face that led experts to conclude smallpox probably killed him about 1160 B.C.

In the centuries separating the pharaoh and the photographer, untold millions succumbed to the disease. Those it didn't kill were permanently scarred, sometimes blinded. The ravages of smallpox repeatedly altered history.

"Brought by Cortes to the New World, it eventually killed an estimated 3.5 million Indians and contributed to the collapse of the Inca and Aztec civilizations," Dr. Henderson writes. "Decimation of North American Indians paved the way for European settlement."

Smallpox is transmitted in tiny droplets expelled from the mouth and nose. A victim develops pain and fever within two weeks, then the rash. No treatment exists, and in the past 20 to 30 percent of those afflicted with the severe Asian strain died.

In 1796 Dr. Edward Jenner found that milkmaids in England who caught a mild infection called cowpox never got smallpox. He used cowpox to develop the world's first vaccine.

Compulsory vaccination rid many nations of the disease by the 1940s. In 1959 the World Health Organization (WHO) launched a drive to wipe out smallpox entirely. It failed, but the idea was not dropped.

"Despite the enormity of the task," Dr. Henderson says, "the nature of smallpox gave grounds for optimism. Unlike many diseases, smallpox virus has no known reservoir other than man."

Since one person seldom infects more than five others, the disease spreads slowly — and its trail is easily followed by the scarred faces of survivors.

SECOND ASSAULT

WHO tried again in 1967, under Dr. Henderson's direction.

"That year 131,000 cases were reported," he recalls. "We now estimate there were actually 10 to 15 million cases in 44 countries."

To make the enormous task easier, Wyeth Laboratories designed a two-tined needle that could be sterilized and reused. When dipped in vaccine, the tines captured enough fluid between them for a vaccination to be applied with 15 quick jabs to the arm.

Plane crash top story in 1978 at Big Mac

The Mackinac Bridge Annual summary of events, both routine and unusual, is generally highlighted by a story with a happy ending such as a left-behind spouse or child or trailer being reunited; or a wallet lost in a snowbank being found several weeks later and so on.

Unfortunately 1978 proved to be the exception in that a tragedy was the most unusual occurrence on the bridge. A private plane carrying three Marine reserve officers crashed into a suspender, one of the 180 pair of vertical 2½ inch thick steel ropes that are hung from the cable to hold up the bridge deck.

The accident occurred on Sunday, Sept. 10. The point of impact was about 40 feet above the road and 120 feet south of the north tower. The plane, apparently lost in a dense fog, was traveling from east to west and continued on over the roadway, falling into the Straits about 500 feet northwest of the tower.

Fortunately, only small fragments of the plane landed on the bridge deck. The tragedy could have been even more horrible had the plane landed on the deck since traffic that day was fairly heavy.

With a few exceptions, unusual occurrences were fairly routine and average. Collector-patrolmen assisted 52 motorists with flat tires, about 25 less than average, and 71 who had run out of gas. There were 327 vehicles with mechanical trouble that needed help, substantially more than the average over the past 21 years of bridge operation.

There were seven collisions on the bridge and seven on the plaza. There were also four vehicle fires and five personal injury accidents. The exceptionally strong winds that come barreling down the Straits are usually the cause of a lot of bridge activity, but there were no overturned house trailers in either 1977 or 1978. However, three campers were blown off pickups, 15 boats were separated from cartops and two boat trailers overturned.

Frank Supernaw

Funeral services for Frank Supernaw, 90, who died unexpectedly at his home Thursday were held Saturday at St. Mary's church. The Rev. R. Dale Magoon officiated. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The Rosary was recited at the Winchester Funeral Home Friday evening.

Born near Atwood in Banks township, Antrim county, Aug. 20, 1888, Mr. Supernaw had resided there until moving to a farm in Charlevoix township in 1920. In 1925 the Belvedere Club purchased the farm and adjacent properties and constructed the Belvedere Golf Course. He became the greenskeeper in charge of maintenance of the course, a position he held until he retired in 1965. He later lived on a farm in Marion township until moving to his present home in 1975. For many years he had raised, trained and traded horses, selling the last of them when he was 82 years of age. He was a member of St. Mary's church.

Surviving are his wife, the former Alice Glar, whom he married Nov. 11, 1961; two sons, Rex F. of Charlevoix and Ruel B. (Charles) of Rochester; two daughters, Mrs. Ruby Tillotson of Petoskey and Mrs. Ralph (Renabel) Shapton of Charlevoix; 14 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

The family suggests memorials to St. Mary's Church or the Michigan Heart Association.

Hazel Genett

Funeral services for Mrs. Hazel L. Genett, 89, of Bellaire, were held Friday at 2 p.m. at the Community United Methodist Church in Bellaire. Rev. Garth Smith will officiate and interment will be in Lakeview Cemetery, Bellaire.

Mrs. Genett died Dec. 27 at Munson Medical Center in Traverse City, following a long illness.

She was born in Charlevoix County on March 17, 1889, the daughter of Charles H. and Mary (Coleman) Stevens and moved to Bellaire in 1919.

On June 12, 1912, she married Reed Genett who preceded her in death on Sept. 30, 1971.

Mrs. Genett was a school teacher for 14 years, teaching in Atwood, Bellaire and Charlevoix County.

She was a member of the W.C.T.U.; a life member and past president of the United Methodist Women; past president of the Ladies Literary Club and a member of the Community United Methodist Church in Bellaire.

Survivors include one brother, Charles H. Stevens of Charlevoix; six nieces and five nephews.

The family suggests anyone wishing to honor the memory of Mrs. Genett may do so by contributing in her name to the Meadowbrook Hospital or the Community United Methodist Church.

Clerk

...Marybeth Wallick

Marybeth Wallick has been librarian at the Charlevoix Public Library for the last six and a half years. This week the Courier talks with her about the library and the many services it offers.

COURIER: Who runs the library?

WALLICK: The Charlevoix Public School System, the Charlevoix Board of Education, really.

COURIER: What is your budget, and where does the money come from?

WALLICK: The proposed 1978-1979 budget is about $47,000. The money comes from a four-tenths of a mill tax levy from the school district, down from five-tenths of a mill last year, which will amount to about $38,400; penal fines in the amount of $7,389; and state aid in the amount of $1,300.

COURIER: Who else works in the library?

WALLICK: Louise Everts is assistant librarian, Cathy Dubey is a part-time typist and cataloger, and Lois Williams is our cleaning lady.

COURIER: Are you going to buy anything special this year?

WALLICK: We're buying some new audio-visual equipment – a 35 mm projector, an overhead projector, an eight mm. projector, and another 16 mm. projector.

COURIER: Who will be able to use this equipment?

WALLICK: The general public – private individuals, clubs, etc. We have never charged for the use of projectors, but we may have to change that policy.

COURIER: We'll talk about books later. What other services do you offer?

WALLICK: We have a coin-operated copier on which people can copy whole pages of books. We joined the Northland Library Cooperative in Alpena, and through them we have a referral service to the state library. They will look up information for our readers and copy it. They've done as much as whole magazine articles for us. We also get a 16 mm. film service through Northland. Civic organizations can rent films from a catalog.

We have a record library from which people can take out records. The most popular ones are children's and classical. We can get cassettes and Braille books for the blind and large print publications for the physically handicapped. One of our friends has donated a subscription to the Reader's Digest in large print.

For those researching Charlevoix history, or who just like old pictures, we have Bob Miles' seven volume collection of pictures of old Charlevoix. It is complete in a file cabinet made of shipwreck material, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Miles and Mr. and Mrs. William Gartner of the Great Lakes Shipwreck Company, who made the cabinet.

COURIER: How many books do you have in the library?

WALLICK: Nineteen thousand, three hundred and sixty-eight.

COURIER: What type of books are read most?

WALLICK: Fiction, both new and old. Some of the new fiction is kind of rough, so some of the women are leery of it and are reading the old-timers like Jean Stratton Porter. Most men like non-fiction – political, sports figures, westerns, things like that. Watergate was a popular subject but it's died out. Mysteries are big with both men and women. People don't want to read what's relevant, they want escape books. We don't have so many science fiction fans any more, but UFO's are still big.

Kids like fiction more than non-fiction. Animal stories are popular, stories about horses and dogs. We have quite a few new ones. Some kids stop by every day on their way home from school, and some mothers pick up books for their children. High school kids use the reference books and take out books for book reports. Others use the library for studying.

We just got a grant of $300 through the Northland Library to buy reference books. We're getting a number of government publications with the money, things like the United States Statistical Abstract.

Northland Library will also secure books requested by our readers which we don't have.

COURIER: What about magazines?

WALLICK: We take 68 or 70 magazines, including news, women's, health, and parents publications, among others. We also take several newspapers – the Wall Street Journal, Sunday New York Times, Christian Science Monitor, Petoskey News-Review, Charlevoix Courier, etc.

COURIER: What do you have in your Michigan Room?

WALLICK: Material on Michigan history. We have the Earl Babst collection, which is made up of books on early Michigan history, and many other books and pamphlets of historical interest. One of the more interesting ones is Rose Nettleton's collection of clippings from old Charlevoix newspapers.

COURIER: Do you have any old newspapers?

WALLICK: We have the Charlevoix Journal from 1885 to 1886. We have the Courier from 1908 to the present. Those from 1908 to 1966 are on micro-film and the rest are print copies. We hope to get reader printer within the year through a Northland Library grant.

COURIER: Where did your objects of art come from?

WALLICK: We have Rosa Nettleton's collection of about 120 dolls showing fashions from Adam to 1940. Nathan Cummings donated much of the sculpture, including the piece at the entrance of the building. Earl Young did the painting of "Roses" in 1962. It's one of my favorites. The model ship was made by prisoners at Alcatraz. It's a model of a boat that sailed between San Francisco and Alcatraz Island. It was given to the brother of Mrs. Robert Wilson of Ironton when he retired as superintendent of federal prisons. Mrs. Wilson gave it to us.

COURIER: You have here a list of books given as memorials. How does that work?

WALLICK: People may give us an actual book or books or money with which to buy books in memory of deceased persons. Then we list the names of the donor, the person in whose memory the book or books were given, and the names of the books.

COURIER: When was the library building constructed?

WALLICK: In 1967, on land donated by Dr. Saltonstall. It has two levels. The lower level is being used at the present time for meetings by two Brownie troops and one Boy Scout troop. We also have our old magazines and newspapers down there.

COURIER: How long have you been librarian?

WALLICK: For six and a half years. I came here from Fenton, where I was the middle school librarian.

COURIER: Are you a local girl?

WALLICK: Partly. I was born in Holland and graduated from high school in Ellsworth. I went to Central Michigan and majored in political science and minored in library science and history. I earned a teacher's certificate in political science and history and a bachelor of arts degree.

COURIER: Where do you live, and what do you do in your spare time?

WALLICK: I live in Ellsworth. I enjoy reading, walking, jogging, crocheting, sewing, and swimming.

COURIER: Anything else you want to say?

WALLICK: We have for sale lithographs of "Early Charlevoix and Surroundings." They're twenty-eight and a half by twenty-three inches and cost $5. The money we get from them will go to help defray the cost of getting our old Charlevoix Sentinels on microfilm.

COURIER: One other question. When is the library open?

WALLICK: From 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursdays, from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Fridays, and from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturdays.

Minimum wage increases to $2.90 an hour

Workers covered under the state's minimum wage law received a 25-percent hourly raise Jan. 1.

The increase from $2.65 to $2.90 an hour coincides with an identical change in the federal minimum wage which also went into effect that day.

The minimum wage law also calls for increases to $3.10 an hour on Jan. 1, 1980 and $3.35 on Jan. 1, 1981.

State Labor Director Pat Babcock said employers who have four or more employees between the ages of 18 and 65 at any one time during the calendar year are covered by the state minimum wage law.

In April, 1979, minimum wage coverage will be reduced to cover employers with two or more employees 18 years or older.

Minors 16 and 17 years old employed in restaurants and stores where alcohol is sold or consumed on the premises will also receive the increase, he said. However, 50 percent of the gross receipts of these establishments must come from the sale of food or other goods.

Michigan farm workers also will receive the new hourly rate. A scale of piece-work rates for harvesting certain crops – equivalent to scheduled increases in the hourly rate – is expected to be established in time for the spring harvest.

Overtime pay requirements are unchanged. After 40 hours, overtime compensation at one and one-half times the regular rate is required.

A person working at minimum wage, 40 hours a week for 50 weeks, will get a $500 raise for a yearly income of $5,800.

Judge Fershee appointed to prison committee

Judge David Fershee

Judge David W. Fershee, recently elected to a full term as district judge for Charlevoix and Emmet counties, has been appointed to the Committee on Prisons and Corrections of the Michigan State Bar Association. The appointment was announced by Leo A Farhat, president of the association.

The committee is concerned with the operation of the criminal justice system as it affects incarceration of offenders before and after trial; the functioning of jails and prisons; and post prison repercussions on ex-convicts. The members are drawn from law enforcement and social service agencies as well as from the bar association.

Judge Fershee said he looks forward to providing input to the committee from his judicial experience and also hopes to expand his own awareness of current issues as they relate to prisons and corrections.

The judge, who was originally appointed to the bench by Gov. Milliken in 1975, is also a member of the Legislative Committee of the District Judge's Association. This committee recently worked with the state legislature in drafting legislation to decriminalize traffic violations. The legislation is expected to become law in late 1979.

Area socked by snow shower

A winter snow shower has dumped over two feet of "dry, fluffy" snow on Charlevoix in the past week.

According to officials at the Charlevoix Sewage Treatment Plant, 27.2 inches of snow has fallen since last Monday, bringing the season's total to 76 inches, which is almost as much as Charlevoix received all of last year – in spite of the Blizzard of '78.

The heavy snowfall has been havoc to motorists. Twice last week U.S 31 was closed, primarily because of poor visibility.

Saturday afternoon four people were injured when they were struck by a car on U.S. 31 near Norwood. The four were attempting to push a van out of a ditch when they were hit, the sheriff's department reported.

Injured were: Richard Schnackenberg, 40; Randy Schnackenberg, 15; Melvin Gillis, 37; and David Holborn, 27.

The Schnackenbergs are in fair condition at the Charlevoix Area Hospital. Richard has one broken leg while his son, Randy, has two broken legs among other fractures. Gillis is also in fair condition. He, too, has a broken leg and is being treated at the Little Traverse Division of Northern Michigan Hospitals. Holborn was treated and released at the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

There have been several other accidents, but most have been minor.

Slippery roads did help police catch four suspects accused in the armed robbery early Sunday morning at the Clark Oil and Refinery Co. station on U.S. 31.

The suspects led police on a high-speed chase before their car slid into a snowbank near Acme. The four occupants were taken into custody. Two Sault Ste. Marie men were returned to Charlevoix for arraignment on charges of armed robbery. Two juveniles in the car were turned over to Chippewa County juvenile authorities. Police said between $50 and $60 in cash was taken from the Clark station.

Bad road conditions also extended the holiday vacation for students in the Charlevoix Public School System. School was cancelled on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Students were expected to return to classes on Wednesday following the holiday recess. St. Mary's was also closed.

There has been a rumor that Charlevoix County Road Commission workers are planning to strike later this month, but both sides deny the rumor. Workers are represented by Teamsters Local 214. The union has been negotiating on a new contract since July, when the previous contract expired.

According to a Teamsters spokesman, a fact-finder is presently hearing testimony from both sides and will make a recommendation in a couple weeks. The recommendation is not binding and can be used as the subject for further negotiations, he said.

Meanwhile, city officials have announced they will enforce a new state law that prohibits businesses and citizens from dumping snow on roadways and shoulders or piling it so high at driveway entrances that it obstructs the vision of motorists.

Under the law, enacted last spring, snow, ice or slush may not be removed from a driveway or other property and placed across a roadway or its shoulders. Snow piled near a driveway entrance must not obstruct the view of a motorist entering the roadway.

Pushing snow from a driveway to the opposite side of the road is also prohibited.

Violation of the new law is a misdemeanor. Both property owners and persons hired to remove snow are responsible for any illegal snow removal activities.

According to City Manager Norm Gaffney, large businesses may find it necessary to truck snow from their parking lots.

Gaffney also announced that Mt. McSauba is in operation and that a new record has already been established for most skiers in a day.

State inspectors recently gave the city an OK on the renovation project at Mt. McSauba, which included a new lighting system.

WHY WAS THERE NO SAND?

Where is the city of Charlevoix Street Department, asleep or don't they work on weekends?

Doesn't take an accident (coming down the Bridge Street Hill between Hurlbut and Antrim Streets) and the City Police to summon the sander?

Evidently this seems to be the case as of January 6, 1979 late afternoon. My car slid around, stopped by a snowbank, and was hit by the person sliding into me that was behind me due to the slippery road conditions. Both drivers, driving with extreme caution, in order to avoid such an accident and to no avail. If this hill had been properly sanded the accident, no doubt, would not have taken place.

I got out of my car to see what the dainages were and fell flat on my side due to the hills condition. Incidentally, my boots were made to be worn in ice, snow and such winter conditions.

Approximately one hour or so after the accident, I noticed the hill was no longer an icy glare, but looked more like a sand dune. Why can't it be sanded more often before accidents occur as a means to prevent them?

"A Very Inconvenienced City Resident and Motorist"

Whitley's resignation accepted

The Charlevoix Common Council officially accepted the resignation of 2nd Ward Councilman Ivan Whitley at its workshop meeting Monday night. But, there is the possibility Whitley may be back on council April 1.

Nearly three weeks ago Whitley told council he was resigning for the remainder of his present term, which expires March 31. Whitley asked, however, that he be given the prerogative to return to council April 1 when a new two year term, to which he was elected in the fall takes effect. Whitley cited health and business reasons for his decision.

"I don't think we have any choice but to accept the resignation," Mayor Sam Supernaw said at the workshop session. Council concurred.

City Attorney Mike Gibbons said he contacted attorneys in Kalamazoo, who helped draft the City Charter, about the Whitley case, and was told that Whitley can vacate his council position now and still return April 1 to start his new two year term.

"It's going to be awfully difficult to find someone to serve on the council for only two months," lamented Supernaw.

But one name that has popped up in preliminary discussions is Chuck Scherping. The 2nd Ward resident was in attendance at Monday night's workshop meeting and told council that he would consider it.

If, in fact, Scherping agrees to replace Whitley and no other names are offered, council will probably make it official at its next meeting. There is the possibility, too, that Whitley may decide not to return to council April 1. Therefore, it's conceivable that Whitley's replacement may be on council until March 31, 1981.

Planners deny sign variance

The Charlevoix Planning Commission will recommend to the Charlevoix Common Council that 7-11 not be granted a variance for the size of its sign.

7-11, which is proposing to open a store in the former Puff's Home Center building on Bridge Street, is seeking a varinnce so it can erect a sign of 40 square feet. Under the ordinance, a sign of 36 square feet is maximum.

The planning commission was almost unanimous in its recommendation for denial. Of the six commission members present, only one, Ken Staley, did not vote in favor of the denial. Staley abstained.

Dr. David Strawbridge, commission chairman, told the Courier if 7-11 was granted a variance it could set a precedent.

"What would we tell other store owners on Bridge Street if they came to us and asked for larger signs?" he said.

Dr. Strawbridge said practically all the merchants on Bridge Street – with the exception of some chain stores and gas stations – meet the present sign requirements.

According to Gene Steele of Charlevoix Properties, 7-11 has two stock signs – 40 and 80 square feet – for its stores throughout the country.

Dr. Strawbridge said the case is similar to a request made by Family Federal Savings recently. Family Federal originally asked for a variance to allow for a sign with 96 square feet. After that was rejected, the company sought approval on a sign of 48 square feet. That, too, was denied.

"It was the same argument," Dr. Strawbridge said. "A hardship existed because only two sign sizes were made."

Family Federal Savings eventually erected a sign to meet the ordinance.

Council is expected to act on the matter at its meeting Monday night.

The application for the variance was submitted by Dick Donaldson who owns the property on Bridge Street.

Real Estate
by Jim Thomas
The financially responsible buyer, possibly an executive coming in from out of town, will steer clear of the fast talker type of broker. Choose a reliable, conservative agent, someone who won't forget for a moment that he represents you, and one that won't try to pressure you into a quick sale at a lower price than the house deserves, for the sake of a fast commission. The kind of listing arrangement you sign with your broker can make a lot of difference. It is wise to make a careful choice, and have a mutually satisfactory understanding.
As a seller, it is often necessary to have a lawyer approve any contract of sale between you and a buyer.
Whether you are buying or selling, it is important that you select a real estate broker in whom you have confidence, so rely on the staff at THOMAS REAL ESTATE, 100 Pine River Lane, 547 4494. We are the professionals who know the community, know the real estate market and have the experience in handling the complete transaction to your satisfaction. Cribbage tourney starts

Despite the inclement weather last Thursday, cribbage players braved the storm for the opening night of play at the 45th annual Odd Fellows-Masons cribbage tournament held at the American Legion post home. Sims Baker, secretary, reports.

This week's tournament will be held at the Masonic Temple at 8 p.m. Thursday.

The defending champions, the Odd Fellows went ahead by 160 points after one night of play. Four tables were in action.

John LaRue posted 947 points for the Odd Fellows and Ronald Geer 938 for the Masons.

All cribbage players in the area are invited to play in the 10-week tournament sponsored by the two fraternal organizations.

Local ski area cited

Cross country skiing in the special quiet area for skiers in Fisherman's Island State Park (formerly the Bell's Bay area) is cited in Automobile Club of Michigan's January Michigan Living/Motor News magazine.

An article entitled, "The Magic Silence of Cross Country Skiing" also discusses the various types of cross country skis.

THIS BUILDING, on the site of the present Irish Boat Works housed the Charlevoix Sugar Manufacturing Company. The company was organized in 1903 for the purpose of making beet sugar. However, it was never very successful financially and in 1911 the company moved to Ohio. The building was abandoned for many years and used by local children as a playground for "Cowboy and Indian" wars, "stump the leader", and other games, as well as roller skating, according to local historian Bob Miles. Chimney sweepers thrive as wood burning becomes popular in the north

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

Standing precariously atop a chimney when the wind chill factor is 35 below zero (fahrenheit), hardly seems a mystical undertaking, but Mark Loding will argue the point.

"In Europe chimney sweeps are considered good luck," the diminutive Horton Bay man said, his angular face lighting up.

"People always wave to chimney sweeps over there. Girls try to kiss them for luck, and they are invited to weddings to put soot on the bride's forehead."

Mark said he is not angling for kisses or wedding invitations, and his wife, Charlevoix Middle School art teacher, Roxie, punctuated his musings with a laugh.

Last week while everyone else was snowed in, huddled around fireplaces and wood stoves, Mark, with Roxie substituting for his snowed-in assistant, were out making the rounds of customers whose fires have been doing double time against the howling winds.

Stove pipe hat perched on his head, clad in black, Mark unloaded an enormous vacuum cleaner, long handled brushes, tool boxes and tarpolins from the back of his camper.

With his puckish smile and thin face framed in long dark hair, Mark has an uncanny resemblance to magician Doug Henning. Like his European counterparts he is a magnet for children.

As he spread the tarp on the floor in front of the fireplace Mark reveals that mysticism aside he is well versed on his business.

"I'd been thinking about becoming a chimney sweep for a long time, when I read about a school in Mother Earth News," he explained.

Until last April Mark had been Boyne City assistant treasurer.

"In April I went back to Stowe, Vermont, to attend the school run by the Black Magic Chimney Sweeps," he says, in between shovel fulls of ashes, he carefully removes from the bed of the fireplace.

"Believe it or not, it was really intensive. We spent three days cleaning every kind of chimney and attending lectures by experts."

One of the experts was a physics professor, Jay Shelton, author of the Wood Burners Encyclopedia.

"All of the manufacturers of wood stoves are making outrageous claims about what they can do. Shelton discussed the efficiency of stoves and the physics of combustion."

Sharing this sort of information is part of a chimney sweep's work, Loding believes.

As he looked up the chimney, he observed, "The creosote build up in a fireplace will be lower than in a wood stove, because of the heat going up the chimney keeping the chimney hot.

"Creosote is formed as flue gasses cool below their dew point.

"The creosote build up on the new efficient air-tight wood stoves can be tremendous. I've seen a wood stove chimney plug up within a month.

"People are just learning about these new stoves. It can be very dangerous to have one that is too big for your purpose, because the more you close it down, the cooler the chimney, then creosote begins to build."

Loding carefully closed the damper on the fireplace. He began piling on clothes for the ascent to the roof.

"Creosote is the culprit. Once it ignites it can burn at 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit, which is more than even the best chimney can withstand.

"Green wood creates more creosote than dry wood. But chimney fires usually start when someone tosses paper into the fire. The paper flies up the chimney and sets the creosote on fire."

All conversation ceased on the roof. Selecting the proper sized brush for the particular chimney from a golf bag thrown over his shoulder, he began scraping the sides of the flue. As he cleaned, from top to bottom, he added lengths of flexible rod.

Roxie stayed inside, vacuum at the ready, to stop any errant soot from escaping into the house.

The team moved their attention to a wood stove chimney – Mark on the roof, Roxie below. Then a sooty Mark descended.

Donning respirator, aviator's helmet and goggles Mark perched himself inside the fireplace, removed the damper and was showered with the accumulated creosote and grime he had loosened from above.

"It is essential to clean behind the damper on the smoke shelf," he explained later. "Often people don't realize that fire can start right there from all the creosote accumulated."

He scraped and brushed from inside, emerging an even more sooty figure of former self.

Loding's business, Mystic Chimney Sweeps, is a partnership with Keith Fitzpatrick Jr., also n Boyne City.

Loding predicts that their business, already thriving, will have to expand as wood burning increases and people realize its potential dangers.

"I recently met a lady from Czechoslovakio who told nie the law there requires monthly chimney sweeping. In England chimney fires are illegal so people rely on chimney sweeps."

As he vacuumed soot and dust from his clothes, standing on the tarp by the fireplace, he reflected.

"One reason I like this work is because I feel so honest. People never look up their chimneys, I can show them what's there."

Chimney sweeping is dirty work - just ask Mark Loding of Horton Bay

Courier wins Blue Ribbon

The Charlevoix Courier has received a Blue Ribbon award from the National Newspaper Foundation, Peter Dragon, president of the foundation, said.

The Courier has won a Blue Ribbon award each year since 1975.

According to Dragon, 165 newspapers met the required standards and have achieved Blue Ribbon status. More than 250 entries were received by the foundation from all 50 states.

To be considered for the Blue Ribbon title, publishers were required to submit a self-evaluation critique of their paper, along with three specific issues of the newspaper. A panel of judges then evaluated the entries on the basis of 25 criteria, which measured the newspaper's service to the community against a fixed standard. Publishers whose newspapers are recognized for their overall excellence participated in the judging.

"The number of first-rate community newspapers is continuing to increase," said Dragon, as he explained that 83 percent of the newspapers in the 10,001-20,000 circulation category who entered the program were designated Blue Ribbon Newspapers.

Overall, larger circulation newspapers fared better than small ones and dailies were more successful than weeklies (although many more weeklies participated).

Although many former Blue Ribbon newspapers achieved the designation again, some former standard bearers did not. Dragon attributed this to the overall improved quality of participating newspapers, and said the judges may be getting more critical.

The National Newspaper Foundation, established in 1957, is dedicated to the improvement of journalism and journalism education. It has conducted the Blue Ribbon Newspaper Evaluation program annually since 1969.

Cycling once a big sport in "fair city" of Charlevoix

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the seventh and final installment in a series of articles taken from Will E. Hampton's : Memories of Charlevoix the Benutiful Six Decades Ago ; written in 1955, when Hampton was an octogenarian. tiere he recalls more about the merchants and other leaders of early Charlevoix:

I had the first "safety" bicycle in town. Guy Brown, the son of Banker Brown, had a wooden velocipede, with pedals on the front wheel to propel it, but discarded it and I sold him a real wheel to ride.

When enough bicycles were owned, we organized a club, got a piece of land on the east end of the Crouter addition, built a third-mile track, the first track in the state exclusively for cyclists, and held a lot of race meets, with crack riders from Grand Rapids, Detroit, and other cities. I won my share of lamps, medals, and other accessories, and sold Tom Cooper of Harbor Springs his first safety wheel, and rode against him in his first race, on the Petoskey fair grounds half mile track. Incidentally, he beat all of us about a mile, and went on to become the world's champion cycle rider.

To return to the prominent citizens: Captain Louis Guard, who ran a steamer to East Jordan; Capt. George Weaver, sailor; Ed Guard, who was the first engineer of the water works; Burt Mason, grocer and land owner; Lottie Mason and Effa Berdan, dry goods store; Capt. Berdan, who went to the Koindike after reach 60 years of age, and whom I succeeded as Postmaster in 1893; C.D. Wood, landowner who had a big house on the sooth terrace and two lovely doughters who rode (side saddle) like centaurs; a brother of Editor Willard Smith, who was an eccentric character who should not be overlooked. Everybody called him "O.W.", those being his initials. I never saw his first name; he had a lapidary and curio shop near the hotel on corner of Bridge Street, and had a brown spaniel of whom he was very fond and had taught a lot of tricks, and where O.W. went, his dog was along.

He loved music and whenever our band from Harbor Springs came to town, O.W. would come to the boat, and often pass out some kind of a souvenir. Unfortunately, he was fond of liquor, and perhaps because of this, he and his brother did not speak. O.W. was in many ways a genius, and it was said that one night, when the bridge was swung (there was no automatic dropping of barriers then) he walked off into the river and nearly drowned. He at once developed a device so that when the bridge started to open, the barriers dropped without anyone touching them.

S.M. See was in furniture and his son Lou was head man for Amos Fox' grocery and son Charles was in his dad's store and ran it when his father passed on. R.D. Fitzsimmons, flour mills; John Burns and Archie Cameron, builders; Prof. H.M. Enos, Supt. of Schools, Capt. Geik C. Geiken; Capt. Wm. Finucan; Capt. O.F. Wilbur, Capt. Campbell of St. James steamer route; Albert Bridge, banker; Fred Cartier, tailor; (last three came to town shortly after I did); Harry Nichalls, inside man for the Lumber Co. and "Montie" Lewis, outside man for the Lumber Co.; Richard Cooper, Fountain City House.

FINIS

I stated in the beginning that this was not to be in any sense a "history", and whoever should read it will agree that it is not that kind of a paper. I have merely set down on the typewriter such things as came into my mind as my fingers played on the keys, with no reference to the time they happened. While I did not intend it to be so, I find on reading it after it is finished that it has more personal references than I had hoped would be the case. If anyone may find any pleasure in perusing these sheets, well and good. Two of my sons were born in Charlevoix; I will be laid away in Brookside Cemetery when I pass on, beneath a stone already bearing my name and year of my birth, 1864. I know I shall enjoy my final rest, as I enjoyed my days when I was a part in the civic affairs of the fairest little city anywhere on this broad land.

Getting out of debt

Do you find yourself in the "overspent" category with your monthly income not matching your monthly outgo? If so, your first decision for the New Year probably is how to get out of debt from the Old Year.

For many January means paying the piper for Christmas past. The Christmas holidays combined with end of the year expenses can become one of the most expensive times of the year.

There are several ways you can consider to help get your budget righted around. If you have charged on a revolving charge account, you can make the minimum required payments, usually 10 percent of the total, rather than paying the bills in full. This will protect your credit rating and allow you to make monthly payments until all your bills are paid.

Alas – there is a disadvantage to this method of paying bills. It will cost extra! You have to pay a finance charge. A finance charge of 18 percent adds up to 1½ percent each month on an unpaid balance, up to $500. However, you can cut these costs by paying off faster than required.

If the total of all your bills is over $500 you might shop for a loan to pay them off.

For instance, by borrowing from a Credit Union you could reduce your finance charge to 1 percent a month or a 12 percent annual interest rate on the unpaid balance.

You should also investigate other sources of loans – your bank, a finance company, even your life insurance company if your policy builds a cash value. By investigating different sources you can then choose the lowest cost loan.

Remember to borrow only what you need to repay your debts and then agree to repay as fast as you can. Rule number one, however, is to be sure you are able to repay as your promise.

Once you have made directions toward getting out of debt beware of false security and allowing yourself to run up more bills. If you are concerned about your budget begin right now on a plan that keeps your monthly spending as close as possible to your monthly earnings.

Down To Earth

"WE CAN STAY WITHIN THIS MONTH'S BUDGET, IF WE JUST TAKE NEXT MONTH'S SALARY!"

Should we cry or cheer?

These are days of mixed emotions on the international scene; you don't know whether to cry or cheer.

For the past two weeks, the Vietnamese have been conducting a systematic takeover of neighboring Cambodia with air and ground forces. Resistance hasn't amounted to a hill of a bean sprouts, and by the time this reaches print, Cambodia could already have fallen.

Although the U.S. fought the Vietnamese throughout most of the 1960's and ended with an ignominious helicopter pull-out from the rooftops of Saigon, the situation in Camohida is not all bad. As you know, Cambodia for many years now has been run by the dreaded Khmer Rouge, an ultra-left wing organization determined to reshape the course of Cambodian history overnight.

Major cities have become ghost towns under Khmer Rouge orders to return the populace to the soil; every facet of personal life comes under close government scrutiny. You do what you're told, Buster, or I've got a bullet with your name on it. That kind of thing. Real bad.

Now, all of a sudden, our old enemies – the Vietnamese – are knocking the bejabbers out of the Khmer Rouge and official Washington is maintaining a discrete silence. (Picture, if you will, Jimmy Carter smiling slyly behind a paper fan.)

The U.S. is reluctant to see Vietnam acquire any additional clout in Southeast Asia, but isn't it fun to watch Vietnamese troops march roughshod over the bloody Khmer Rouge? Somebody had to do it, and better them than us.

HAS THERE ever been a time in the history of the world when the major powers have shifted alignments more rapidly? Less than a month ago, the United States was awfully cozy with the Republic of China headquartered on Taiwan.

Then suddenly Jimmy Carter decided to recognize Communist China instead of the Taipei government. It was a smart move and long overdue, but it sort of left our good friends the Taiwanese out in left field.

Now China, which has maintained a warm friendship with Vietnam for many years, is ready to pick up its marbles and go home. Vietnam suddenly has become too friendly with Russia, China's former comrade in arms which is now a dreaded enemy.

The United States, like a dottery old cousin-by-marriage, is trying to keep peace in the family and can't understand why everyone is so upset, since we love practically everybody, except the Vietnamese and the Cambodians who can't stand each other either.

Probably the most significant decision to come out of the summit talks on Guadeloupe over the weekend is that the Big Four should not try to stamp out brush fires around the world, as the United States and France both attempted to do in Vietnam in recent history.

All we can do is hope the best side wins – and then help pick up the pieces.

WELCOME ABOARD to Fred Welch, the new engineer-manager of the Charlevoix County Road commission, one of the most sorely maligned public bodies in Northern Michigan.

After struggling to navigate U.S. 31 from Charlevoix to Bay Shore for four days hand-running last week, I'd like to suggest that Mr. Welch sit down with Orval Cutshaw, who fills the equivalent post in Emmet County, to find out just what Cutshaw does to keep Emmet roads in such fine shape throughout the winter. He must have secrets he'd be willing to share.

Although Charlevoix and Emmet counties suffered through the same storm last week, there was no comparison between driving conditions in the two counties...

Three weeks ago I drove to Pontiac to watch my alma mater, Michigan State, play Cincinnati in the Silverdome. Over 30,000 people attended, making it the second largest crowd ever to watch a college basketball game.

Most of the people were there to watch Earvin Johnson perform. When Johnson was introduced the noise volume doubled.

Unfortunately, Johnson and his teammates had a lackluster game. It wasn't until the game's final moments when the crowd got to see Johnson make a couple trick passes to teammates for baskets. By then the crowd had been disappointed. Several were openly saying, "What's wrong?"

It shows how much fans have come to expect of Michigan State, in general, and Earvin Johnson, in particular. Johnson and his teammates have turned the fans on to an exciting brand of basketball, not seen on the MSU campus since the days of Johnny Green.

The Spartans quickly silenced the critics by winning the Far West Classic and moving up to the No. 1 spot in the college basketball polls.

At least this critic was silenced.

Heroes are made - not born

When Superman was born in 1938, in a comic book, I was 12 years old, the perfect age to be enchanted by an invincible man. But there must have been something wrong with me.

All of my buddies wanted to grow up to be Superman. I wanted to grow up to be Clark Kent, with no phone booth. Honest.

And I made it. All my adult life I've been a mild-mannered newspaper reporter. That's all I ever wanted to be. There's something to be said for setting low goals: Success is more easily obtained, especially if you kick extra points.

Superman is on my mind for the obvious reason. Today he is starring as Marlon Brando's son in the most expensive movie ever made. If you've never heard of this movie, you're dead and it's remarkable that you're able to read this column. You should probably have a few words with your mortician.

I saw the movie "Superman" the first night it played in Detroit. I was in a hurry because I wanted to tell my family and friends what I thought of the movie before I read what the critics thought of it. I'm always influenced by the opinions of professional critics, and I hate to disagree with them. I'm mild mannered, remember.

"Star Wars" was tough on me. Before I saw it, I read the opinions of several eminent critics. They all said it was a great movie. I thought it was dumb, but I never told anyone. When people said they loved "Star Wars," it wouldn't have been mild mannerly of me to tell them they were stupid.

Besides, they would have pointed to the rave reviews and said I was weird to be the only person in the world who didn't love "Star Wars." So I simply said I hadn't seen the movie. One of the advantages of not being Superman is you can lie.

But even a mild-mannered person can get indigestion from swallowing too many opinions. I didn't want the "Superman" movie to be another "Star Wars." I wanted to get my "Superman" opinion on the record before I was intimidated by the professional critics.

As soon as the movie ended, I announced to my wife and all the people sitting around us: "That was a dumb, boring movie. I'm going to tell everyone not to waste money on it."

On the way home, I stopped at several tea rooms to spread the word further. I ripped "Superman" good. I said it was fine for little kids but it would bore sensible adults in insensibility. I said there was nothing funny or exciting about some guy flying from New York to California via phony photography instead of by United Airlines.

As I left one tea room, I heard a woman ask: "Who was that unmild man?" This bothered me, I'll admit. I didn't want to blow my Clark Kent image. But at least I had voiced my opinion before I could be cowed by the reviews in the next day's newspapers.

It was a good thing. The professional critics are nuts about "Superman." Many of them say it's even better than "Star Wars," for goodness sake.

My wife was bothered by my isolated position. "There must be something wrong with you," she said.

I suppose. What's wrong with me now is probably the same thing that was wrong with me 40 years ago when Superman made his debut. He bored me in the comic book because, no matter how terrible the threat, the readers always knew Superman would win in the end. The movie bored me for the same reason.

What fun it is to root for a perfect person? That's as exciting as rooting for Wednesday to follow Tuesday.

On the other hand, a real Clark Kent, without phone booth, will lose more often than not. But it can be exciting to root for him. There's always the chance Clark might drop his mild manner long enough to fight off whatever is being dumped on him.

Without the aid of blue underwear, Clark might even refuse to go along with the crowds and the critics who think a movie must be super if $10 million worth of advertising says it is.

It's true this world needs heroes. But heroes are made, not born to Marlon Brando in 7 weeks' gestation at $1.8 million per week. You may quote that, but please do it in a mild manner. Thank you.

Who needs tomorrow?

"We've Got Tonite"
Bob Seger
1976 Gear Publishing Co. – ASCAP

We've Got Tonite

I know it's late, I know you're weary
I know your plans don't include me
Still here we are, both of us lonely
Longing for shelter from all that we see
Why should we worry
No one will care girl
Look at the stars so far away
We've got tonite who needs tomorrow
We've got tonite babe
Why don't you stay?
Deep in my soul I've been so lonely
All of my hopes fading away
I've longed for love
Like everyone else does
I know I'll keep searching even after today
So there it is girl
I've said it all now
And here we are babe what do you say
We've got tonite who needs tomorrow
We've got tonite babe
Why don't you stay?
I know it's late, I know you're weary
I know your plans don't include me
Still here we are, both of us lonely
Both of us lonely
We've got tonite who needs tomorrow
Let's make it last
Let's find a way
Turn out the light, come take my hand now
We've got tonite babe
Why don't you stay?

Somewhere, echoing from out of the archives of an extremely moral upbringing, I hear something warning me "Beware of the man of the One Night Stand."

Maybe it's my mother. Maybe it's Sister Mary Magnitude of the 7th grade. Whoever it is, the impression remains along with the echo. Then along comes Bob Seger. Why couldn't this melody be ultuse? Why are his lyrics so appealing in their honest simplicity? Why does he have to do it so well?

It's like the first time a girl realizes that all the admonishments she has absorbed since puberty, excreting their shell-like armor substance against that FIRST ENCOUNTER, dissolve like a breath mint with the first significant kiss. Moments suddenly are weighed against years, a few words like "I love you," or "You're beautiful," against whole doctrines. As much as she would like to cull upon entire litanies of holy martyrs who fed themselves to the lions of their faith, she finds herself weakening at the hands of a single wolf. And all this in sight of the very virtue she was wenned upon. It was easy to renounce Satan and the boy who made the mistake of advancing with onion on his breath. But not so easy to be a Joan of Arc against the subtle aggressions of the one who wears English Leather. Why couldn't he be fat or at least have pimples, she laments. Why does he have to wear a sheepskin vest and carry Asti Spumante? And why does he do what he does so well?

Enh Seger, you've caught us with our defenses down. We're weary of this projected vision of Future, always Future happiness. Maybe you're right. Who needs tomorrow?

"Until tomorrow," pipes up Sister Mary Magnitude. Yesterday was security-orientated. Today is, well, moment-prone.

"That's just the trouble," interjects Mother. Everyone's lonely and searching. "Let's make it last. Let's find a way."

"Good luck, good luck, good luck," they echo in angelic unison. Echoes, always echoes. Tell me the truth Sister Mary Magnitude. Tell me, Mom. Could you really say no to Bob Seger?

A kiss and tell trend

The Kiss and Tell books have been with us for several years now. They're the exposes usually written by a discarded mistress of a general, a silverware polisher at the White House, or someone whose dog once had a hysterectomy and occupied a bed next to Jackie O's dog in the recovery room.

A group of us in the neighborhood were talking the other day about the current best-seller, "Mommie Dearest," in which Joan Crawford's daughter revealed her bizarre childhood.

"You don't suppose this is going to start a trend, do you?" asked Jeanne.

"A trend for what?" asked Pat.

"For kids writing about their mothers."

"C'mon," I said. "We're all wonderful mothers. I mean, what could our kids possibly say about us that we wouldn't want anyone to know?"

"That's right," said Jane. "Everything we've done, we've done out of pure love for our children, right?"

During the next ten minutes, the silence was deafening.

Pat was the first to break the sound barrier. "I'll bet everyone here has at one time or another put her child out to play and locked the door afterward."

Jeanne's head shot up. "Not during the '78 blizzard we didn't."

"You should talk," countered Pat. "At least I didn't use my kid's own money to buy back her teeth and tell her it was from the tooth fairy."

"I will never tell you anything again in the utmost confidence," said Jeanne. "Besides, I know of someone sitting here in this room who took along tranquilizers on a family vacation and was going to tell the kids they were vitamins."

"I never used them!" shouted June. "We do the best we can," said Pat.

"Like the time I didn't take Mark to the doctor until after the 15th billing. How was I to know he had a broken arm? He always complained at bedtime."

"We've surely made our share of mistakes," said Jeanne. "How about you, Erma? I suppose your children are so perfect you'll come out in book form somewhere between St. Joan and Mary Poppins."

"Last Mother's Day," I said, "I got a homemade card from my son. It showed a Mommie smiling with a large bunch of roses in her arms. On the inside, the message said, "HOPE THIS SCENTS YOU INTO ORBIT FOR A LONG TIME."

"That's sweet, said Jeanne. "What's the matter with that?"

"If the kid ever learns to spell...I'm dead!"

Railroad users learn of changes in state department

Business people who use northern Michigan's meager railroad service last week received some information about the state's proposed reorganization of the Michigan Department of Transportation.

Speaking before the Northern Michigan Rail Users Association in Kalkaska, Bill Bailey, assistant administrator of the Rail Facilities Division of the Department of Transportation, reported that the new director of transportation will be appointed by Gov. William D. Milliken, as will a director of public transportation to serve under him.

In an effort to make the whole Department of Transportation more responsive to the public, there will be four advisory councils to the department: a non-motorized council; a bus and rail council; a rail freight council; and a port development council.

There will also be an advisory committee which will work closely with the department. This committee will appoint two of the seven members of each advisory council, the governor will appoint three members, the speaker of the house will appoint one member, and the president of the senate will appoint one member.

John O'Doghery, manager of rail planning for the Department of Transportation, cited the rail problems in northern Michigan as low density and low volume. However, he did say they had set up goals for rail service in the area, including more reliability, more stability and better service.

The budget for the Department of Transportation this year is $80 million, excluding federal aid. Of this, 17.5 percent will be spent for public transportation.

The Rail Users Association also elected officers for the coming year. They include Gerald Smith of Petoskey, president; William H. Ohle of Horton Bay, secretary; and Robert Jones of Cadillac, treasurer.

Editor:

On behalf of all of the parents who participated in putting the recent gymnastics demonstration together on December 9th at the Charlevoix High School gymnasium, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the local business community for their support. Without the help of civic-minded businesses such as yours, our program would not have been possible.

The cool of the demonstration was to give some exposure to the students of gymnastics and the opportunity to express their interest in gymnastics.

It is our hope that your continued interest will remain with us.

Sincerely, Jim Mitchell

Rayders chalk up second victory

Coach Dave Moyer and his Charlevoix Rayder basketball squad started the new year in style. The Rayders mowed down archrival Boyne City, Friday, 74-66, in a Michigan-Huron Shores Conference battle.

The Rayders jumped out to an early lead that they never relinquished. Utilizing full court pressure on defense and the hot shooting of Pat Schmidt on offense, Charlevoix bolted to a 19-6 first quarter advantage. Boyne City could not recover.

"The kids were really eager to play after that long holiday break," Moyer said. "And this is such a big rivalry, too. The kids were excited."

Although it was cold outside, Schmidt warmed things up in a hurry inside scoring 10 first quarter points. He didn't stop there, either. He scored 10 more in the second quarter and finished the game with 30. Teammate Kevin Kratt added 11.

"He (Schmidt) just got the shots," Moyer explained.

The Rayder got a strong performance from junior center Ken Otmanowski, who got a starting call for the first time this season. Otmanowski responded with eight points.

"When he came back after the break he was like a new player," Moyer said. "Suddenly, he just started taking over."

Otmanowski replaced Tim Hoffman in the lineup. Hoffman has been nursing a sprained ankle.

Moyer said he'll keep his big junior pivotman in the lineup Tuesday when the Rayders host Kalkaska, the first non-conference game of the season.

Boyne City had just one player reach double figures, center Dean Hicks who tallied 19 points.

The Ramblers made a run at Charlevoix in the second quarter and managed to close the gap to eight points, 36-28. But Charlevoix put the game out of reach by outscoring Boyne City, 21-10, in the third quarter.

The Rayders hit on 33 field goals were eight of 14 from the charity stripe.

Charlevoix also won the junior varsity contest, 45-26.

Jeff Drury had 13 points and Jim Beaudoin had 12 to pace the Rayder attack. Charlevoix led by just two points at half, 19-17, but held the Ramblers to nine points the entire second half.

Leland wins tourney, Rayders ousted by B.C.

Leland High School proved Saturday that it has one of the top volleyball teams in the state. The Comets, defending Class D state champs, won the Charlevoix Girls Volleyball Tournament.

The Comets won their tournament fairly easily, not losing a match the entire day. Leland beat St. Ignace (16-14, 15-12; Elk Rapids 15-10, 14-2; Boyne City 15-3, 15-4; and Boyne City again 15-9, 15-4.

Boyne City finished second in the double elimination tournament. The Ramblers beat Cheboygan 2-15, 15-11, 15-7 and Charlevoix 15-8, 15-6 before losing to Leland. Boyne City then beat Charlevoix again 15-5, 15-14 for the right to play Leland a second time.

Charlevoix won three games during the day. The Rayders beat East Jordan 15-3, 15-3; Cheboygan 15-13, 15-13; and Elk Rapids 15-7, 15-8. It was Boyne City who was the Rayders nemesis.

Altogether, eight teams participated in the tournament: Leland, Boyne City, Cheboygan, East Jordan, Elk Rapids, Petoskey, St. Ignace and Charlevoix.

The girls volleyball team will play Wednesday night at Gaylord. The Rayders will host Cheboygan on Jan. 17.

Grapplers take lumps at Alma

It was not a good weekend for the Charlevoix Rayder wrestling team.

The Rayders participated in the Alma Invitational Saturday and finished last in an eight team field. Mason won the invitational.

Charlevoix lost all three of its dual meets; 60-12 to Flint Bentley, 48-21 to Saginaw Eisenhower, and 45-28 to Petoskey.

"Injuries and forfeits hurt us," lamented Coach Norm Probert. "Both Dave Britton and Dennis Whitley pulled muscles in their shoulders, and forfeiting 18 points each meet didn't help the team score much."

The Rayders had to forfeit in the 98, 138 and 191 pound classes.

Charlevoix did not have any individual champions, however, Probert was pleased with the efforts of Gregg Whitley, Scott Golovich, Ken Wojan, Dave Golovich, who each won two of three matches. Flint Bentley's Jim Koerber (178 pounds) was named the tournament's top wrestler.

Probert said Whitley and Britton should be ready for the Rayders match-up Thursday night against St. Ignace. The meet starts at 6:30 p.m. in the Charlevoix High School gymnasium.

"If we have Britton and Whitley back and if everyone gets down to weight we should continue our domination over the Saints," Probert said.

John Deere and Kit Carson posted victories last week in the Charlevoix Recreation B League, enabling the two squads to move into first place with County State Bank. All three teams have 6-1 records.

John Deere zipped past the Coast Guard, 65-29. The winners broke open a tight game in the second quarter by outscoring the Coast Guard 14-9. Paul Collins had 18 points and Connie Klooster 14 for John Deere while Rich Forbis had 12 points for the losers.

Meanwhile, Kit Carson claimed its sixth win of the season by beating Hoskins 45-37. Kit Carson had a two point lead, 32-30, after three quarters. For the winners, Butch Klooster had 21 points and Dale Boss had 12 while for Hoskins Randy Holechek had 20.

In another contest, Wojan Aluminum bested Alray's, 59-41. Stan Martin, Clay Jones and Don Smith had 16, 14 and 12 points, respectively, for the winners while Scott Blanchard, Jim Marsh and Dave Martincheck had 17, 14 and 10 points for the losers.

State and county mental health services closer to integration

Integration of state and county mental health services came one step closer to realization Dec. 21. That's the day representatives from the Michigan Department of Mental Health, state facilities and county mental health programs signed agreements to unify services within the Northern Michigan Region.

Participating in the formal signing procedures at the Chalet, Gaylord, were directors of Traverse City Regional Psychiatric Hospital, Alpine Center the Department of Mental Health northern regional office, and representatives from the region's seven community mental health boards.

The CMH boards represent 21 counties in the northern lower peninsula.

Separate documents were signed with the Traverse City hospital which serves psychiatric patients and Alpine Center, Gaylord, which services developmentally disabled persons.

"This agreement, when implemented, will result in improved mental health services to those in need," states the document.

"Above all terms and other specifics is our mutual desire to constitute a unified service delivery system, and our covenant to strive for this common goal."

V.A. Stehman, M.D. acting director of the Michigan Department of Mental Health praised the directors of state and county agencies for arriving at agreements to implement unified services.

"This is the first time such agreements have been reached in a regional basis," said Dr. Stehman, "Credit for the achievement is shared by Dr. Paul Surratt, his regional office staff, community mental health boards and directors of the state facilities at Traverse City and Gaylord."

Senior citizen funds available, housing commission learns

The Charlevoix Housing Commission has received a letter from the Department of Housing and Urban Development that indicates funds are available for senior citizen housing.

The letter states that the housing commission should submit an application for the funds.

"If a viable application is submitted for an acceptable site, tax abatement, appropriate living units for the elderly and handicapped, estimated costs within budget, etc.) we can expect application approval with a fund reservation enabling project development," the letter states.

The city could receive up to $183,892, which would pay the capital cost of the project, with interest. This sum will support an estimated 82 units. Eligible senior citizens and the handicapped, within certain income limits, would pay a maximum 25 percent of their income as rent, including all utilities. The tennants' share should pay all operating and maintenance costs.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development sent the housing commission an application, which must be returned no later than Feb. 15 if the city is to have a chance for the funds.

The housing commission has been trying to bring low cost housing to Charlevoix for the past few years. The big problem, though, has been the lack of funds available.

City wants no financial obligation in Corps project

The Charlevoix Common Council has advised the United States Department of the Army Corps of Engineers that although it does not oppose the deepening of the Charlevoix Harbor it will not commit any money in the proposed project.

The Army Corps of Engineers is proposing to deepen the channel, which currently has a depth of 18 feet.

Council believes the action would be a direct benefit to an industry like the Northern Michigan Electrical Cooperative, which has a generating plant in Advance and uses lurge vessels to transport coal. Also, council stated, it would directly and a company like Hodgkiss & Douma Inc., which hauls gravel.

The city would be required to deepen its utilities crossings underwater if the Army Corps of Engineers goes ahead with the project.

BOARD OF APPEALS

January 2, 1979

The Board of Appeals convened with Councilmen Wood, Muma, Porter, Timms, and Plumm present. Absent: Alderman Whitley.

The Board of Appeals continued the Public Hearing initiated on December 18, 1978 regarding the Charlevoix Products, Inc. application for an Industrial Development District Facility Exemption Certificate. The Board expressed reluctance to consider the tax exemption due to the fact that some of the principals involved in Charlevoix Products are also the owners of another local business which has a large utility bill outstanding. Representatives of Charlevoix Products stated that the two companies are separate corporations with separate Boards of Directors and implied that one company should not be responsible for the debts of the other. The Board generally agreed that, while the two companies are separate, two of the three owners of the Charlevoix Products property are also owners of the company with a delinquent account.

Moved by Alderman Plumm and supported by Alderman Porter to table the request submitted by Charlevoix Products, Inc. for an Industrial Development District Facility Exemption Certificate. Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote Yeas: Aldermen Wood, Muma, Porter, Timms, and Plumm. Nays: None. Absent: Alderman Whitley.

A Public Hearing was held regarding the application for a variance submitted by Dick Donaldson which would allow him to erect a 40 sq. ft. luminated sign at his property at 1202 Bridge Street for a 7-11 store. Ken Staley, a member of the City Planning Commission stated that the Commission voted 3 to 2 to deny the request but that, in his opinion, the request is not unreasonable as the signs are standard with the 7-11 Company and it would exceed the maximum allowed in the present Sign Ordinance by only 4 sq. ft. He also stated that it is necessary for the Planning Commission to have a minimum of four negative votes to deny the request. The Board agreed to return the matter to the Planning Commission for another vote when a quorum is present and to resume the Public Hearing on January 15, 1979.

The Board of Appeals adjourned.

City Clerk

Russell Grunch

SAN ANTONIO – Russell R. Grunch, son of Mrs. Beatrice Gronch of 547 Petoskey Ave., Charlevoix, has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the U.S. Air Force upon graduation from Officer Training School at Lackland AFB, Tex.

Lieutenant Grunch, selected through competitive examination for attendance at the school, now goes to K.I. Sawyer AFB, Mich., for training and duty as an accounting and finance officer.

The lieutenant, a 1970 graduate of Charlevoix High School, received a B.A. degree in 1977 from Park College, St. Louis, Mo.

Kenneth Paul

Navy Electronics Technician Seaman Kenneth L. Paul, son of Jerry and Donna Poul of Route 3, Box 188, Charlevoix, recently departed for an extended deployment in the Western Pacific.

He is serving as a crewmember aboard the guided missile destroyer USS Benjamin Stoddert, homeported in Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. While deployed, his ship will operate as a unit of the U.S. Seventh Fleet.

The missions of the Seventh Fleet are to protect U.S. citizens, shipping and interests in the Western Pacific; to deter aggression against our Western Pacific allies by maintaining mobile striking forces; to promote peace and stability in the Western Pacific and to create goodwill for the United States.

During the cruise, his ship is scheduled to participate in training exercises with other Seventh Fleet units and with ships of allied nations. Additionally, port visits are scheduled in several Far Eastern countries.

The Stoddert is 437 feet long, displaces 4,500 tons and carries a crew of 354 officers and enlisted men. She is outfitted with guns, missile launchers, torpedo tubes and an antisubmarine rocket launcher.

A 1976 graduate of Charlevoix High School, Paul joined the Navy in October 1976.

Brinker starts new job with city

Jim Brinker

By PEG OHLE

James M. Brinker drove to Charlevoix during a snowstorm last week to take over his duties as comptroller and treasurer of the City of Charlevoix.

"I've always wanted to move to a small city in the northern part of the state," the Flint native told the Courier, "and my wife and I decided if we were going to do it, we should do it now."

Did the snowstorm deter his enthusiasm for the area? No. "We've vacationed up here in the summertime," he said, "and we've come up here snowmobiling, so we're used to the climate."

Brinker will be in charge of the finance department of the city and will assist the city manager with the budget and budget control. The new City Charter, which goes into effect the first of April, calls for the hiring of a comptroller and appointment of a treasurer. Previously, the office of treasurer had been an elective one.

"My biggest job right now will be finishing this year's budget and preparing next year's. The fiscal year will run from April 1 to March 30. It used to be from March 1 to Feb. 28, so we will have a 13-month year this year," Brinker pointed out.

Proposed budgets for each city department are being submitted to the city manager this week. There are 13 city departments: clerk, treasurer, assessor, police, fire, electric utility, public works, water supply, personnel, purchasing recreation, waste water, and seasonal (golf, dock, etc.)

The new city comptroller says that although the job will be a challenge, it is not unlike the situation he faced when he went to work in Flushing eight years ago. "I've had experience in straightening out finances."

Before going to work in Flushing, Brinker attended Baker Junior College of Business in Flint, where he majored in accounting. Before that he worked for the Chevrolet Motors Division in Flint.

"Most of my accounting experience was on-the-job training and attending seminars around the state sponsored by the Municipal Finance Officers' Association," Brinker explains.

The new city employee has interests other than figures. In Flushing he served on the Board of Directors of the Youth Center and acted as its treasurer, and held the same positions with the Flushing Senior Center.

While working in Flushing, Brinker lived in Clio with his wife and cocker spaniel. Mrs. Brinker will join him in Charlevoix within a few days. She is a former school teacher but has most recently been working in the University of Michigan Flint campus book store. They have rented a house in Charlevoix for the present but hope to find one to buy before summer.

"I've been spending time getting to know people in Charlevoix," Brinker says of his first few days here. "My first impression is that they are real friendly. It's a nice change from downstate."

CHIP to host workshop on financial planning

The CHIP Counseling Center of Charlevoix is kicking off its 1979 workshop series with a two-evening workshop devoted to Financial Planning, Jan. 31 and Feb. 1.

Tom Bickersteth, professional financial planner headquartered in Charlevoix, and Oren Schroeder CHIP center director, will jointly conduct the two sessions, from 7:30 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. on the two consecutive evenings at the First State Bank of Charlevoix.

The Financial Planning Workshop was planned to initiate the series of workshops that CHIP will sponsor from now through the end of May, in order to help people of the area plan their finances at the best possible time.

"January is the time of year when most of us are assessing the past year and thinking about the coming year in financial terms, "CHIP Director Schroeder said, explaining the workshop's program.

"This workshop is designed to provide planning tools to people that are generally only available to the more wealthy," Schroeder explained.

Schroeder said that Financial Planning is considered an important and appropriate part of CHIP's activities, because "Finances too often control the person rather than the person controlling the finances.

"And," he continued, "When finances become a problem the whole family is affected."

Schroeder pointed out that the series of workshops which will include effective parenting, communication for couples, stress, and planning a personal lifestyle, are part of CHIP's campaign of "Preventative Mental Health."

While the CHIP Center's two counselors meet daily with individuals from throughout the Charlevoix area who have specific problems, the CHIP Center is also concerned about helping people deal with life's everyday problems before they get out of hand.

Bickersteth, discussing the specific of the Financial Planning Workshop, emphasized that it is open to everyone in the area.

"This workshop will make available professional planning to people of modest finances.

"Our goal is to make enough tools available so individuals can sit down and understand what they really want, understand the effects of inflation, and put in basic dollars and cents terms, what it is going to take to achieve their goals," Bickersteth continued.

"We will go over an approach through which each family can crystallize in economic terms their objectives, such as education, retirement, acquiring a home, whatever.

"Then we will discuss methods and ways of achieveing those goals," Bickersteth stated.

The professional financial planner said that participants in the workshops will be creating personal financial roadmaps to know where they are headed financially and to control the direction.

Among the specific financial subjects that will be discussed are life insurance, savings, investments, budgeting, wills, credit cards, and debt.

"It is vital to know how much debt is too much," Bickersteth stated.

A fee to cover costs of the workshops will be charged: $25 per couple or $15 per individual.

"It is advantageous for couples to come," Schroeder observed. "Couples can work on family goals with the kind of professional help that would otherwise be too expensive for many people."

"Finances often are a source of tremendous stress in a marriage," Schroeder stated, "which is why we encourage couples to participate."

The two-session will be held at the First State Bank of Charlevoix. As they are limited to 30 people, participants are asked to register by calling the CHIP Center before Friday Jan. 26th. Call 616-547-6551.

Thomas Left of Charlevoix, the innocent victim of stab woonds during an altercation last August 11 on Bridge Street, has been awarded $189.85 by the state to cover his out-of-pocket expenses resulting from the wounds.

According to County Prosecutor Scott Beatty, this is the first ense in Charlevoix County in which compensation has been made under a law passed in 1977.

Claims are processed by the Crime Victims Compensation Board. The board was established to assist victims and persons aiding victims of crime who, through no significant fault of their own, suffer actual bodily harm as a direct result of the crimes.

The assistance includes compensation for out-of-pocket loss for medical care, non-medical remedial treatment, or other necessary services including funeral benefits, and loss of earnings or support, resulting from the injury.

Left was attacked by an out-of-towner, Darrell Estep, who, on Oct. 25, was sentenced to probation and restitution for Left's injuries. The restitution will be paid to the state.

Commenting on the new law, Beatty said, "I'm glad the legislature is finally looking to victims of crime. They are trying to strike a balance between the rights of the accused and the rights of victims."

Wedding

Works-McDonough

ST. JAMES, Beaver Island – Holy Cross Church was the scene late Friday afternoon of the wedding of Margaret Amanda Works and Joseph Hugh McDonough.

Parents of the couple are Dr. and Mrs. John W. Works of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence M. McDonough of Charlevoix.

The Rev. Fr. Alvin Yard officiated at the double ring ceremony in the presence of more than 300 guests. Arrangements of chrysanthemums in shades of rust, gold and white graced the altar for the service. Mrs. Walter Wojan, at the organ, played a program of traditional music and the wedding march and recessional.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father. She chose for her wedding a gown of ivory silk organza accented with Venise lace. Fashioned with a square neckline and high rise bodice, the gown had caplet sleeves appliqued with lace, and an A-flared skirt with an attached chapel length train. Her veil and blusher of bridal illusion was secured by a half-hat of Alencon lace and beads originally worn by her mother at her wedding. Her bridal bouquet was of white roses and gold and rust mums.

Elizabeth Works of Pittsburgh assisted her sister as maid of honor and bridesmaids were Ellen Sutter of Boston, Mass., and Pamela McDonough and Kathie McDonough, both of Ann Arbor, sisters of the bridegroom.

They were identical sleeveless gowns of terra cotta and spice poly-knit styled with empire waists, cowl necklines and A-flared skirts worn with matching cap-sleeved drawstring jackets. Their bouquets were of mums in shades of gold and rust.

Lawrence W. McDonough of Grand Rapids served as his brother's best man. Daniel Gillispie of Charlevoix, Kevin McDonough, brother of the bridegroom, and Gerald LaFreniere were groomsmen and ushers. Acolytes were Todd McDonough and Kevin Green.

Mrs. Works chose a floor length of beige poly-knit and matching accessories for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. McDonough, mother of the bridegroom, wore an emerald green silk gown and matching lace jacket and accessories.

A dinner reception and dance followed at Holy Cross parish hall. The Shamrocks of St. James provided the music for dancing.

The couple will reside at St. James where the bride is an aide-receptionist at the Beaver Island Medical Center and the bridegroom is employed at the Gillispie Oil & Transit Co.

The bride is a graduate of University School in Pittsburgh and attended Ohio Wesleyan College. The bridegroom is a graduate of the Beaver Island High School and Ferris State College with a major in Computer Science.

Mr. and Mrs. McDonough Sr. hosted a rehearsal dinner at the Circle M Thursday evening.

Council to name Whitley's replacement at Feb. 5 meeting

Who is going to replace Ivan Whitley as the 2nd Ward representative on the Charlevoix City Council?

Well, if you're going to make a bet, put your money on either Chuck Sherping or Bill Bellows. Presently, they are the leading candidates to fill the vacancy. Both have expressed an interest to serve the remaining two months of Whitley's term which expires March 31.

Council discussed the 2nd Ward situation at its workshop meeting Monday night, but did not tip its hand as to who Whitley's replacement would be. Council did say that it would name a replacement at its next meeting Feb. 5. Mayor Sam Supernaw said it would be the first item of business at the Feb. 5 meeting.

Whitley resigned over a month ago because of health and business reasons. He has the prerogative, however, of returning April 1 to start a new two year term to which he was elected in the fall. According to Councilman George Plumm, Whitley does intend on returning to council. If he decides not to return, his replacement could serve until March 31, 1981.

Council did make two appointments Monday. Ralph McRae and Ralph Shapton were appointed to five year terms on the Charlevoix Housing Commission.

In other action, it appears council will not sell 11 acres of city property adjacent to Beechwoods Subdivision on the city's north side. Last week developer Robert Sooy approached council about the property. He indicated he would like to purchase the property to expand the subdivision. Consultant Patricia Janiro of The Real Estate Place told council that there is a potential for 20 to 25 home sites on the property.

Although council did not go into great detail Monday, the sentiment was to keep the property, which was purchased with expansion of the golf course in mind.

Hayes appointed to hospital board

Roy C. Hayes, East Jordan city attorney and Charlevoix lawyer, has accepted an appointment to the Charlevoix Area Hospital Board of Directors, board President Thomas Carey announced this week.

Hayes replaces Jack Grubaugh who has resigned due to the press of business.

In announcing Hayes appointment, Carey said for the hospital directors, "While we regret the resignation of Jack Grubaugh, who has served so well for more than 10 years on our hospital board, we are pleased that Roy Hayes can find time in his busy law practice to serve with us.

"Roy Hayes brings to our board many talents," Carey continued. "He is a respected member of our community with experience in business and public relations, as well as law."

Hayes, his wife Jacqueline and two children, moved to Charlevoix in 1975, when he was appointed prosecuting attorney, an office of which he was subsequently elected.

Currently he serves as city attorney for East Jordan while maintaining a private law practice in Charlevoix.

Hayes is a member of the Board of Directors of the Prosecuting Attorney's Association of Michigan and Prosecuting Attorney's Coordinating Council.

He also serves Charlevoix's Chip Counseling Center as a member of both their corporation and board of directors.

Speaking of his appointment to the Charlevoix Area Hospital Board of Directors, Hayes said, "This hospital is an important focal point in the community.

"Wherever I go around the county, in East Jordan, Charlevoix or Boyne City, people speak with pride of the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

"As a member of the board of directors, I think one of my own roles will be to serve as a communications link between the hospital and the people it serves."

Hayes will be serving on the board's nominating committee and the planning and development committee.

Applications being accepted for Girls State scholarships

The American Legion Auxiliary Leslie Shapton Post #226 will be taking applications for scholarships to the Thirty-Ninth Annual Girls State Session, which will meet at Olivet College June 16, to June 24.

This scholarship will be offered to any junior girl attending Charlevoix High School on a regular basis. Recipients will be named later in February.

Local organizations such as the American Legion Auxiliary and the Charlevoix Lions Club contribute to the cost of sending these girls to Olivet College.

The purpose of the American Legion Auxiliary Girls State is designed as a practical experience in the problems of self-government as operated in Michigan. It emphasizes the importance of government in modern life, stimulates a deep and lasting interest in government, and enlarges her understanding of governmental process.

The basic method of Girls State, by which these goals may be achieved, is that of actual participation in the political and governmental process. Care has been taken to design the Girls State program in that every citizen (girl) may participate in the electoral process, have an opportunity to hold public office, and be encouraged to share in the formulation of public policy. Through observation of other girls, and working with them it is hoped the girls will leave with a mature appreciation of some of the basic strengths and weaknesses of the American system of government. They will also participate in music activities, plays, fun get-togethers and many social activities.

If a junior girl in Charlevoix High School is interested she should contact Gayle Kaczynski, school counselor for more information or Mrs. Ray Wood, Girls State chairman.

100 years ago Charlevoix became a chartered village

Charlevoix is celebrating its centennial year. It was 100 years ago this spring that it received its charter as a village, and the first meeting of the village council was held May 1, 1879.

The minutes of that first meeting, which are on file at the City Hall, reveal that John S. Dixon took the oath of office as president, after which the trustees were sworn in: Robert Miller, Joseph M. Clark, and David C. Nettleton for one year; and J. Milo Eaton, Archibald Buttars, and Willard A. Smith for two years.

Other officials were John Bell, treasurer; M.J. Stockman, clerk; Albert E. Mason, street commissioner; and Orlando Blair, constable.

Trustee Smith was editor-publisher of the Charlevoix Sentinel, and as the first matter of business at the council meeting he offered to publish all ordinances of the village free of charge for one year. His offer was unanimously accepted.

Trustee Clark brought up the need for a sidewalk plan for the village. The question was "laid over".

Trustee Miller gave notice that he would bring up the matter of licensing billiard tables and other places of gaming at the next meeting.

Trustee Miller also introduced a resolution that there be no general assessment for the current year. The resolution carried unanimously.

The Courier will carry other news from 100 years ago throughout this year.

Kathy Cook

Kathy Cook candidate in pageant

Kathy Cook, 17, a senior at Charlevoix High School will be Charlevoix's candidate in the 11th annual Campus Life Sweetheart Pageant scheduled for Sunday, Feb. 11.

Pamela Boss, 1978 Campus Life Sweetheart, will be present to crown her successor at the event to be held at the Petoskey High School Auditorium.

Kathy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Cook, has been involved in the Campus Life program for the past four years. She is a member of the Charlevoix High School Symphony Band and in the Solo and Ensemble Events in which band members may participate. In December she was among eight members of the band to participate in the Honors Band of District 11 of the Michigan Band and Orchestra Association. In addition to music, her interests include cross country skiing, reading, hiking and swimming. Following graduation, she plans to enter the pre-physical therapy program at the University of Michigan.

The Campus Life Sweetheart Pageant is the only fund-raising project sponsored by Campus Life, a church-oriented organization for young people.

Competition in the pageant is based on individual stage appearance, talent and speaking ability (40 percent); attendance from the candidate's community on the day of the pageant (30 percent) and the amount of funds raised (30 percent).

Among the fund-raising projects planned during the two weeks prior to the pageant are pie sales tentatively scheduled for Jan. 27 and Feb. 3 at Oleson's Food store; a salad-casserole luncheon; a carrot sale and blanket pitch at basketball games; a quilt give-away drawing Feb. 10 and donations.

Verna Helms dies in early morning crash; first fatality of '79

A head-on collision at 6:25 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 17, on US 31 North claimed the life of a Charlevoix woman and sent two others to area hospitals. Drivers and passengers of two other vehicles involved in the accident were uninjured.

Mrs. Verna G. Helms, 40, a clerical employee at Little Traverse Hospital and driver of the east-bound vehicle, received multiple injuries and died approximately nine hours later at the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Glen Louis Wertman, 23, Charlevoix, driver of the second vehicle which was west-bound, is in satisfactory condition at Little Traverse Hospital where he is being treated for fractures and other injuries.

Gregory Stibitz, 29, Charlevoix, a medical technician at Little Traverse Hospital and a passenger in the Helms car, was discharged Monday from the Charlevoix Area Hospital where he had been treated for a fracture and minor injuries.

The drivers of two other east-bound vehicles and the passengers in one who drove into the Helms car after being blinded by flying snow were uninjured. They were Mrs. Donna Himebauch, 22, Charlevoix, driver of the first vehicle, and her passengers, Beth Downing, Betty Russell and Judy Murray and Lawrence Graves, 25, East Jordan, driver of the second car.

According to sheriff's deputies, the accident occurred on the ice-covered highway covered with several inches of fresh snow that was being blown about by high winds resulting in poor visibility.

Mrs. Helms, her passenger, Stibitz and Wertman had to be cut from the vehicles by the Charlevoix Fire Department volunteers who had responded to the call according to a spokesman for the fire department. They were taken to the hospital via the Charlevoix ambulance.

Mrs. Helms became Charlevoix county's first highway fatality in 1979.

No criminal intent found in voting mixup in Wilson Township

Charlevoix County Prosecutin, Attorney Scott Beatty said that an investigation into voting irregularities during the November 7 general election in Wilson Township revealed that there was no criminal intent on the part of the election inspectors or four improperly registered voters who were allowed to vote.

The investigation was requested by Charlevoix County Clerk Clarence Rabach when the outcome of the township supervisor race was contested. Incumbent Harvey Crozier defeated Raymond Gurniczak by two votes 143-143. A recount was conducted last month upon request by Gurniczak, but the vote totals did not change.

Beatty said because of a recent Michigan Supreme Court decision the four voters cannot be forced to disclose how they voted since there was no criminal intent.

The prosecutor said he has conferred with the attorney general and is exploring the possibility of civil remedies, which would include taking the election to circuit court. Beatty said Gurniczak could request a hearing in circuit court where the outcome of the election would be reconsidered by a judge.

The investigation found that the voters were registered in Boyne City, but had moved out of the city into Wilson Township and not registered in the township. The voters went to Boyne City to vote Nov. 7 but were told to go to the township, where they were allowed to cast ballots.

The 25 page investigation report was conducted by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

Coast Guard seeks permit

The U.S. Coast Guard has applied to the Army Corps of Engineers for a permit to construct a boat launching ramp in the Pine River.

The proposed concrete plank ramp would be 12 feet wide and 40 feet long. It would be constructed near the Coast Guard station.

In addition, the Coast Guard is proposing to repair an existing concrete seawall.

Anyone wishing to express an opinion on the proposed work must do so within 30 days with the Corps of Engineers, Detroit District. All responses must refer to public notice process number 78ZSH/78-5-133. A lack of response will be interpreted as meaning that there is no objection to the permit application.

Montessori education making comeback

Katie Donavan makes a point os Guy Booth listens

By PEG OHLE

The Charlevoix Montessori Children's House, which opened in September, is alive and flourishing, according to Directress Katie Donovan.

The Montessori system of education is described as both a philosophy of child growth and a rationale for guiding such growth. It is based on the child's developmental needs for freedom within limits, and a carefully prepared environment which guarantees exposure to materials and experiences through which to develop intelligence as well as physical and psychological abilities.

The Charlevoix Montessori Children's House is now training 15 preschoolers from two-and-a-half to four years of age, Ms. Donovan says.

"We are licensed for 23 children aged two-and-a-half to six in the building (lower level of the Congregational Church) and expect to be filled up by next September. We will be taking the younger children, aged two-and-a-half to three-and-a-half. We took two children in January and will probably take two or three more in February," she notes.

While Montessori education may seem new, it was actually introduced to this country in 1912, with one of the early schools being established by Alexander Graham Bell in his own home. After an initially enthusiastic reception, interest in the Montessori approach soon waned as the dominant emphasis of education shifted from the development of intellectual skills to life adjustment, and from the need for limits in the classroom to permissiveness. Montessori was reintroduced to the United States in 1958, and because of the changes in the psychological and educational climate, there has followed a resurgence of interest in its system of teaching, bringing about over 2,000 schools. The first Montessori public elementary school was opened in Cincinnati in 1975.

The Charlevoix Montessori Children's House is, of course, a private school. The tuition is $750 a school year for three hours a day five days a week. The school schedule is synchronized with that of the public schools insofar as opening and closing dates and vacation times are concerned. Even snow days are the same.

"We have children from various economic levels," Ms. Donovan points out. "Parents have different priorities and exercise them in different ways as far as their children are concerned."

Ms. Donovan undertook the Children's House as a business venture, borrowing money from the bank with which to buy necessary equipment, building her own storage shelves, and fencing in the playground in a workbee with a group of parents, but behind all this was her desire to provide a service to the parents of Charlevoix children.

"Everyone has been most cooperative," the directress says with enthusiasm. "The Congregational Church people were especially cooperative. They had to do some renovating before we could get a license.

"We spent a lot of time preparing the environment (class room) so that everything would be scaled to children's size. It is important that they have things to work with that they can handle and carry around. The regular Montessori equipment came from Holland."

Ms. Donovan screens her children before accepting them into the school. While it is not necessary that they be totally toilet-trained, they must talk enough to make their needs known, she says.

What kind of a child is a Montessori-trained child? The aim is for them to develop self-discipline, self-knowledge, and independence, as well as enthusiasm for learning, an organized approach to problem-solving, and academic skills.

Ms. Donovan started out on a business career but soon discovered that she wanted to work with children, and Montessori was her answer. She trained with the Michigan Montessori Program out of Detroit and served her internship working with Sharon Kendall at the Petoskey Montessori School. Lily Donaldson assists Ms. Donovan at the school.

Ms. Donovan is the wife of Bill Vogel, local radio personality. They have one son, Evan, now a year old, who was just two months old when his mother started putting her Montessori project together. The mother of one of the students cares for Evan while Ms. Donovan is at school.

Further information about the Charlevoix Montessori Children's House may be obtained from Ms. Donovan at 547-4614, or by writing Post Office Box 252.

Watch what you buy

Are leftover holiday bills and taxes about to "consume" you? Stop - and take a look at how you spend monthly wages.

The fewer spare dollars you have the more important it is to decide how to pay for your needs such as food, clothing, house payment, etc. After making your basic needs payments then decide how to use whatever money you have left.

Comparative grocery shopping and buying on sales are two ways that you can actually count the pennies you save.

Grocery buying is done so often that it needs particular scrutiny. Plan your meals and prepare shopping lists before leaving home. Then stick to your list! Not only does it save you money, it also saves you time.

Compare prices per unit for various quantity purchases. It may not always be cheaper to buy the larger package.

And remember that frequently the more we have an hand, the larger amounts lamily members consume – perhaps not necessary far good nutrition.

Private store brands may be cheaper than national brands. Similarly, middle or lower grades of canned goods can save money, are usually just as nutritious and may serve your needs just as well. Learn names and grades af canned goods – both national and private brands. Buy nutrition, not empty calories like pop and candy ta stretch those limited food dollars.

It may be cheaper to prepared foods at home rather than buying the comparable convenience foods. If you have freezer or other storage space, prepare in quantity when you get a good buy ar when you have both time and energy.

For household goods and clothing shopping, sales can mean real savings, but you need to understand the vnrious kinds of sales. "Clearance" sales offer leftover stock at the end al a seasan. Now may be a good time to purchase winter clothing for next year if it is not atyle dated.

If possible, watch for items and their prices you are interested in before the sales and then compare. This helps you know how good a bargain yau are getting.

"Annual" sales are usually hold twice a year and offer reductians of 10 ta 15 percent on branded merchandise. Examples are coats, bedding and white goods, furniture and floor coverings sales in January and August.

"Closeout" sale items need to be examined with care. If they are discontinued models or patterns they may affer good values bu such areas as floor coverings and furniture. However, if they are "dogs" which have not sold because of poor design or construction, beware.

I FEEL LIKE THE CONSUMED..."

When you lose the roof...

Kay DePuy stapped in front af the house Saturday afternoon to take Judy and Katie on a shopping trip downtown.

"Half the people in Narthern Michigan are on their roofs today," she called up ta me as I stood on our porch roof, snow shovel in hand. I paused a moment ta await the inevitable rejoinder: "The other hall have fallen off," but it never came.

Actually, I think Kay underestimated the number of raof shovelers Saturday, a sport that suddenly has become mare attractive to Northern Michigan residents than cross-country skiing or writing sarcastic letters to the editor about the road commission.

And with good reason. The heavy snows of the past few weeks are beginning to take their toll in collapsed roofs all over the Narth. And when you've lost your roof, you've lost just about everything.

Actually, the roof over the main portion of our house usually stays fairly clean, thanks to our super-ineffective attic insulation. Heat rises from the house, zips through the loose insulation between the joists in the attic and races up through the roof boards and shingles effectively protecting us against accumulations of snow and ice – and hang the expense in higher fuel bills.

The unheated porches are another matter, and before Danny and I tackled the problem Saturday, snow and ice had accumulated four feet deep in places. And although we haven't had any above freezing temperatures recently, it was packed fairly solid.

I invited Danny, who is pushing seven, to join the fun after I discovered that the snow was so deep he would have trouble getting too close to the edge. Furthermore, I figured that one day he'll have to take aver the roof-shoveling by himself, while the old man shouts instructions through the bedroom window. It's high time he got used to It.

Between the twa af us, I figure we removed between 5 and 10 tons of snow from the roof in about two hours. We also chipped 1,000 pounds of ice from the eaves, including some monstrous icicles, which Danny has canverted into torpedoes in the land of make-believe. They are stored in his own private ammunition dump (which happens to be my woodpile) and woe betide any allen vessel which happens to venture down Dixon Avenue.

Shoveling can become tiresome work for a seven-year-old and at one point Danny, who had been joined by two of his alder sisters, expressed an interest in exploring the higher elevations of the house.

I looked around me at the cushiony whiteness and figured why not. Even if they fell, they have a hard time hurting themselves. So the three kids took off up a fairly well-packed gutter and visited areas of the rool that would have been off limits at any other season.

When the job was finished, I returned downstairs to learn that I had shoveled a mountain af snow onto the front walk, so my labors were far from over. But before I tackled it, I summoned my three roof-top adventurers.

"Have you ever had an uncontrollable urge to jump off the roof?" I asked.

Three heads nodded.

"Well, now's your chance. Hurry upstairs, go out the window, scoot around the roof until you get to the front, then sit down and jump. I'll even catch you if you want."

Jennifer, Allison and Dan each jumped twice, landing like acrobatic cats on the snow pile. I was going to try it myself, but I thought of how funny it would look in the papers: "Father of 4 Breaks Neck in Snowy Plunge – Madness Attributed to Cabin Fever."

Erma Bombeck

Equal Opportunity Employer

Today's women get ragged to death about their push-button world. Men like to remind them of the days when their mothers baked from scratch, carried wood, and the only thing self-cleaning was the cat.

In answer to these accusations, I can only reply, "Was there ever a leisure suit for women? Do we have the counterpart of a lounge chair called Lazy-Bay? Was there ever a style of shoes made just for us called Loafers?"

Despite the impact of the women's mavement, a recent survey showed that 90 percent of the wives and 85 percent af the husbands interviewed said wamen still do most of the household chores.—

I have never understood that. who says a man compromises his masculinity if he puts a toilet seat down? Whatever happened to that wonderful ald adage, "He's not heavy, Father, he's my dog going to the vet." Why do most men live by my husband's philosaphy on garbage, "You make it. I'll carry it to the can!"

Samehow, I don't think we're getting through to the men. Let me tell you how housework was explained to me and maybe it will seem attractive to you.

Housework is creative. Especially when you do it right. You'll never know how good you an feel until you've spent $26 and three haurs making a casserole of goose eggs, imported eel and lettuce leaves from Taiwan only to have your wife sniff and say, "I had it for lunch."

Housework prolongs your life. Studies show that waxing, scrubbing, flushing, dusting, scouring, polishing, and mopping actually reduces your chance of heart attack and you can outlive your working wife. Or maybe it will just seem longer.

Housework gives you the freedom to control your own time ... as long as you get the kids to school by 9:00, Frank to the orthodontist by 10:00, pick Eric up at noon, Debbie to baton twirling class by 3:00, cookies to Scouts by 4:30, dinner in the oven by 5:00, 36 empty egg cartons to Sue's house by 6:00, and antibiotics into Marsha at 10:00, 6:00 and 2:00 a.m.

A reader who is convinced housework will never catch on with men told me a few Sundays ago she put a roast in the oven while the men watched a football game in the family room just off the kitchen.

A few hours later when she returned she opened the door to huge, black clauds of greasy smoke. Coughing her way to the kitchen she passed her three sons and husband who were hunched over, hands cupping eyes blinking through the smoke.

Housework is not an Equal Opportunity Employer. If this bothers you, It should.

Ann, be careful when you rerun columns

Dear Ann Landers:

You may be embarrassed to learn that I keep a file on cats. But I mean you no harm.

Last month your column contained a letter from a woman who claimed to be the mother of 3 cats, a Siamese and 2 Persians. She said the ancient Egyptians were very wise – they killed anyone who hated cats.

As I put her letter into my cat file, I thumbed through some old cat clippings. And I discovered a letter that appeared in your column in 1972. Almost word for word, it is the same letter you printed 6 years later.

What's going on, Ann? Reruns are perfectly acceptable in the entertainment field, but they should be clearly labeled as such. You didn't tell your readers that the woman who urges death for all people who hate cats in 1978 is actually a reprint from 1972.

This is irresponsible, and could be frustrating for your readers, especially those of Egyptian descent. They could go looking for cat haters to murder in 1978 and not find any because they were all killed in 1972. Certainly the great number of cats in the world today indicates that cat haters have been in hiding and ineffective lately, if not downright dead.

Ann, I realize cat haters are far from the biggest problem threatening the world today, and it really doesn't matter much when they were wiped oul, as long as they are kept around from the pyramids. But you should beware of establishing a pattern af reruns that might damage your more important work.

For instance, it was only a few months ago that your column awoke readers to the devastating reality that many of them were, unwittingly, hanging their toilet paper incorrectly. This revelation had a traumatic effect on millions of homemakers who scurried to reverse their toilet paper rolls before being found out and publicly humiliated.

Historians will probably record this as the beginning of roll reversals in the American home. You can be proud of that, Ann.

But you should also realize that, for many people, it is difficult to fully grasp the complex concept which determines whether a roll of toilet paper should be unrolled with an underhand o averhand motion. It's a lot easier to understand why all cat haters should be shinxed to death.

So, Ann, you shauld be very careful about rerunning your toilet paper advice 6 years from now. If readers aren't told it's a rerun, they may misunderstand and think you have reversed yourself on roll reversals. Confusion and insecurity could result, with half the nation locking itsell inside the bathroom and refusing to open the door until determining what Ann Landers really wants – underhand or overhand.

Speaking of underhand motions, Ann, let's get back to your column about killing cat haters, 1978 version. Several people, especially my wife, called it to my attention. They knew I'd be interested because I've long insisted that cats are useless except for testing myths – is there really more than one way to skin one, do they always land on their feet, do they really have 9 lives, and so on.

You quoted the mother of the 3 cats as saying "I've always known in my heart of hearts that people who hate cats are not to be trusted. Such persons are invariably underhanded, mean and vicious. I have never met a cat hater who wasn't a chronic liar, a crook or a hypocrite."

Ann, my wife underlined that paragraph and spread it on my morning toast. As a sincere cat hater, I deny all the charges except the one about being underhanded, and of this one I am only recently guilty.

This is because I hurt my shoulder playing tennis last summer. Now, when a cat jumps an my sleeping face, I can no longer throw it overhand at the nearest wall. But underhand is better than a barelooted dropkick.

You are probably puzzled, Ann. If I hate cats so much, why have I always allowed them to live in my bome, sometimes as many as four at a time? It's because my wife loves cats and I was introduced to her by an archeologist who said he dug her. That's how ancient Egyptians are uncovered.

Too Much Heaven-
Nobody gets too much heaven no more
it's much harder to come by
I'm waitin in line
Nobody gets too much love any more
it's as high as a mountain
and harder to climb

You and me girl got a lot of love in stare and it flows through you and it flows through me and I love you so much more than my life
I can see me on forever
everything we are will never die
Love is such a beautiful thing
Oh you make my world a summer day are you just a dream to fade away

Nobody gets too much heaven no more
it's much harder to come by
I'm waitin in line
Nobody gets too much love any more
it's as high as a mountain
and harder to climb
You and me girl got a highway to the sky we can turn away from the night of day and the tears we had to pay you're my life and I see a new tomorrow
everything we are will never die
Love is such a beautiful thing when you're watching me from high above made for all to see our precious love

I never intended to write about this song. The charts have been Bee Gee saturated for a long time, and just how much falsettu can this nation take? But, on the other hand, no one can ignore the success of the brothers Gibb.

Songwriter magazine featured the Bee Gees several months ago and made mention of the fact that many of their songs are spontaneously composed while driving to and from various engagements. I should make such good use of my time...while carpooling the kids around town. Now, for the Bee Gees, another number one hit, with royalties donated to the children of the world via UNICEF. Being a pre-school advocate, that sort of tugged at my heart strings so I decided to listen. Believe me, it wasn't easy to transcribe this one. I hereby donate all my time and efforts to UNICEF.

The Bee Gees are right. One doesn't get too much heaven (no) any more. But then, did anyone ever or are we even supposed to expect it? Roberi Browiing didn't think sa when he wrote that "Man's reach must exceed his grasp or what's a heaven for?" I've always appreciated that thought. It's comforting in a frustrating sori of way.

All this restlessness and striving after, that we feel is so unique, is merely the legacy of our humanity. Personally, I've always felt an affinity toward the reaching out that life entails. That's the challenge and it doesn't bother me one bit. Also, it's comforiing ta note that if I find myself drumming my fingers against the fabric of life, so is everyone else.

The frustrating part lies in the realization that happiness is also elusive. In my more philasophical moods, I envision happiness as a series of plateaus. Like passages, plateaus are destined to be arrived at and passed through. The happiness we were just comfartable with is now found somewhere else in the form of a new person, a new possession, a new endeavnr. And each of those plateaus has everything to da with love. We're really not happy after all, unless we're loving or in love. But then, the love we just got into focus seems like a dream, ready to fade away in the next frame.

When the Bee Gees decided upon this song as their offering for the UNICEF concert, they couldn't have chasen a more universal theme. Love and happiness aren't easy to come by, but they're possible and a beautiful thing while we hold them. They're that taste of heaven that gives us a reason ta keep right on reaching past our grasp.

DNR reviews Indian fishing

Department of Natural Resources officials updated the Natural Resources Commission on the present status of Indian fishing in Michigan at its January meeting. The situation was reviewed so that the commission would be aware of what has happened in the dispute between local authorities and Michigan Indians since the governor and the DNR decided to address the issue in September, 1978. Early next month final oral urguments on the issue will be heard in U.S. District Caurt in Grand Rapids.

Here's a brief sketch of what the DNR has found since taking a claser look into the issue regarding Great Lakes fishing by Indians:

The Bay Mills Indians of the narthern Lower Peninsula and the Chippewa tribe in Sault Ste. Marie agreed to restrict the number af fish they harvested out of Lake Michigan following the governor's and the DNR's inquiries.

In late September four Indians were found violating their promise to not fish south of Emmet Caunty's Grad Hart. They were caught fishing in Grand Traverse Bay and found guilty on seven counts and fined $175.

A nine-member Bay Mills Conservation Committee was formed ta testify at the hearing. The charges were dropped an one of the four who were charged, but two ather Indians failed to attend the hearing and one member requested a trial by jury. To date, no further action has been taken by the Conservation Committee.

A few months later more than half a millian pounds of fish were caught by Indians in the Great Lakes. Those figures were reported by the DNR's Law Enforcement Division.

Meanwhile, the DNR agreed to pravide training for Indian wardens in the enforcement af canservation laws. To date, however, neither tribe has asked to help train Indian wardens.

In an incident which occurred an Dec. 5 Antrim County prosecutors are preparing to charge seven Bay Mills Indians with violations af various state laws. These offenses included simple assault, trespassing, off-road vehicle violations, possession of illegal fishing devices, gill net fishing in Grand Traverse Bay and taking fish unlawfully.

On Dec. 27 six additional affidavits were issued when 14 Bay Mills members were charged with violating the agreement.

In the Upper Peninsula the L'Anse band of Chippewa Indians continue to fish in Great Lakes waters adjacent tu their reservations.

There are twa major issues involved in this dispute: The U.S. claims that there is an implied reservation of the right to fish in the Great Lakes for the Indians. The State of Michigan denies that the Indians have any more right to the state's waters than any other Michigan citizen.

A final oral argument is scheduled before Federal District Judge Noel P. Fox on Feb. 2 at 9:30 a.m. in Grand Rapids.

101 deaths, 211 marriages and 288 births in Charlevoix County

One hundred and one death certificates were issued by the Charlevoix County Clerk during 1978. This is the same number issued by the clerk during 1977.

Another repeat figure is that for marriage licenses, which numbered 211 both years.

However, more babies were born in the county in 1978 than in 1977. There were 288 births in 1978 compared with 189 births in 1977.

The three magistrates in Charlevoix County reported that they performed a total of 33 marriages. Magistrate Marylin Blauman performed 18, Magistrate Pat Conkle performed nine, and Magistrate Howard Talboys performed six.

Among the people married by Magistrate Blauman were her sister, her son, her ex-brother-in-law, a member of the cast of "Fiddler on the Roof", and a pilot flying from Beaver Island to Charlevoix.

Why a 7th hour?

Editor:

I would like ta voice my opinion on what's been happening at the middle School here in Charlevoix, regarding class schedules. My seventh grader cume home and informed me that he would be missing somewhere between 5 and 10 minutes of every class he now has in order to make available a 7th hour, in which he may choose another elective! I am not very happy hearing that such important subjects as muth, science, social studies, and English are being cut so that he can devote even more time tu learning how to sew, cook, draw, ur sing!

My only question is, why weren't the parents let in on this before it all took place? Does anyone from the school board wish to respond? Thank You.

Respectfully,
Judy Donnelly (a concerned parent)

Gaylord takes giant step toward title

Gaylord moved one step closer to winning the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference basketball title here Friday night by beating Charlevoix, 57-43.

The Blue Devils are undefeated in eight conference games, and enjoy a two and a half game lead over Rogers City. The Hurons game with Boyne City Friday was postponed due to inclement weather.

If there was any question about Gaylord's ability to win on the road, it was answered Friday. The Blue Devils played the conference's best teams at home in the first round. But Friday the Blue Devils proved they could win on the road, too.

Both Charlevoix and Gaylord experienced peaks and valleys Friday. Gaylord stormed out to a 17-6 first quarter lead, but then faltered as Charlevoix cut the deficit to six, 22-16, at half. The Rayders tied the contest early in the third quarter, 26-26, but could never grab the lead. In fact, the only time Charlevoix was ahead in the contest was when Ken Otmanowski scored early to give the Rayders a 2-0 advantage. Gaylord then rattled off 14 unanswered points.

Charlevoix was hindered by turnovers and fouls. The Rayders were guilty of 26 fouls, enabling Gaylord to attempt 36 foul shots. Meanwhile, the Rayders, who have been hitting 75 percent of their free throws this season, could only make 50 percent Friday - nine of 18.

Charlevoix had been riding the crest of a three game winning streak and had moved to within one game of third place. The Rayders are now 3-5 in the conference and 4-5 overall.

High point man for Charlevoix Friday night was Pat Schmidt with 16 points. Bob Plumm was the only other Rayder to score in double figures as he had 10 points. For Gaylord, Jerry Garrett had 21 points and Doug Fleming added 11.

The Rayders will resume conference play Friday at Cheboygan. Charlevoix will play a non-league contest Tuesday with Onaway.

Volleyball team unbeaten...

The Charlevoix Rayder volleyball team won its second straight match of the season Thursday beating Cheboygan

It wasn't easy, though.

After rolling to a 15-6 triumph in the first game, the Rayders went flat. Cheboygan took the next two games by scores of 15-3 and 15-6 and it appeared the Chiefs might have the momentum to wrap up the match after four games.

Charlevoix, however, regrouped and demolished the Chiefs 15-1 to set the stage for the deciding fifth game. The fifth game was a repeat of the fourth as the Rayders scored a 15-2 win to improve their Michigan-Huron Shores Conference record to 2-0.

The JV squad dropped its match against Cheboygan 3-15, 15-11 and 6-15. The JV's are 0-2.

Charlevoix will be back in action Wednesday when they host Grayling.

...and so is ski team

Look out for the Charlevoix Rayder ski team!

The Rayders crushed East Jordan and Mancelona last week in a triangular meet at Shanty Creek.

In the boys division it was Charlevoix 20 (low score wins), East Jordan 68 and Mancelona 96. In the girls division, it was Charlevoix 49, East Jordan 64 and Mancelona 74

For Charlevoix, Mark Iagnell took a first place in both the boys slalom and giant slalom events. Pat Stangis and Bill Fels placed second and third in the slalom while Jeff Cockfield and Stangis finished second and third in the giant slalom.

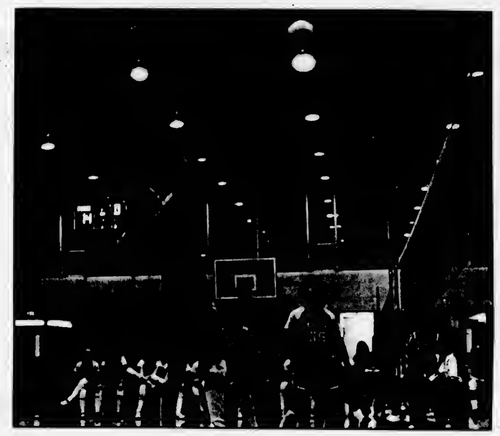
Hope Malpeli finished first in both events in the girls division. Teammates Kristen Iagnell and Sandy Miller placed second and third in the giant slalom while Kathy Lockman of Mancelona and June Hawkins of East Jordan finished second and third in the slalom.

Elzinga, Vincent star

Sue Elzinga of Ellsworth and Julie Vincent of Central Lake continue to play a vital role in the success of the Lake Superior State College women's basketball team

The Lakers are 5-2 on the season with Elzinga and Vincent both scoring at a 12.4 point per game clip. Elzinga, a sophomore, is also averaging 12.4 rebounds per contest, tops on the team. Vincent, a freshman, is second to Elzinga in rebounding.

Chris Lehmon sets the play up...



...and Melindo Klooster comes in to finish it off.

Andrews appointed to committees

Newly elected state Rep. Steve Andrews (R-Gaylord) has been appointed vice chairman of the House Marine Affairs Committee and o nember of four other standing House Committees.

Andrews, elected to office in November, will assume his new duties when the House reconvenes at the end of January. In addition to his vice chairmanship, Andrews will serve on the important Judiciary and Education Committees, as well as on the Committees on Military and Veterons Affairs and Senior Citizens and Retirement.

"I am very pleased with my committee assignments," Andrews said. "I consider it an honor for a freshman legislator to be named vice chairman of a committee, and the Judiciary and Education Committees are two of the most powerful and influential committees in the House.

"Each of my committees is concerned with an area that touches all of our lives in some way and there is important and challenging work to be done on each one."

Andrews said he is particularly interested in working on a new juvenile code and a comprehensive prison program.

"I think a reemphasis of basic education in our schools is critical of the long term well-being of our state," Andrews said. "And I will support mandatory progress testing and testing for graduation from high school in the Education Committee.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS MAINTAIN A TIMELESS VALIDITY

A leadar called Moses achieved his ranown
By ascending Mount Sinai alone,
To receive the Commandments the Lord handed down
And recorded on tablets of stone.
Now those ten rules of conduct reflected the times,
And to parents and neighbors gave heed,
Plus instructions for worship; while various crimes
Were condemned, with the evils of greed.
And though time marches on, human natura remains,
As the Church of your choice will convey;
So the same Ten Commandments the Bible contains
Are as valid as ever today!

The moral law is intended for all mankind, and it has never been abrogated nor repealed.
-- William C. Proctor

"These are the words which the Lord hath commanded, that ya should do them."

Is District Court the proper place to debate alleged safety hazards of nuclear plants?

By TOM DAMMANN

Whether or not the 90th District Court is the proper forum in which to debate the threat to life and health, which allegedly is posed by nuclear power plants, was argued before District Judge David W. Fershee, this week.

The question arose at a pre-trial hearing in the case of 14 persons who were arrested for trespassing last Dec. 2, on the property of Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Nuclear Power Plant.

The 14 had participated in a demonstration before the plant, sponsored by a Traverse City based group calling itself NOMAD (Northern Michigan Alternative Developments) demanding that the plant be permanently shutdown, because "it is the most dangerous nuclear power plant in the U.S." a spokesperson explained at that time.

Big Rock is the fourth nuclear power plant to be built in the country and the first licensed to use plutonium. Area physicians, and scientists elsewhere in the nation, have questioned its safety, but this was the first public demonstration.

The 14, now 13 as the "Big Rock 14" pled innocent to the charge, met at the pre-trial hearing their attorney James M. Olson of Traverse City, demanded a jury trial.

Olson argued that a jury has a right to determine their own welfare in their own community.

At the hearing's end Judge Fershee gave Charlevoix County Prosecutor Scott Beatty until Feb. 1 to file a motion to limit the defendants to a case of simple trespassing, a misdemeanor.

He acknowledged the need to be "enlightened" on the issues and gave Olson until March 1 to file a brief on the law as to why the constitutional and "necessity" defenses should be heard by the jury.

Prosecutor Beatty was given until April 1 to respond to Olson's brief.

Court observers thought the case might get to trial before the end of April.

Several times during the hearing Judge Fershee expressed concern that the two to three weeks which Olson estimated the trial would require, plus the calling of some 100 prospective jurors would involve time and costs which would constitute an unfair burden on local taxpayers.

But both Fershee and Beatty stated that the social and legal issues involved in the case are of vital local concern.

Persons familiar with Big Rock, who ask for anonymity, say the Big Rock 14 case must now assume urgency in view of last week's Nuclear Regulatory Commission's (NRC) repudiation of its 1975 study which stated that the chance of a serious accident at a nuclear reactor was as unlikely as a meteor hitting a large city or once in a million years.

"The NRC now admits it doesn't know how dangerous these nuclear plants are, so it means the people have a right to learn and judge for themselves," they said.

Olson indicated that he will argue for the right of the 14 to assert the constitutional rights for free speech and the right to show that their entry on Big Rock property was necessary and justified because of the imminent danger of nuclear power plants, including Big Rock, and because the entry was a peaceful one.

He said these were reasonable acts as distinguished from the student take over of university buildings during the 1960's.

He said that under Common Law a person had a right to cross into another person's property during the agricultural era to prevent that person's cattle from straying over and eating his crops.

Olson argued that the Common Law can be applied to new facts in a rapidly changing society "like ours" and that consequently the people today have the right to enter the property of a nuclear power operator to inform him of the dangers for the community inherent in his operation.

"The NRC's repudiation of the earlier study substantiates even further the dangers of Big Rock," Olson said in a telephone interview.

He explained that the reasons the case is in District Court is because under Michigan law trespassing is a misdemeanor that must be tried in District Court.

The charge carries a maximum penalty of 90 days in jail, a $100 fine, or both.

Asked if he would appeal should Judge Fershee decide against his clients, Olson replied, "The defendants right to appeal is worthless unless they are permitted to present the underlying facts regarding nuclear power."

Gofman won't testify in case

Plans for the legal defense of 14 anti-nuclear demonstrators charged with trespassing at the Big Rock Nuclear Plant received a setback last week when Dr. John Gofman, noted medical and nuclear physicist, refused to come to give testimony on the safety hazards which the demonstrators had been protesting.

Dr. Gofman, who's early work in nuclear physics helped make Uranium 233 available for use in nuclear power plants like Big Rock, said in a letter to the demonstrators that in almost all cases of alleged trespassing at nuclear power plants across the U.S. "judges have held that expert testimony concerning the hazards of nuclear power cannot be presented to the jury."

The scientist, now nationally active in raising concerns about nuclear safety, explained that attempts to present what is called a "competing harms defense" in such cases have been futile. He cited as examples Sam Lovejoy's trial in Massachusetts, the Trojan Decommissioning Alliance trial in Oregon, the Rocky Flats trial in Colorado, and the Diablo Canyon "20" trial in Arizona.

The attorney for the Big Rock defendants, Jim Olson, responded to Gofman's letter by saying that "there is a sense of truth about what Gofman says: "and that he is 'nut uver optimistic' about the courts allowing expert testimony on the competing harms defense.

Olson also added that "in order for the courts to address such issues citizens must take their issues to them. Just because courts in other states have not responded does not necessarily mean that Michigan Courts will not...If the courts do not respond, then at least citizens have tried and they will know it is necessary to move on to other forms of protest."

Recall petitions submitted

Backers of a drive to oust directors of the strike plagued Top O' Michigan Rural Electric Cooperative turned over petitions containing 4,210 signatures to the board's secretary, Arthur Biehl, Friday afternoon.

According to recall proponents, 3,100 signatures were needed to force a vote of cooperative members on whether or not the nine member board should be retained.

Ed May, who spearheaded the drive, charged that the board "has continuously failed to reasonably negotiate with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 876 to establish a labor contract and settle the present strike."

Twenty-five clerical workers, who belong to the local, struck Top O' Michigan in October after failing to obtain a contract. Lineman and maintenance workers, who belong to the same union, have refused to cross picket lines. The cooperative has hired non-union personnel to keep service going.

Top O' Michigan officials have reported, however, that several power lines have been damaged since October causing power outages in Emmet, Charlevoix, Cheboygan and Kalkaska counties. The most recent outages occurred Sunday. The cooperative has offered a $10,000 reward to persons offering information leading to the convictions on a felony charge.

It was also reported that May received two telephone threats on Saturday. The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department is investigating the case.

A special meeting will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Boyne City gymnasium with representatives Steve Andrews, Charles Varnum and Mitch Irwin expected to be present to answer co-op members questions about the prolonged strike.

The ad hoc committee organized to spearhead the recall drive announced it will still accept outstanding petitions to make sure enough signatures have been collected to force a vote.

WHEN Charlevoix County officials contacted the high school and asked if any 18 year-old student would be interested in making $3 an hour for shoveling snow off the roof of the county building, the response was less than enthusiastic. In fact, no one responded. Sally Geer, a student at North Central Michigan College, accepted the job and Wednesday morning she went to work to earn some spending money.

Council seeks clerk

Besides looking for a 2nd Ward councilman, the Charlevoix City Council is also seeking a city clerk.

Nobody ran for the position in the November general election and the City Charter makes it mandatory the city have a clerk.

Council had City Manager Norm Gaffney draft a job description for the position.

Gaffney said a clerk must "perform specialized administrative and clerical work in the preparation and maintenance of official city records, reports, ordinances and proceedings of the city commission; register, voters and conduct elections; and perform related work as required."

Gaffney added that the clerk may be called upon to do a number of things, like: administer the oath of office to city officials; attend meetings of the city commission and record minutes of meetings; prepare city commission proceedings for publication and publish ordinances adopted; publish notices for public hearings; sign checks, contracts and other municipal records; issue various permits and licenses; supervise conduct of elections, maintaining accurate registration file and ordering election supplies; furnish and accept nominating petitions; operate typewriter, adding machine, calculator, and duplicating machine; and act as a secretary for the board of review.

The city manager noted that a clerk should have "considerable knowledge" of modern office practices, methods and procedures and have the ability to prepare accurate written records and reports. Also, he said, a clerk must have the ability "to establish and maintain satisfactory working relationships with the public and other employees.

Gaffney said candidates for the position should have "reasonable experience" in bookkeeping, purchasing, marketing or general office work and have graduated from an accredited high school.

Windows damaged

It will cost the City of Charlevoix $550 to replace two 4 x 8 windows at Mt. McSauba that were shot at nearly two weeks ago.

Each window has two gunshot holes and since the city's insurance has a $1,000 deductible, the city will have to pay the expense.

A report was filed with the city police. The city police department is also investigating vandalism to an East Jordan school bus which was parked outside the Charlevoix High School gymnasium past week during a freshman basketball game.

An estimated $200 of damage was done as two rear-view mirrors, fiberglass turn signals and one headlight were destroyed.

Consumers customers may get estimated bills

Because of heavy snowfalls this month, many Consumers Power customers may receive estimated gas and electric bills this month and possibly even in February, R.G. Dahlquist, Area Manager of the utility's Cheboygan Area, said today.

Deep snow means that many meters have become virtually inaccessible to the company's meter readers, Dahlquist reported.

Customers will be able to determine if they receive an estimated bill since all estimates are clearly shown by the symbol E in the code column in the meter reading section of the bill. The estimate will automatically be adjusted at the next actual meter reading, according to Dahlquist.

Pinpointing property that's just a few years from development takes careful research on population, planning, traffic, zoning, plus a sound bunch. Too close to town and one may be priced out of the market, too far away and appreciation may take a long time. In buying raw land, figure what the same money could earn elsewhere during the same period of time in alternative investments. One possible source of help is income from leasing to someone such as a driving range, recreational operator, or farmer.

Good quality land always has value. When selling later, it is best to be able to offer land with pre-approved zoning, drainage and development plans.

Real estate, whether it be single family, multi-family, land or rental income producing, can be a fruitful investment. MSU scientists testing nitrite alternative in bacon and other meats

EAST LANSING – Consumers who enjoy bacon with their eggs would probably be disappointed if bacon were wiped off the market. Therefore, Michigan State University food scientists are testing a workable alternative to nitrite in bacon and other cured meats.

Nitrite is an additive used by food processors to prevent the growth of botulism organisms and to maintain flavor and color in cured meat products. However, recent research has shown nitrite may react to form substances which can cause cancer. By law, any carcinogenic substance must be removed from the U.S. food supply. If nitrite were banned, consumers of cured meat products would no longer be protected against botulism because no proven alternative to nitrite has been available.

James Price and Keu Stevenson, associate professors in the MSU Department of Food Science and Human Nutrition, are testing the effects of adding potassium sorbate to bacon. Potassium sorbate, or sorbic acid, is already used to preserve some cheeses and processed fruits. The MSU research indicates that potassium sorbate does prevent the development of the botulism organism and other micro-organisms.

Is potassium sorbate safe for human consumption? According to Stevenson, it is.

"In other studies, potassium sorbate was fed to test animals in large doses – comprising 5 to 10 percent of their daily diets," he points out. "The only major side-effect noted in the animals was weight loss, and that was because the chemical didn't taste good in high concentrations.

"The study also revealed that potassium sorbate is metabolized and passes through the body with other food wastes. It does not remain and build up in body tissue," Stevenson said.

Price and Stevenson have added various combinations of potassium sorbate and nitrite to bacon to determine how they affect taste, color and shelf-life.

Currently, using a low level of nitrite in bacon is acceptable. Government regulatory agencies have proposed that the amount of nitrite used in bacon be reduced to 40 parts per million, and that proposal could take effect in May 1979. However, since that statement was issued by the government, new research from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology has indicated that nitrite at any level may not be allowable.

Consequently, the MSU scientists also tested bacon using potassium sorbate alone – with no nitrite at all. Results indicate the bacon was safe to eat, but there was a subtle difference in taste without nitrite.

In addition, tests showed that potassium sorbate speeded discoloration – shelf-life of the product was reduced. "At the end of 60 days, the bacon treated with potassium sorbate alone was rancid and inedible," Price says.

But that isn't all bad. Potassium sorbate as an alternate to nitrite may keep bacon on the market. If nitrite is banned, consumers who want to continue enjoying bacon with their morning eggs will have to make a trade-off, according to Price.

"Bacon will just look and taste a little different and will have to be eaten a little sooner after processing or purchasing," he explains.

Cribbage tournament: A way to beat cabin fever

The first Thursday evening of the New Year has a special meaning for a group of Charlevoix men.

Since 1931, there has been the opening date of the Mason-Odd Fellows' cribbage tournament.

The tournament runs for ten weeks, at the end of which the losers treat the winners to a banquet which is usually prepared by one of the members.

Sims Baker, secretary-treasurer of the tournament, says that in the 48 years the tournament has been running, the Odd Fellows have won 27 times and the Masons have won 21 times. Baker himself is a newcomer to the group. He didn't start until 1937.

"When they got started, in the depression days, it gave the men something to do," Baker explains. "They paid five cents a night to play. Now it's 25 cents."

Every Thursday night during these winter months, the group of about 30 men may be found at either the Masonic Hall or the American Legion Hall fingering their cards and moving the pegs in their boards.

It's not a closed tournament for Masons and Odd Fellows. Members of these lodges have been known to recruit estimable cribbage players from outside their memberships to play in the tournament.

"We have a good time," Baker says. "Some of the players are quite serious but others talk and laugh. It's a game of both skill and luck, but you have to know how to play the cards to win."

The Bergmann family has the largest representation in the tournament, with seven or eight steady players, including three teenagers, according to Baker. Others he named "off the cuff" were Hap Cunningham, John LaRue, Glenn Pemberton, Bob Heise, Ron Geer, Dick Fochtman, Russell Lewis, Oliver Garver, Ed Swanson, and George Smith.

While Cribbage equipment is simple, a board and cards, the boards may become works of art such as the one Baker made from birdseye maple and another from myrtle wood.

"They're not hard to make, Baker explains, "You just plane the board and drill holes. One man made a dozen or more for the Masonic Lodge."

For those not familiar with cribbage, it is described as a game in which points are formed from combinations of the counting values of the cards dealt to each player. The points are then tallied by moving pegs on the boards. The object of the game is to score 121 points, but the game may be set at 61 points. A standard deck of 52 cards is used.

The game is attributed to one Sir John Suckling, who lived in England from 1609 to 1642, but who somehow found time in his short 33 years to invent the pastime that has lasted over 300 years.

Thursday night the tournament attracted its largest crowd when eight tables were in play.

For the second week, the Masons topped their opponents to trim 43 points from the Odd Fellow's lead, which is now at 633 points.

John LaRue was high for the Odd Fellows with 952 points. Robert Wise, Sr., had 941 for the Masons.

Tournament site this week will be the American Legion post home.

All cribbage players are invited to participate in the tournament which reaches its half-way mark this week.

Larry Finck watches an opponent play a card during recent match, at the Masonic Hall.

Oliver Garver studies his hand and counts the points before deciding what card to throw in the crib.

Meter reader devices being installed in Charlevoix

City Manager Normnn M. Gaffney says the installation of outdoor meter reading devices will get into high gear this month.

The Charlevoix City Council approved a resolution in 1977 which requires all citizens to have the outdoor meter reader installed. The coast is $18 per billed for 12 months at $1.50 per month.

According to Gaffney many housewives object to having men going through their homes who read or service meters or public utilities.

"In many cases, the meter reader must go through the living room and, in slushy weather, there is danger of leaving tracks on the rug," Gaffney said. "In many cases, the meters are placed in spots that are difficult for the meter reader to reach.

"Also there are times when people are not at home and the meter cannot be read. This occurs quite frequently with so many housewives having employment."

The device has been perfected and can be fitted onto any of the water meters, Gaffney said. The actual meter is placed on the outside of the house so it is not necessary for the meter reader to enter the home.

To expedite the installation so it is convenient please call City Hall and advise what time is most convenient. Gaffney added that the city would like to make all possible installations before inclement weather sets in.

'The Immigrants' enjoyable

Moved by deep love, a man is courageous
And with frugality, a man becomes generous
And he who does not desire to be ahead of the world becomes the leader of the world.
—Lao Tzu and Chang Tzu
The Natural Way of Lao Tzu

There is a theme to "The Immigrants" recent best seller by Howard Fast and perhaps it is best summarized in the preceding quotation.

The story of the immigrants is an epic tale of Dan-Lavette, second generation of Italian descent in California. If the theme depicts humility in the face of success, Dan Lavette does not. It is only in the evolution of his rise and fall as California business tycoon, that it becomes obvious that the Chinese have an insight into human nature which one ought to subscribe to before biting off a chunk of ancient history.

If we are condemned to relive history as a result of not learning from it, then Dan Lavette ought to have put the consultations of Fenh Wo, his Chinese financial director, to better advantage before embarking on any endeavors, business or personal. Or he might have consulted with his Chinese mistress. She had a handle on the situation from the very beginning. Or with his horoscope if all else failed.

Dan Lavette had love to give if personal gain had not prevailed. He had generosity if his frugality hadn't fallen by the wayside and he probably could have become leader of at least his own empire had he not desired it so fervently. In truth, the fact that he salvages any good whatsoever out of rubble of self-ruination is not by virtue of his own enterprise.

Regardless of any admiration or lack of it, awarded to Dan, his wife, Jean, or his mistress, May Ling, the story moves right along as though predestined for its conclusion. It is a good story which almost immediately establishes a sense of intimacy with the characters and facility with the plot. Perhaps because of its predicability, the reading is easy and interest is maintained until the last page.

Is there an old Chinese proverb that says "the best stories are they that don't put upon honored reader too heavily"? If there isn't let's make one up. "The Immigrants" was just plain enjoyable reading.

Welcome February

"Hey! By the time the Courier comes out again, we'll have one full week of February behind us. Then there'll be only three weeks left until the beginning of March. And March, for heaven's sake, is almost synonymous with spring, isn't it? I remember one year when I was living in the Detroit area that I had my garden planted by March 19. It was so warm I took off my shirt when I spaded the backyard and got an awful sunburn."

These are some of the mental acrobatics I go through every day lately in an attempt to put the winter of 1978-79 behind me. I look at the calendar and try to reduce the remaining chunks of rotten winter weather into manageable, bit size pieces that can be easily digested one at a time.

Although March can be a humdinger, I figure if we can make it to the first of March, we've almost got it licked. Or at least we can let March take care of itself. When it snows in March, you know that it won't last long, whereas a November or December snow may hang around for months.

Furthermore, life is easier in the North as the days grow longer. Although the change is miniscule from day to day, we are now enjoying several more minutes of daylight – both at the beginning and end of the day – than we did in December.

So welcome February, the month of lovers. You never looked better.

Do you have an ice pick in the back of one of your kitchen drawers? Probably not. If you're like the rest of us, you probably threw it out when you changed from an icebox to a refrigerator.

But ice picks have been hot items in many stores the past few days as freakish weather has resulted in a build-up of heavy ice on the eaves of almost every heated building in Northern Michigan.

I tried to loosen our glacier last week by tapping it with a screw-driver and hammer. The results were discouraging.

Then Clyde Whaley of Petoskey recommended – of all things – an ice pick. He said he was having his eaves done and suggested the worker try an ice pick when other tools failed. Presto! The ice broke up like magic.

So last Saturday I found a hardware store which had boxes of ice picks piled up by the cash register and bought one for 98 cents. The front of the house is now virtually ice-free for the first time in weeks. There is something about the shape of a bonafide ice pick that goes right to the heart of the problem, sending crack lines through the ice in all directions.

You have to be careful, though, because ice picks are made of springy steel and they like to bounce around if you don't have a good grip on them. It might not be a bad idea to wear a pair of safety goggles.

I was surprised to find that little pools of water had collected on the steepest gutters behind the ice pack because it had no place to go. It is little wonder that damp spots had begun to appear on the walls of upstairs bedrooms.

And while we're on the weather, have you noticed that Charlevoix County roads have showed a marked improvement in recent weeks? On given days they are equal to – or sometimes better than – Emmet County roads, which is something for our new Engineer-Manager Fred Welch to crow about.

There was a time in the 1950's when Charlevoix County roads were plowed better than any in the state. Perhaps we will see a rebirth of that golden era. Wouldn't it be nice?

And wouldn't it be nice if the Charlevoix street crews took pity on us and started shaving back the high snowbanks at intersections?

You are literally taking your life into your hands to attempt to turn onto U.S. 31 from any side street on the north or south sides of town.

It's OK if you drive a pick-up truck or a van and ride high enough to see over the banks.

It's quite another story if you're in a low-slung, road-hugging gas-guzzler that is scarcely higher than a skate board.

It is a miracle we haven't had more serious accidents than we have had, considering the speed of most vehicles on U.S. 31.

Sophisticated report cards

Report cards have certainly become sophisticated since the computers took over.

A simple S (for satisfactory) and U (for unsatisfactory) has given way to a student identification number, a printout of the class schedule and attendance record, a grade code, a comment code, and an instant replay of grades by terms and semesters.

"Well, 976553411892," I said to my son, "We have a lot to talk about."

"Just call me 97655," he laughed. (It was to be the last time he laughed all week.)

"I see you got a 3-2 in your Dr. Ed Trg. Crt. What have you got to say about that?"

"What do you want to know?" he shrugged.

"For starters, what's Dr. Ed & Trg. Crt.?"

"It's Driver's Education and if you check the code you'll see that 3 is an average grade."

"What's the 2 for?" I asked.

"According to the comment code, I didn't bring materials necessary for the class."

"You mean you didn't take your textbook with you?"

"No. Brains. Mr. Woods took off because I was going 32 mph in a 30 mile zone."

"That doesn't seem excessive," I said defensively.

"In reverse," he added.

"Good grief. What happened in English. You got a 4 and a code 5. That means you are below average and according to this you could make better use of your time."

"That's not true," he said, "I never goof off in that class. I use every minute."

"To study?"

"To eat my lunch so that when the class is over I can shoot baskets on my lunch hour. You can't budget your time any better than that."

"Well, your history grade is good, but Mrs. Burice indicated you are not working up to your capacity."

"I don't know what my capacity is," he said.

"So, why don't you ask Mrs. Burice."

"I did and she said I didn't know because I've never worked up to it. I said how will I know when I get there and she said when I stop teepeeing the trees on the school lawn."

Sometimes, I wish schools would just lay it on us...In English.

Irwin pleased with appointments

State Senator Mitch Irwin (D-Sault Ste. Marie) today declared he is both honored and pleased with his committee appointments. Irwin was named chair of the Municipalities and Elections Committee, vice-chair of Health and Social Services Committee and a member of the Transportation and Tourist Industries Committee as well as the Legislative Council.

Irwin also announced the recent hiring of two new staffers. The staff positions include a constituent caseworker committee clerk and an assistant or district affairs.

Sen. Irwin said the hirings represent his fulfillment of a priority campaign goal. "It was my commitment to serve the district to the fullest extent and I have taken these steps to help meet that pledge."

"Ms. Kathy Pelleran joins my staff after working as a substance abuse counselor," said Irwin. A native of Alpena, Ms. Pelleran will handle the constituent casework and serve in the additional capacity as committee clerk. She is a graduate of Lake Superior State College.

According to Irwin, Greg T. Long is a former associate planner for the community development department of Sault Ste. Marie. His job responsibilities will include working throughout the 37th District and establishing a district office with regular hours. Long will also work with local units of government, coordinating efforts on the state and local levels of government for various projects. He has extensive political experience.

Both staffers are currently working in the Lansing office.

A courtroom caper catches guilty lawyer

My cousin Al is furious. He lives in a little town where an ordinary citizen can go to jail for smoking pot. But a local lawyer was caught selling heroin, and a judge set him free.

"It's the lousiest thing I ever heard of. If that guy hadn't been a lawyer, he would have gone to prison," Al complained. "And it's all the fault of you jerks in the big cities, especially your jerk judges.

If you've been paying attention, you know it's not unusual for Cousin Al to blame big cities for all the crime in the world, even when it's committed in a tiny village. It doesn't make any difference if the crook is a home-grown boy who never left the farm. Al will insist the kid went bad because he watched "New York television" or learned how to rob a gas station from reading "yellow rag newspapers" from the city.

Al lives where I used to live, in Lapeer, population around 6000, an hour's drive north of Detroit. He thinks I was nuts to move into an evil city with a black mayor, for God's sake. Usually, it's my great pleasure to ingore Al. But once in a while it's fun – even enlightening – to listen to him. This is true in the case of Charles Bird, the heroin-selling lawyer.

Bird moved into Lapeer from the Detroit area several years ago and began practicing law. For a while he worked in the county prosecutor's office, assigned to liaison work with police departments. He ran for prosecutor on the Democratic ticket, and lost.

Last year Bird was arrested for selling $800 worth of heroin to one of his clients.

The local cops had been watching Bird for a long time. They were sure he was using drugs himself, and selling it to others, but couldn't prove it. Police usually make a case by having an undercover officer buy drugs from the suspect. This was difficult in the Bird case, the cops said, because he sold only to clients he was defending against drug-related charges.

This problem was solved through a ploy that may be unique in the history of jurisprudence, outside of old James Cagney movies. District Judge John Spires issued a phony warrant for the arrest of an undercover cop on a drug charge. The judge also conducted a mock arraignment. The undercover cop hired Bird to represent him.

It wasn't long before Bird was under arrest, charged with selling heroin to his phony client.

When it came time for the lawyer's trial, Spires and other local judges said it wouldn't be right for them to preside because they'd all been Bird's friends and besides, Spires was too involved in the arrest.

Circuit Judge Kenneth Sanborn was brought in from Macomb County to hear the case. Bird planned to seek a dismissal of charges on the grounds that Spires and the police had entrapped him. But, during the entrapment hearing, Bird and Judge Sanborn struck a deal.

Bird pleaded "no contest," just like Spiro Agnew, and surrendered his license to practice law in Michigan. In return, Sanborn sentenced him to 5 years probation plus $600 court costs to be paid at $10 per month for 5 years. Under Michigan law, the sentence could have been 20 years in prison and/or a $25,000 fine.

Judge Sanborn rapped Judge Spires for his participation in the "ruse" used to arrest Bird. He said Bird had a good chance of proving entrapment if he hadn't copped a plea.

Judge Spires answered angrily: "People are saying that there's a double standard of justice for lawyers, and Judge Sanborn has given them a good reason to believe it."

Spires is supported by many Lapeer citizens, especially Cousin Al, who is boiling.

"Judge Sanborn comes from the big city where heroin is as common as Hershey bars and judges and lawyers always take care of each other," Al said. "Everyone in Lapeer knows if that heroin had been sold here by an ordinary shoe clerk, a local judge would have sent him to prison for years. It's a lousy justice when an outside judge comes in and kisses a lawyer for being a crook."

Cousin Al's reasoning is suspect, as usual. He has too much faith in geographical limitations, and not enough faith in the ability of justice to be unfair in towns of every size. But nevertheless, there is a clear moral to all this, and I've said it before:

"It's a tough world out there, and if a lawbreaker doesn't want to be treated like an ordinary crook, he would be well advised to get a law degree before breaking the law."

School gets grant for island lighthouse

By PEG OBLE

Once again a group of economically disadvantaged young people will have a chance to participate in an educational work experience program on Beaver Island.

The Charlevoix Public School system, which owns the old lighthouse and adjoining buildings and 64 acres on the Island, has received a $125,000 Special Governor's Youth Grant to carry on the program started last summer.

Dan Kaczynski, Charlevoix resident and student of biology and the environment, supervised the program last year and will carry on this year. He is enthusiastic about the flora and fauna on the island and the recreational facilities the site provides.

However, all is not play at the camp. Last year, the young people were divided into three crews, each with a crew director. Part of them were assigned to camp construction and were in charge of tent-frame construction and building sanitation and installation of a water line for the campground. They hand dug the 700 -foot trench from the lighthouse to the campground for the water line.

Another crew was in charge of renovating the house and lighthouse structure, and a third crew was responsible for meal preparation. All participants worked on the one-mile nature trail that was cut out of the woods.

During the summer, supervisors taught courses in nature photography, identification of wild edibles, and entomology. Many of the young people received high school credit for their studies.

It is expected that this year the program will continue much as it did last year, with the renovation of the lighthouse and other buildings being the prime effort. Kaczynski has also expressed hope that a small farming area can be laid out for the growing of vegetables.

The Charlevoix School System obtained ownership of the lighthouse and adjoining property in 1975 after it was declared surplus property by the General Services Administration. A condition of the sale was that it would be turned into an environmental study center for high school students and teachers. Last year's program went a long way toward this end.

Eligible young people, aged 16 through 21, will be recruited from the 10 counties of northwestern Michigan which make up the Northwest Michigan Manpower Constortium, through which the $125,000 grant was obtained. There will be two four-week sessions with 30 participants each session. As last year, participants will be paid the minimum wage for their work experience. Applications will be available at area high schools later this spring.

Charlevoix was bustling before 1879 charter

EDITOR'S NOTE: In 1879 Charlevoix became a chartered village. To commemorate the 100 years, the Courier will publish a history of Charlevoix as written by long-time resident Rosa Nettleton. In this synopsis she reveals that Charlevoix was a bustling community long before it received its charter.

In the early fifties of the last century, a small camp of fishermen were located near the shore of the lake at Pine River, now Charlevoix, and some of them were working from the Beaver Islands, which a few years before, had been taken over by the Mormons under the leadership of James J. Strang.

The Mormons were determined to convert all on the Island to the Mormon Faith, and failing with some, drove them away. A Mr. Geer put his family and what supplies he was allowed to take in a small boat and sailed to the shores of Pine River, landing at the foot of what is now River Street. (In 1979, Pine River Lane).

He made a clearing and built a small log cabin at the place where is now the Fountain City House (In 1979, the location of the Weathervane Terrace Motor Inn); but in the spring, when he had begun to raise a small garden, and had made a quantity of Maple Syrup, the Mormons came and drove him away, not allowing him to take any of his produce with him. Mr. Geer then again put his family in the small sail boat and sailed to Little Traverse, now Harbor Springs, where he remained and raised his family. Later his daughter, Marietta, married Richard Cooper, a young government Indian agent. Richard Cooper became well known some few years later as the Genial landlord of the Fountain City House.

After driving the Gentiles from the Island, the Mormons began their depredation on the inainland, trying to drive away all the Gentile settlers.

It was in 1853 that the fishermen had their historic battle with the Mormons, and it was in that battle that Capt. Louis Geboo was wounded. "Jack" Papinaw, a fisherman who came to this place in 1852 and was later well known to early Charlevoix residents, also fought in this battle against the Mormons. Some of the fishermen, feeling that conditions were too unpleasant in the near neighborhood of the Mormons, left for other fishing grounds.

The first man to make a clearing and become a permanent settler was Medad Thompson, grandfather of Mrs. Rose Henderson of this place. He came in 1854 and made a clearing near Pine Lake, some little distance north of where the railroad station now stands. (This was no doubt intended to mean the former Belvedere Station, now discontinued. Medad Thompson's home was back of where the Electric Light Plant is now located). This clearing he eventually enlarged and developed into a prosperous farm, where he lived until his death in 1886. "Uncle Medad" and "Aunt Phoebe" were apparently a quiet and unaggressive couple and seemed to have been overlooked by the trouble-making Mormons.

A different type of man was John S. Dixon, who came to this place in 1855. Dixon was elected the first president of the Village of Charlevoix, in 1879. He was a man of culture and education, and with strong personality. It is evident that the Mormons recognized in him a rival in their plans of possession and a menace to their attempts to control the settlers of the mainland. They seemed to hold a special grudge against him, and their attempted persecutions decided Mr. Dixon to move his family for safety to Northport, where he followed them after getting out his crops. After the shooting of "King" Strang, in 1856, Mr. Dixon returned to his little home near Pine Lake.

While in Northport, Mr. Dixon met John Miller, who with the pioneer instinct, had come from New York to find a home in the wilds of Grand Traverse region. Mr. Miller accompanied Mr. Dixon to Charlevoix and took up a homestead at the head of Pine Lake, becoming one of our early pioneer settlers, known and loved by the community as "Uncle John".

White Pine Stampede Feb. 3

MANCELONA - Coursing over four counties and through rugged, Northwest Michigan forestlands, the White Pine Stampede, Michigan's longest cross-country ski event, gets underway Saturday, Feb. 3.

The third annual stampede will start at 10 a.m. from Twin Peaks, near Frederic. It will wind up at Mt. Mancelona, in the community of Mancelona, 50 km (32 miles) later. A shorter, 20 km (12 miles) race will end at Cameron Bridge on the Manistee River, at the Crawford-Kalkaska County line.

To date, over 150 skiers have registered for what has come to be recognized as one of the state's premiere marathon events in the fast growing sport of cross-country skiing.

Last year's stampede drew over 200 entrants. Race director Jack McKaig of Mancelona estimates near 400 skiers for the upcoming White Pine. "Normally at this time of the season we might have 50 to 60 entries," McKaig said. "So far, our race committee has processed over 150 entries, and more are arriving daily."

SPECIAL AWARDS

Each skier finishing the 50 km White Pine Stampede will receive a specially cast and registered medal to mark their accomplishment. Skiers completing the 20 km course will receive a smaller version of the original medal.

In addition, other awards will be presented to the top finishers in each of 44 skiing classifications, at a special awards ceremony to be held at Mt. Mancelona following the end of the 50 km race.

TRAIL GROOMING

Entire length of the 50 km White Pine route has already been packed once, according to Gus Konopnicki of Grayling, race committee member in charge of trail grooming.

"Depending on how much snow we get between now and race time, we'll be over the course several more times," Gus said.

Arrangements to set two independent ski tracks the length of the course, the day before the race, have also been made.

AID STATIONS

As in previous years, stampede skiers will find numerous aid stations along the race route, offering refreshments. These stations will also be in radio contact with race committee headquarters, should any problems arise for participants. A soup and sandwich meal will be provided at the Mt. Mancelona finish line for all racers. It will be served by the Mancelona Chamber of Commerce.

ENTRY INFORMATION

Complete White Pine registration packets, information and entry blanks, are available by calling Mancelona (616) 587-8351; or by writing: White Pine Stampede, P.O. Box 429, Mancelona, MI 49659.

Deadline for all White Pine entries is Monday, Jan. 29th.

Rayders edge Chiefs, 52-51

Any faint hope Cheboygan had of winning the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference basketball title was crushed Friday night as the Chiefs were edged 52-51 by Charlevoix, a team Cheboygan had beat by 23 points earlier in the season.

Charlevoix actually stole the game from Cheboygan.

The Chiefs were leading by one point, 51-50, and had possession of the basketball with less than 20 seconds on the clock when Rayder guard Gil Noirot swiped the ball from a Cheboygan player and found Pat Schmidt streaking towards the basket. Schmidt converted on the layup to give the Rayders the lead and the ballgame.

"The kids were really happy with that win, especially after the way Cheboygan had zonked us earlier in the season," Coach Dave Moyer said.

The game was nip n' tuck throughout. Both teams played a zone defense, which slowed the tempo of the game down. The two teams battled on even terms in the first half with Cheboygan taking a one point lead into the locker room at halftime. But midway through the third quarter Charlevoix switched to a man-to-man defense and caught Cheboygan by surprise. By picking up the tempo Charlevoix was able to surge ahead by five points, 42-37, after three quarters.

In the fourth quarter, Charlevoix slowed the tempo down again as Cheboygan continued to stay in its zone. The Chiefs pecked away at the lead – hitting on six free throws in the quarter – until they finally caught and passed the Rayders. Then Noirot and Schmidt took over.

Schmidt led all Rayder scorers with 16 points, Bob Plumm added 14 and Kevin Kratt 10. Plumm also pulled down 12 rebounds to pace the Rayders. Cheboygan out-rebounded Charlevoix, 34-28.

The Rayders connected on 10-11 free throws while Cheboygan was 15 of 18.

For Cheboygan, now 5-4 in the conference, Mark Smigelski had 14 points, Joel LeClair 13 and Greg Williams 10.

Charlevoix has now won five of its last six games. The Rayders beat Onaway, 86-49, Tuesday night.

Kratt had 19 points, Schmidt 15 and Plumm 14 to lead the Rayder romp. Charlevoix built up a 23 point halftime lead enabling Moyer to clear his bench in the second half.

There's a three team pile-up at the top of the standings in Division I of the Charlevoix Recreation B League.

Kit Carson, Charlevoix County State Bank and Fishback & Natkin all sport 9-2 records.

In possibly the most exciting game of the season, County State Bank beat Kit Carson, 46-45, Wednesday in overtime. County State Bank led practically the entire game before Kit Carson managed to tie the contest and send it into overtime. Leroy Skipperjosh had 15 points and Don Ward and John Hutchinson 10 each for the winners while Butch Klooster had 13 points and Mike Carran and Dale Ross had 10 apiece for Kit Carson.

Earlier in the week, Kit Carson had defeated Alray, 62-48. Crain had 16 points, Klooster 15 and Tim Elenbois 10 for the winners. Scott Blanchard and Jim Withers tallied 13 points each and Jim Marsh added 12 for the Alray.

Fishback & Natkin kept even with Kit Carson and County State Bank by virtue of the forfeit win over the Coast Guard.

In other action, John Deere the leader in Division II claimed wins over Boyne Machine, 69-55, and Medusa, 65-55. Against Boyne Machine, Conrad Klooster tassed in 19 points and Paul Collins added 17. Water Meter Reading Moves Outdoors

ENJOY MORE CONVENIENT AND PRIVACY IN YOUR HOME with the new Read-o-Matic outdoor register now available with water meters.

Read-o-Matic moves water meter reading out of the house. There's no need to interrupt household duties to admit the meter reader...no mud or snow tracked in during bad weather...no risk of in-house accidents. Installed on the outside of the house, the Read-o Matic register is connected to the meter by low-cost wire. A generator on the meter supplies the power. Ask your water utility for details.

The City Council of Charlevoix in 1977 directed that all households have this installation made. City crews are now available for immediate installation. Cost to you is $1.50 per month added to your water billing for 12 months for a total charge of $18.00. Call Charlevoix Water Department to arrange your hook-up. 547-2221.

Over 800 register for VASA race

TRAVERSE CITY – As the Feb. t registration deadline nears for the third annual North American Vasa Race, more than 800 cross country skiers have signed up for the race. That number nearly doubles the size of the ruce over last year.

With entries coming from throughout Michigan, the United States and even a few from Europe, preparations for the Feb. 10 ski race are proceeding on schedule, said Vojin Baic, who is one of the founders and director's of the race.

Under the direction of Baic, a team of volunteers recruited from the Grand Traverse Ski Club and other groups are busy with the massive job of preparing the 50 kilometer course for the nationally sanctioned event.

In accordance with United States Ski Association rules, competitors will be divided into two main categories. Skiers with USSA certification will compete in one of six "Elite" classes. Skiers without USSA certification will be placed in one of eight 'Citizen' classes. Only the senior elite men will compete on the 50 kilometer course. All others will race on a shorter 25 kilometer course.

The mass start race will begin at the Cherry Capital Airport in Traverse City, wind through the Fife Lake State Forest, and finish at Ranch Rudolf, a cross country touring center 15 miles south of the city.

Senior Elite men who are also American citizens will compete for a grand prize all expense paid trip to the Swedish Vasaloppet (a men only event) held later this year in Sweden. Elite

A living room with sunshine

CARRIE FARKAS and her cousin, Tommy Harris, are pictured with the miniature orange tree raised by their grandmother, Mrs. William Farkas. The children are calling attention to the three oranges that have matured. There are 49 green oranges on the tree along with more blossoms.

By FRAN MARTIN

Mary Ann Farkas of 102 Green Street, unlike other homemakers, has her own private source of fresh oranges this winter.

While others are carrying home bags of "sunshine" she plucks her supply from a miniature orange tree in her living room.

The full grown oranges are approximately 1¼ inches across and little more than an inch from top to bottom. The skin is orange in color and is a miniature of the full-sized fruit. When opened the oranges is found to be in sections but very sour and flat in taste though juicy. The skin, however, is very thin, tender and very tasty. The seeds are quite round and as large as those found in a full-sized orange.

In telling of the plant, Mrs. Farkas said it wasn't much more than a twig about six inches long when her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Farkas, brought it to her from Florida. Her daughter-in-law, Dorene, said she had brought one for herself but "Mother apparently gave it the TLC it needed for hers has really thrived". The other one never got past the "twig" stage.

It wasn't until the plant was about a year old that it showed signs of bearing fruit, Mrs. Farkas said. Beautiful, very fragrant blossoms appeared first. Eventually, they turned to small fruit, some of which have matured. Until the present time, the tree has had 52 oranges in various stages of development and still has a few blossoms.

48 CETA jobs in county to be terminated Sept. 30

Some 48 people participating in Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) programs in Charlevoix County have been advised that their jobs will be terminated Sept. 30, 1979.

Helen Phillips, assistant director of the Public Program Administration in Charlevoix County, sent out the notices.

These people have been working for public service agencies -- schools, Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, Commission on Aging, Social Services, Char-Em Intermediate School District, District Health Department, Native American Recovery Center, Bergmann Center, and the Charlevoix County Road Commission, among others.

The CETA Act of 1978 prescribes the limit of time a participant is eligible to be enrolled in public service employment as 78 weeks during a five-year period, counting 26 weeks prior to October 1, 1978. Those advised of the impending termination of their jobs will have reached the time limit by September 30.

It is anticipated that some of the agencies will hire former CETA employees under their own budget, but how many cannot be determined at this time.

If there is sufficient funding and the rules do not change, other CETA employees will take over the vacated jobs, according to Mrs. Phillips.

MESPA representing Boyne City group

The Michigan Educational Support Personnel Association (MESPA), an affiliate of the Michigan Education Association (MEA), is representing the Boyne City Public Schools support staff in negotiations with the board of education.

Kay Habitz, contract specialist, reported from her Cadillac office that representatives of the school's bus drivers, cooks, secretaries and custodians held their third bargaining session with the board representatives this past weekend.

The employees voted in September to join MESPA, met with the superintendent in October, and held their first bargaining session on Nov. 11, 1978.

The Boyne City Board of Educaton will discuss the non-instructional negotiations Thursday night in a closed session.

Davis appointed to fisheries committee

U.S. Congressman Robert Davis has been appointed to the committees on Science and Technology and Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

The Science and Technology Committee consists of 25 Democrats and 14 Republicans. Its jurisdiction includes: outer space and astronautical research, development and exploration, National Science Foundation and science scholarships; civil aviation, environmental, and energy research and development.

Davis said major issues facing this committee include: Clinch River, Tenn. nuclear breeder reactor demonstration project; long-term storage of nuclear wastes; authorization of research and development programs of the Environmental Protection Agency and the Department of Energy; recycling and renewing resources to preserve scarce and raw materials.

The Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee also has 25 Democrats and 14 Republicans. Its jurisdiction includes: merchant marine, including regulations of common carriers by water, particularly safety regulations; fisheries and wildlife management and conservation, including the Endangered Species Act; the U.S. Coast Guard and navigation issues, including pilotage; Panamo Canal maintenance and operation.

Major issues facing this committee include: Indian fishing rights; implementation of the Panama Canal Treaties; Alaska Lands Legislation, as it pertains to wildlife refugees; Deep Seabed Mining legislation; reauthorization of the Coastal Zone Management Act (providing for land use planning and management of land adjacent to territorial seas).

Phil Ruppe was the ranking minority member of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee before his retirement.

Photography class offered at East Jordan

The seminar will include a session on picture composition which should be of interest to people with any kind of camera. The second half of the seminar Bellairs will be specifically addressing people with cameras with adjustable F stop and shutter speed.

To register for the seminar call the Community Education Office 536-3241. The seminar is free.

February scout month

Again this year, the month of February will be set aside for the observance of Boy Scout Sunday in the Scenic Trails Council. This gives churches an opportunity to focus attention on the spiritual aspects of scouting.

As a result of active church support, the scouts in the council have had a chaplain each summer at camp, devotional literature has been made available, spiritual retreats have taken place, and portions of the New Testament have been distributed.

On Boy Scout Sunday, scouts act as ushers or acolytes, speak on Scout-church relationships, or attend as a troop. Throughout the year, they are encouraged to participate in youth groups, Sunday school and worship services. In addition, special religious awards have been set up whereby scouts work directly with their minister, priest, or rabbi, to encourage greater spiritual involvement. All of these things help a boy or young man fulfill the twelfth point of the Scout Law which states "A Scout is to be reverent."

FAITH HONORS THE WISDOM AND EXPERIENCE OF AGE

In our current misguided era where young is beautiful, the older segment of our population is largely relagated to the background of our society. There are many factors to blame for this tragic situation, including its wide range of acceptance which prematurely condemns the physically and mentally sound along with the infirm, and thereby attaches the stigma of outworn usefulness to all. When this is combined with the natural self-importance of today's youth, little respect or companionship exists between children and their grandparents, to the detriment of both. Your Church will teach you to appreciate the wisdom of the old, referred to throughout the Bible. Honor your grandparents and listen to them. You may even find them fascinating, if you give them a chance.

Great Lakes Energy opens in BC

A new store, Great Lakes Energy Systems, has opened in Boyne City. The store is owned by Gregory Reinhardt, Phil Armstrong and Dan Osmer. Reinhardt and Armstrong were partners in the Misty Morning Trading Company while Osmer formerly owned the Hearthwood woodstove shop in Charlevoix.

The store will have on display a wide range of products, including wood stoves, solar space and water heating equipment, wind electric and wind water pumping systems, biological toilets, demand water heaters, and related products. Many will be simple and durable products necessary for a self-sufficient homestead. Others will be sophisticated systems designed to cut energy consumption in homes and businesses.

"For some years I have been involved in seeking local low-energy solutions to our growing energy predicament," Osmer said. "This interest has led me to participate in a number of conferences and workshops on a state and local level dealing with various aspects of the appropriate energy technology field. During this time, I have worked with the Antrim County Energy Office, with Sunrise Energy Products, and have built my own home in northern Antrim County.

"These experiences have shown me the need for a retail outlet in this area providing access to information, tools, and products which will help homeowners and businesses deal with the rising costs and growing uncertainties of conventional energy use."

Reinhardt and Armstrong sold their interest in Misty Morning Trading Company to a third partner, who has since moved the studio across the street.

"Our first project was designing and building two homes for ourselves in the woods of northern Antrim County," Reinhardt and Armstrong explained. "In trying to figure out how to design our homes in this time of rising energy costs, uncertain power company reliability, and concern for our environment, we spent much time finding out which natural technologies were economically feasible and workable in this area of Northern Michigan. We were struck by the difficulty of obtaining the information and materials we needed from local businesses, and found ourselves writing to companies all over the country for information on wind water pumps, wind electric systems, wood stoves, composting toilets, and solar heating panels.

"We felt a need, and experienced a growing desire to develop this sort of business. Great Lakes Energy Systems, now open for business, is the result."

Brown in concert

Concertgoers will be treated to a program ranging from the classics to jazz when Ronnie Brown appears at Petoskey Middle School Auditorium on Thursday, Feb. 8. The Ronnie Brown Trio is being presented by Northern Michigan Community Concert Association at 8:30 p.m. and will feature Brown at the piano with string bass and percussion rounding out the group.

Trained in the classics at Boston's New England Conservatory of Music, Brown has become one of the nation's top nightclub performers, and has made numerous concert tours throughout the U.S.

Praise has come to Brown not only from the press, but from his contemporaries. Al Hirt has called him "one of the finest talents in the business". Billboard, reporting on one of his New York appearances, said, "It is the intensity and excitement that has made him an overnight favorite at the Embers". Frank Sinatra, Duke Ellington, Ella Fitzgerald, Sammy Davis, Jr., Dave Brubeck and Stan Kenton are among the artists who have worked with Brown.

The excitement created by his music plus an outgoing personality and personal charm have made him a popular television guest on such shows as The Today Show and Merv Griffin Show. He has arranged, composed, accompanied and conducted, and offers selections by Chopin and Beethoven alongside contemporary works such as "Slaughter on 10th Avenue", Broadway tunes and his own compositions.

A native New Englander, Brown was born in Rhode Island, and began his musical career at the age of twelve as the youngest organist-choir director in the Episcopal Diocese of Rhode Island. He graduated from the New England Conservatory with Bachelor of Arts and Masters Degrees, and has done advanced studies at Boston University, Harvard University and the Berklee School of Music.

Brown is an avid snow skier, holding awards in downhill giant slalom; and is also a master sailor, racing Snipe sailboats and his own 26 foot sailboat. Among his other talents are photography, tennis and gourmet cooking.

Playcrafters to perform 'Plaza Suite"

Neil Simon's long running Broadway comedy hit, "Plaza Suite" will be presented by the newly formed Straits Area Playcrafters for four performances Feb. 9, 10, 16 and 17 at the Driftwood Restaurant and Lounge in St. Ignace.

Each evening's dinner theatre performance will commence at 6 p.m. with a cocktail hour (cash bar) followed by an Italian spaghetti dinner served promptly at 7 p.m. The play will begin as soon as dinner is completed.

Tickets for this presentation can be reserved in advance by contacting Gail TerAvest at 906-643-8228 in St. Ignace. The cost for dinner and theatre has been set at $8.

The widely acclaimed "Plaza Suite" is one of Simon's hilariously funny hits which kept New York audiences laughing through more than 1,000 performances. Each of the three one-act segments is set in suite 719 at Manhattan's most elegant hotel. Different people and different occasions make each act unique.

In the first of these, called "Visitor from Mamaroneck," a suburban housewife, Karen Nash, no longer svelte and willowy, entices her wayward husband, Sam Nash, to suite 719 of the Plaza to rekindle the flame of their wedding night which was spent in the same suite 23 years before.

The hilarity accelerates in the second of the three-leaf album, "Visitor from Hollywood," as a celebrated movie-producer, Jesse Kiplinger, decides to bring about a wily bit of seduction with a boyhood sweetheart, Muriel Tate.

The third, "Visitor from Forest Hills," is a wildly funny farce, with a young bride-to-be locking herself in the bathroom, while her wedding party waits downstairs for the ceremony. The bride's parents, Roy and Norma Hubley, go out of their minds trying to lure her from her hide-away to get her safely tied to the mod young bridegroom-to-be, Bordon Eisler.

"Plaza Suite" was acclaimed as one of the most notable comedies in years. The New York Times said, "Neil Simon has done it again and will once more set the town laughing." The Associated Press pronounced it "A top-notch laugh riot, and the New York Post called it "A wonderfully happy and gratifying evening of sheer entertainment."

The principals and directors for this production are all local residents.

The Straits Area Playcrafters theater group was formed last November. A non-profit organization with its primary goal to bring live theatre to St. Ignace and the surrounding communities. Another play is being scheduled for spring.

Medusa had $6 million building permit in '78

The annual report of the Charlevoix County Department of Building Inspection shows that one building permit issued in 1978 accounted for a 75 percent increase over 1977 in construction starts in the county.

The permit issued to the Medusa Cement Corporation for construction in the amount of $6,711,000 more than offset the increase in cost of construction starts.

Total figures for 1977 were $8,674,050, and for 1978 they were $15,247,635, an increase of $6,573,585

Fees collected in 1978 amounted to $43,681, and total expenditures of the department were $39,485. The latter figure was $5,452 over the 1978 budget for the department due to the fact that no funds were allocated for the electrical division, which was activated on July 1, 1978.

Dick Mayhew, building code administrator, anticipates that approximately 670 permits will be issued in 1979, the same number as last year, for construction amounting to about $11,500,000

Bill Bellows

Bellows appointed to 2nd Ward council seat

The search for a 2nd Ward councilman ended Monday night when Bill Bellows was appointed to succeed Ivan Whitley on the Charlevoix Common Council.

Bellows took the oath of office after his appointment and participated in the remainder of Monday's council session.

Bellows will serve on council until April. At that time Whitley has the option of returning to council to start a new two-year term. He resigned from council for the remainder of his present term because of business and health reasons. If he does not return in April, Bellows could possibly serve on council until April 1981.

Council unanimously approved Bellows selection after Chuck Scherping, the only other interested candidate, withdrew. Mayor Sam Supernaw said Scherping withdrew because he plans to be out of town in March.

In other action, council:

Approved a resolution to have the Charlevoix Housing Commission apply for a preliminary loan for low-rent elderly housing. The preliminary loan is not to exceed $31,000.

+Approved a resolution supporting the Clean Water Management Plan developed by the Northwest Michigan Regional Planning Commission. The objective of the plan is the "preserve the good water quality of the region through preventive measures, rather than regain it later through the lar more costly actions necessary to remedy lake, stream or groundwater pollution problems."

+Appointed Rex Davis to a two-year term on the Board of Review. Davis will succeed Ralph Shapton.

+Amended the taxi ordinance to increase the liability insurance coverage for licensed taxi cabs.

+Adopted a snow ordinance prohibiting any person from removing or depositing snow in a manner which would obstruct the safety vision of a driver.

+Learned that $53,000 has been spent this winter in the snow budget. Last winter the city spent just over $38,000, City Manager Norm Gaffney said the city will receive some money back later in the year from the state because the city has received more than 84 inches of snow. Gaffney also said the city has used twice as much sand this winter. He added the city does have sufficient amounts of salt.

+Learned that the city has received a grant to cover 50 percent of the costs for a study on the city's port. It is expected council will name an engineering firm to conduct the study within the next few weeks.

City officials estimate the study will cost about $10,000. The state will pay half the tab.

+Held a public hearing to determine how $67,000 in federal revenue sharing should be spent. Gaffney suggested the money be used in the local street fund, which has a deficit of nearly $150,000.

+Learned that the public rest rooms in the Chamber of Commerce building will be closed at 2:30 p.m. because of vandalism. Gaffney said most of the problems occur after 2:30 p.m. when school is dismissed.

Testy Three grades score high on assessment test

How well did Charlevoix's 4th, 7th and 10th graders fare on the Michigan Educational Assessment Test?

Using the state average as a comparison, Charlevoix students did reasonably well, eclipsing state averages in reading and math at all three grade levels.

The students took the test at the end of September. The results were returned to the school district in late October with the state averages computed and sent to the school district in January.

The assessment test is mandatory for all 4th and 7th graders in the state while the 10th grade test is offered to school districts un a voluntary basis.

Here's how the test works:

The reading test has 30 objectives. For each objective there are five questions. To "master ar attain" an objective the student must answer four or five of the questions correctly (75-100 percent).

Overall, there are 100 questions on the test. If, for example, Charlevoix scored 70 percent it means 70 percent of the students answered an average of 90 questions correctly out of 100.

The math test is similar. It has 40 objectives. Again, there are five questions to an objective. If, for exanple, Charlevoix scored 70 percent it means that 70 percent of the students answered an average of 180 questions correctly out of 200.

The following table shows the percentage of students who have received or obtained acceptable scores in reading and math in Charlevaix's 4th, 7th and 10th grades. The state averages are also listed for comparison.

4th Grade Reading
Charlevoix	State
67%	62%
4th Grade Math
91%	79%
7th Grade Reading
Charlevoix	State
79%	67%
7th Grade Math
Charlevoix	State
77%	49%
10th Grade Reading
Charlevoix	State
71%	61%

Since the test was initiated, Charlevoix has consistently scored higher than the state average. Statewide, 4th and 7th graders achieved higher scores this year than last. According to State Superintendent John Porter, this marks the first time scores on the reading and math tests have improved at all levels compared to the previous year.

Porter said 4th grade math scores have been "very good" in recent years, but he said he was "disappointed" with 7th grade math scores. He said 7th graders do well in some areas of the math test (addition, subtraction and division) but are weak in other areas (decimals, fractions and problems involving the ratio of one number to another).

"The 7th grade math test results are very disturbing to me," Porter said. "I have asked our staff to determine why less than half of all 7th graders achieve acceptable scores on this test and to develop a plan of action aimed at improving these scores starting next year."

Fourth graders are tested on material they learned during their first three years in school while 7th graders are tested on material taught in the 4th, 5th and 6th grades.

This year school districts provided parents of the students with a pamphlet that indicates the test scores, explains the assessment program and what will be done to help the student if he or she did not pass the reading or math test or both.

Board approves $700,000 bond issue

The Charlevoix Board of Education has approved a resolutian recommended by a task force to bring a $700,000 bond proposal to a vote in the Charlevoix School District April 30 to underwrite the cost of constructing and furnishing an addition to the Charlevoix High School.

The bond proposal, which is not to exceed $700,000, will be utilized to expand the present high school facilities by building within the area between the two buildings. The new construction will allow room lor expansion of the library, cafeteria and the science areas. Purpose of the proposed construction is to alleviate the crowded conditions at the high school.

In presenting the proposal which was later approved by the board, Thomas LaBlance, chairman of the task force, expressed his support of the building proposal as made by the task force and asked the support of the community of what he feels will meet expansion needs within the guidelines suggested by the task force.

LaBlance proposed a 10-member building committee ta be composed of five persuns from the task lorce and five from the board, administratiun and faculty. In conclusion, he thanked the members of the task force for the time and effort they have expended in behalf of the project. Task force members were Dennis Wojan, Mrs. Dnrothy Stoel, Mrs. Terri Jasklerski, Larry Feindt, Mrs. Billie Weliver, Mrs. Marcia Trimper, Mrs. Karen Joy, Mrs. Carla Spencer, Dennis Spence, Mrs. Doris Pearl, Mrs. Jane Lieberman, LeRoy Buchanan, John Frey, Thomas Erlser and LaBlance.

April 30 has been set as the date for the special election.

The special Building Committee will work with the board of education in formulating the plans for the addition and will make every effort to reduce the bond proposal if possible.

Charles Elzinga of the Library Committee reported on the proposed use of space at the Charlevoix Public Library which has been used, until now, as a meeting place for the Boy Scouts. He said arrangements have been made for the scouts to meet at the Charlevoix Middle School. The lower level of the library will be revamped to provide storage space for new equipment and an area where it can be used at the library.

Mary Beth Wallick, librarian, reports that the library now has two 16 mm projectors, an 8-mm projector, 35 mm slide projector, 25 mm film strip projector, an overhead projector and screen which may be checked out. Eight millimeter children's films are also on order. Construction of storage space as well as maintenance space are underway.

Other equipment such as micro-film reader and a micro-film reader-printer have been made available through the Northland Library Cooperative and a storage area as well as a space for public use must be made available Miss Wallick advised the board.

Plans to purchase prints for circulation are also in the making and space to store these will be necessary, she said.

The board gave its approval to the high school marching band to accept an invitation to participate in the annual Tulip Festival at Holland in May. Tentative approval was also given the French Club for a trip to Quebec and to the Spanish Club for a trip to Mexico.

Vincent Olach, business manager, advised the board that the Civil Liberties Commission was bringing a suit against the board lor its discrimination against a member of the custodial staff for not allowing him to operate certain equipment. Olach explained thnt operation of the equipment used in certain snow removal operations has been denied the person because he has a visual problem which does not allow the operation of such equipment under Michigan OSHA restrictions.

Ms. Ardeth Wieland, a member of the board, was named to represent the board at the review of the Char-Em Intermediate School District budget.

Adult foster care homes needed in county

More adult foster care homes are needed in Charlevoix County.

According to Mary Pieh, social service worker with the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services, the shortage of adult foster homes is so severe it has caused the department to look to other counties for help.

"We have one lady who has lived in Boyne City all her life and we had to put her in a home in Otsego County," Mrs. Pieh said. "It's sad that people have to be taken from the community where they have always lived, from their friends, their church, everything that is familiar to them, just because we are unable to offer them foster homes in the areas where they reside."

There are presently 10 adult foster care homes in the county. However, unless "people in the county find it in their hearts to open their homes to this program", that may dwindle. Mrs. Pieh said that a few of the providers are thinking of retiring.

The people who need an adult foster care home , Mrs. Pieh said, are those who can nn longer care for themselves. In most cases, she added, they are ambulatory and capable nf sustaining their own bodily needs.

Mrs. Pieh believes a lot of people shy away from providing adult foster care homes because they do not know what is required to become licensed.

"We would like to know who some of these potentiol providers might be so we could meet with them, explain the program and answer questions regarding responsibilities," she said. "We feel that if more people understood the adult foster care program they might open their homes to people in need of this service.

"And we feel there are a lot of homes in Charlevoix that could be licensed."

There nre different types of adult foster care homes. There is the family home (1-6 people), the small group home (6-12 people) and the large group home (12-20 people). Funding is provided either on a private basis or through the Supplementary Security income.

To ncquaint potential providers with the program, the department is ready to outline the program and introduce the people to other providers so first hand knowledge can be obtained.

Anyone wishing further information should contact Mrs. Pieh at 547-4471.

Real Estate by Jim Thomas

When looking for that "dream house", it's wise to make sure that everything is in good working order: lights, switches, bathroom and plumbing fixtures, heating system and appliances. Also, determine if the doors and windows open and close smoothly. Ask yourself, "Is the roof in sound condition?" "Are there any serious inconveniences, such as steps too steep to permit carrying babies up and down?" "Is the garage or carport large enough to accommodate your car and maybe bikes, toys, and lawn and garden equipment?" "Is landscaping needed?" Also, a good idea would be to hire a real estate appraiser, one who specializes in residential properties, to examine the house and give you a written report.

If you are set to buy, get a good lawyer to help you with legal work.

Feel warm now? It could mean higher energy bills later

Consumers Power Company is alerting its customers that the warm house in which they're snuggling to avoid the severe cold weather could result in higher than normal energy bills later.

R.G. Dahlquist, area manager for the utility, said temperatures since the first of the year have been 25 percent colder than normal. That means greater consumption of natural gas and electricity to keep your home warm, and in turn, in higher bills, Dahlquist said.

While the utility expects no problems in meeting demand this winter, Dahlquist said the energy conservation practiced now will be reflected in your energy bill. "We're suggesting that customers can avoid getting hit under the collar when their utility bill arrives by dialing their thermostat down and being a bit chilly now," Dahlquist stated.

Dahlquist pointed out that Consumers Power has distributed over nine percent more electricity since Jan. 1 than for the same period in 1978. The amount of natural gas sent to customers during the same period is up over 10 percent from last year.

While some of these increases are attributable to the addition of new customers, much of it is the result of furnaces operating and other heating equipment. According to long-range weather forecasts, prospects for improved weather are dim.

In addition to dialing down, Dahlquist recommends that customers limit the number of times outside doors are opened and suggests closing off the heat to rooms which are not used regularly.

For those customers who want to avoid future problems with high bills piling up during the winter, Dahlquist noted that Consumers Power offers an equal monthly payment program that customers may join in May of each year.

County 4-H Program seeks new members

The Charlevoix County 4-H program is seeking county youngsters 9-19 years old to become new 4-H members.

The 4-H program, which is the youth educational program of Michigan State University, draws upon specialists and researchers from the university to develop the educational booklets used in a childs 4-H project. 4-H programs in each county are conducted through the M.S.U. Cooperative Extension Service. The Charlevoix County Extension Office is located on the second floor of the Post Office, in Boyne City. Bob Bellairs is the 4-H Program Assistant for Charlevoix County, and can be reached at 582-6232.

4-H "Clubs" can range from large community clubs with 50 or more kids and many adult leaders to 3 or 4 brothers & sisters led by mom or dad. 4-H volunteer leaders have the freedom to choose how many members they wish to have and how often to have club meetings. Assistance to leaders is available from county & area 4-H staff, who provide periodic leaders workshops, and from regularly scheduled state 4-H leaders workshops held near Cadillac.

For the kids, 4-H offers a chance to learn and develop new skills. Skills are developed in the form of 4-H projects which are displayed at 4-H Spring Achievement Day, in April, or at 4-H Fall Achievement Day, which is held on Labor Day, at Whiting Park. Children registered as 4-H members may also display projects at the Emmet Count Fair.

In addition to Achievement Days, children 9-13 may attend a week long 4-H Summer Camp, in July. Those members 14 and older may attend the 3 day 4-H Exploration Days on the M.S.U. campus in June, or the weekend 4-H Snow Camp held in February. Older members also have opportunities to attend specialized workshops at M.S.U., take part in various international exchange programs, or attend the 4-H Citizenship Shortcourse, in Washington D.C.

All 4-H members are rewarded for their efforts. Each Achievement Day participant receives a ribbon, certificate, and year pin. Those who excell in their project area may receive camp scholarships or project award pins. All of these awards are tied into the National 4-H Award System in which a 4-H member can ultimately attend National 4-H Congress in Chicago and win a $1000.00 college scholarship.

While most 4-H members take part as members of clubs, 4-H projects are also effective when used by teachers in the classroom. City officials also have access to 4-H specialists for community projects such as bicycle safety.

A partial list of 4-H projects available includes: bicycle safety, crafts, crop & soil science, dairy, dog care, electrical science, engines, entomology, family living, foods & nutrition, health, home design, horse & pony, horticulture, landscaping, leadership, leisure education, livestock, management, natural resources, conservation, personal appearance (sewing, knitting), photography, poultry, rabbits, safety, veterinary science, weather. 4-H members are not limited to the projects listed.

4-H Program Assistant Bob Bellairs states, "I know that most parents work with their children on various projects. With 4-H, the children receive extra incentive to carry through, and our camps and other activities give them the needed rewards. And our excellent project manuals make the leaders job easier too. 4-H is really for everybody."

Women's Resource Center launches membership drive

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

The Women's Resource Center, serving Charlevoix, Emmet, Otsego, Cheboygan and Antrim counties, is launching a membership drive for the month of February.

Working out of offices at North Central Michigan College, in Petoskey, the Women's Resource Center is entering its second year with hopes of expanding on programs already begun and adding new programs, particularly in Charlevoix.

"Charlevoix County memberships are our second largest group, behind Emmet," center Director Jan Mancinelli, a Charlevoixan herself, explained recently.

Jan Mancinelli and Nancy Stewart, center director in 1978, discussed plans for the coming year, and accomplishments of the first year, with a visitor last week.

Sitting in bean bag chairs scattered around the spacious office on the lower floor of the main building at NCMC, Ms. Stewart and Mancinelli communicated, above all, enthusiasm for the work of the center.

"The world that women of today were raised to live in doesn't exist," Ms. Stewart observed. "At some point in their lives, most women today must stand on their own, whether because of choice, widowhood, divorce, or returning to work. How to support women trying to cope with our changing society is a major reason behind the founding of the Women's Resource Center," Ms. Stewart explained. She was one of the nine women who founded the organization.

To those ends, the center has programs on a variety of levels.

Workshops or "support groups" on subjects of interest to women were one of the first projects undertaken.

These workshops range from finance and law for women, personal growth groups, assertiveness training, parenting workshops, working women's discussion groups, to study groups focussed on current books as "Women as Winners" and the best seller "My Mother, Myself."

In Charlevoix, this week, a personal growth group is beginning under the direction of Nancy Stewart, a trained para-professional counselor, and Barbara Godwin, a trained group leader. The participants will chose the direction this group takes, but improving personal communication skills will be a major part of the groups concern.

Ms. Stewart said that openings may exist for that group and people interested should call the Women's Resource Center at NCMC: 347-3973.

Workshops are formed as people express an interest, Ms. Stewart explained. New groups in Charlevoix can be tailored to the interests of the participants, she continued. She cited as an example a disscussion group on sexuality that was formed by women from Harbor Springs.

Important and extremely vital work in the eyes of the center's board of directors, which is made up of women from the five county area, is the Spouse Abuse Program.

In 1978 more than 50 women called the center for help during times of extreme domestic crises. Others were referred to the center by area social agencies and police departments.

Last year 37 women who had been abused came to the center for help, bringing with them their children, and generally no more than the clothes on their back.

Desperate to break out of the cycle of beatings, threats and mental cruelty, these women, from Charlevoix, Emmet, Antrim, Otsego and Cheboygan counties, sought help – moral and physical – through the volunteers working at the center.

The center has been able to offer a chance to change the terrible pattern of life in which abused women find themselves trapped, with nowhere to turn, no hope for escape.

The center, Ms. Mancinelli and Ms. Stewart emphasized does not take a position advocating any particular solution to the problem of abused women, but tries to assist each woman find the best solution for herself and her family.

Volunteers from among the membership help abused women seeking assistance by providing moral support, a time to think about their situation from a distance, receive appropriate medical attention, seek counsel of law enforcement personnel, lawyers, psychologists, financial advisors and social service agencies.

During 1978, while assisting abused women, the center relied on volunteers in the five counties to open their homes to the displaced women and children, and to shepherd them through the process of getting help.

Late last year Michigan established a $1-million fund for the creation of spouse abuse shelters around the state. The Womens Resource Center is in the process of applying for funds to open such a shelter in this area. The center is now soliciting matching funds from local units of government, such as the Emmet County Board of Commissioners who have been asked to provide $3,000. The commissioners are considering that request.

If such a shelter were established, women needing time to sort out their lives and escape the cycle of brutality would stay at the shelter just long enough to decide if they can rebuild their marriage, with appropriate counseling, or if they should obtain a divorce and establish an independent life for themselves.

Ms. Mancinelli also said the center is in the process of applying for money to fund Project SNAP – Special Needs Achievement Program.

"This would broaden our reach into the community so we could offer more personal growth classes, parenting workshops, and workshops in consumers skill to people of lower income levels."

In addition, working closely with area mental health clinics and psychologists, the center's counselors meet with women on the one-to-one basis, Ms. Stewart said.

Many women walk into our offices seeking help," she said. "They come to talk about problems ranging from depression and marital problems to spouse abuse. We do a lot of referral work, back and forth, with area psychologists. Some people need more professional help than we can offer, others find what they need in support groups, and some people we see as individuals over a long period of time."

One of the first projects of the center was to create a card file referral system to help women seeking answers to questions on many issues – from where to look for jobs to how to start a small business or what various social service agencies really offer.

Volunteers from the center interviewed the personnel of every relevant public and private organization in the area, and put together a file which includes important "insiders information" such as who in which agency is really helpful.

All this has been accomplished on a budget of less than $3,000 – coming from a few small contributions and members $5 annual dues.

The $5 due entitles a member to the monthly newsletter from the Center, free use of the lending library and discounts on workshop fees.

The directors would like to double their 224 current active membership during the current drive.

McKinnon resigns from county commission

Richard A. McKinnon, Jr., who has represented District 8 (East Jordan) on the Charlevoix County Board of Commissinners, has tendered his resignation effective Feb. 1.

He has accepted a job in Shelby, North Carolina and will soon move to that area.

McKinnon, a Democrat, joined the board of commissioners in the spring of 1976 following a special election. He was subsequently re-elected in the general elections of 1978 and 1978.

Big Rock employees win President's Award

Employees of Consumers Power company's Big Rock Point Nuclear Plant, have earned the utility's top recognition for safety, the President's Award.

It will be presented at ceremonies at the plant. J.D. Selby, President of the Company, will make the presentation to C. J. Hartmon, Plant Superintendent on Friday, Feb. 2.

The Consumers Power Award recognizes the plant's 115 employees as having the safest work record in 1978 among all of the operating plants in the company.

Under a formula which computes man-hours worked, number of medical cases, severity of injuries and traffic accidents, the department had the best safety performance among all departments involved in the production of energy. No disabling injuries were incurred by plant personnel during 1978.

This is the second consecutive year the Big Rock Point Plant has won the award.

An annual safety award program was first began by the company in 1948. The present program was established in 1960.

The award is part of the company's accident prevention program. Its purpose is to stimulate enthusiasm for and practice of safety on the job, at home and on the highways.

Hartman lauded department employees for their individual efforts and their enthusiastic teamwork in preventing injuries.

The Big Rock Point Plant was the fourth commercial nuclear plant licensed in the country when it began operation in 1962. It has a demonstrated capability of 63,000 kilowatts.

Campus Life Pageant Sunday

The 11th annual Campus Life Sweetheart Pageant will be held at the Petoskey High School Auditorium at 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

Kathy Cook, 17, Charlevoix High School Senior, will represent Charlevoix in the pagennt.

The 1977 Campus Sweetheart, Brenda Boss, also of Charlevoix, will officinte at the coronation of her successor.

Supporters of Kathy are reminded that representation at the pageant by people from the home community of the candidate counts toward 20 points toward the total points a candidate must earn. Points are also given for funds raised, stage appearance, talent and other special categories.

The pageant is Campus Life's only fund-raising project.

Campus Life will sponsor a salad-luncheon at the Community Church of God from 11 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. Thursday and a pie sale at Olesen's Food Store on Feb. 10.

Gibbons elected president

Michael Gibbons has been elected president of the Charlevoix Federal Credit Union. The board of directors elected Gibbons at its Jan. 30 meeting.

Guy Smith was elected vice president and Donna Smith was elected secretary/treasurer.

The board has three new members this year: John Dixon, Douglas Sudman and James McKinney.

A Sunday service

In church last Sunday, I looked at the people sitting around me, and I remembered 34 years ago.

"I'm thinking of when I was a chaplain's assistant," I whispered to my wife. "It would serve us right if these people asked us to get out of their church."

In 1945, after returning from winning the war in Europe, I ended up at Camp Polk, La. I was made assistant to a colonel who was a chaplain, in that order. He was a Catholic priest who made a great impression on my young mind. Because of him, and other ministers like him, I quit going to church for many years.

The colonel was Regular Army. He loved all the military trappings and bragged incessantly about his medals and ribbons. His idea of saving a soul was to find a soldier eligible for discharge and talk him into staying in the Army.

To give you an idea, one day it was announced there would soon be a big parade and ceremony at which a visiting general would pin medals on deserving enlisted men.

"Write yourself up for a Legion of Merit," the colonel ordered. "I never had an assistant who didn't win a medal and I don't want to start now."

The Legion of Merit is the highest award given for outstanding service performed under non-combat conditions. I didn't want it. All I wanted was a discharge which was due in a few months. So my cheek was full of tongue when I wrote how I had most distinguished myself at Camp Polk, thus earning the Legion of Merit.

The winter it had been ordered that every jeep in camp switch to winter tires. This meant switch tires, not wheels. You had to get a crowbar and pry 4 tires off the rims, then pry four others on. That was work to which I was unaccustomed.

There were about 1,500 jeeps in camp. By Christmas, 1,499 had switched tires. My jeep was the lone exception. The chaplain never noticed because he always looked up, straining to see how many officers in heaven outranked him.

This shirking was not accomplished easily. I had to park behind trees and avoid MP vehicles at all times. Most of all, I had to procrastinate skillfully whenever the motor pool captain asked when I was going to change those bleeping tires. I usually told him I had to drive the chaplain in chapel.

"I'd change them now but I don't want to interfere with every soldier's right to worship as he sees fit," I would explain. Captains never argue with generals or God. The tires were never switched. But, surprisingly, I didn't get the Legion of Merit.

One of the places to which I regularly drove the chaplain on summer times was the swampy side of the camp where he gave patriotic-Christian sermons to black soldiers who weren't allowed in the camp's main church unless they were carrying brooms.

I asked the chaplain how he could possibly square racial segregation with Christianity.

"I'm a soldier, not a politician," he answered. "I just follow orders."

That's when I decided what the hell and begnn waiting outside in the jeep, parked behind a tree, when the chaplain went into a clapel to preach hypocrisy. It was a long time before my church attendance improved much.

Which brings us back to last Sunday in church, 34 years later, when I suggested to my wife that it might be appropriate if we were asked ta leave, ar at least sweep the aisles. I was kidding, and glad of it.

We were in a black churi... My wife and I were the only white people in the congregation. We had gone there uninvited, but we were made welcome, as we had known we would be.

It seemed the right place for us to be on the Sunday designated for honoring the memory of Martin Luther King Jr. A lot of things have improved since I drove the chaplain to segregated chapels on an Army camp. Dr. King gets credit for so many of those improvements.

I wouldn't preach that all is well, that all prejudices have been overcome. Most churches are still segregated. Colonels are still following orders. Most of us still don't deserve the Legion af Merit.

But we're comin', Lord, we're comin'. Someday, even those tires might get switched.

A time to raise Cain

I don't know what I'm doing in Michigan today. Or you, and you, and you, for that matter.

If we had the courage of our convictions, we'd all be down in Washington prepared to raise the roof of the U.S. Capital because Charles Diggs of Michigan is still seated in the House of Representatives three months after he was found guilty by a jury of his peers of mail fraud and payroll padding.

I would almost feel better if there were something racial about the indignation building within me. But there isn't. There were nine blacks on the jury which heard the charges against Diggs, and they all agreed that he had broken the law.

Of course, the verdict is being appealed, so perhaps I should not be so impatient. Furthermore, Diggs was re-elected by a landslide vote in the Detroit ghettos after his conviction, which means either that his constituents can neither read nor hear or that they feel their interests can best be represented in Washington by a convicted felon. They may have a point.

In the meantime, House Democrats feel they should do something to reprimand Diggs, but they aren't sure what. They have asked the Congressional Ethics Committee for suggestions. You can be sure that several weeks more will pass before they decide on a course of action.

To be sure, Diggs already has lost a couple of sub-committee chairmanships because of his criminal affairs, but that only means he has less work to do for virtually the same pay.

The Constitution, of course, provides that members of the House may expel a member for serious miseonduct. And it would seem that accepting kick-backs from members of your personal staff from their grossly inflated wages to pay your own personal debts would easily fall into that category.

The House, you'll remember, gave the boot to the late Rep. Adam Clayton Powell of New York on grounds of miseonduct – and Powell was never found guilty of any crime in any court.

Then why is the House dragging its heels in the Diggs cnse?

Your guess is as good as mine, but I suspect that the fact that Diggs is black has something to do with it. Although Powell also was black, racial backlash today mandates that blacks must be handled with kid gloves.

Furthermore, many lawmakers seem to feel that since Diggs did so well at the polls after his conviction, that a sizeable section of the American electorate must be in his corner. This may be true, but I doubt it.

Do the criminals of America really deserve their own representative in Washington?

Diggs, of course, could relieve the anguish of his colleagues in Congress – and of the American people in general – by submitting his resignation. But he has said he won't resign and there are no indications that he is about to change his inind.

In the meantime, how am I as an American parent supposed to support the American Congress in the eyes of my children when a convicted felon sits in Washington making the laws? It can't be done.

The longer Congress dallies in the Diggs affair, the more its credibility becomes suspect among the American people.

If Diggs still stands convicted after the appeals process is over, how in the world does he intend to represent his constituents while serving a three-year term behind bars? The possibility of a congressional office operating out of Leavenwarth Penitentiary is nauseating.

I am going to head for Washington to raise Cain, as soon as I can find five minutes to call my own.

A FRIEND from Petoskey collared me the other day to complain about the condition of the sidewalks in downtown Charlevoix.

"I went over there to do some shopping," she said, "but I could scarcely negotiate the piles of snow and ice in front of the shops on Bridge Street. Don't you people ever shovel your walks?"

How should I answer her?

Making life easier

Don't you love those commercials of a woman propped up in bed who looks up from the novel she is reading and says, "I'm cleaning my oven"? Or how about the one where it shows her snoozing away and a voice from somewhere says, "Joyce's toilet bowl is getting clean as she sleeps"?

Nothing works when I sleep. Whatever is there the night before I climb into bed is there when I wake up.

Not only that, I am forever being accosted by people who implore me to devote just a minute or so a day to a chore that will eventually make my life easier.

I keep a count of these offers one day and came up with the follawing tally:

My dentist asked me to brush and floss for just three minutes a day.

My minister asked me to pray and meditate for only five minutes a day.

My hairdresser suggested I brush my hair 99 strokes for just six minutes a day.

My doctor advised me to exercise daily by walking for only 30 minutes.

My mother said it would take only four minutes daily to clean up the splatters in my oven as soon as I made them.

My husband ragged me to death to put aside just two minutes a day to take an iron tablet.

A cosmetic salesman told me to take three minutes out of every day and rub moisture into my skin.

My best friend told me to kick off my shoes, elevate my feet and nap for 20 minutes a day and I'd feel wonderful.

Cleaning my contact lenses only takes five minutes a day.

Taking vitamins daily only takes a bite of 1½ minutes out of my schedule.

Buffing the floor daily for eight minutes cuts down on the big job cleaner at the end of the week.

Pouring a little baking soda down my disposer daily takes only 2½ minutes a day.

Spritzing a little air purifier in my kitchen each day keeps germs to a minimum and takes only three minutes.

Just a few drops of vitamins in my dog's bowl and he'll feel better and have a shiny coat. It only takes a minute a day.

I tallied up all my minutes one day and came up with only four hours and ten minutes for eating and sleeping.

Make that four hours. It takes me 10 minutes a day to keep track of where my time goes.

Gambling part of American psyche

"The Gambler"
(D. Schlitz)
Kenny Rogers
(Copyright) United Artists (ASCAP), 1978

The Gambler
On a warm summer's evenin' on a train bound for nowhere
I met up with a gambler we were both too tired to sleep
So we took to a starin' out the window at the darkness
'til boredom overtook us and he began to speak
He said, "Son I've made a life out of reading people's faces and knowin' what the cards were by the way they held their eyes
So if you don't mind my sayin' I can see you're out of aces for a taste of your whiskey I'll give you some advice
So I handed him my bottle and he drank down my last swallow
Then he bummed a cigarette and asked me for a light and the night got deathly quiet and his face lost all expression said "if you're gonna play the game, Boy, you gotta learn to play it right
You got to know when to hold 'em, know when to fold 'em
Know when to walk away and know when to run
You never count your money when you're sittin' at the table
They'll be time enough for countin' when the dealin's done
Every gambler knows that the secret to survivin' is knowin' what to throw away and knowin' what to keep
'Cause every hand's a winner and ev'ry hand's a loser
And the best that you can hope for is to die in your sleep
And when he finished speakin' he turned back to the window crushed out his cigarette and faded off to sleep
And somewhere in the darkness the gambler he broke even but in his final words I found an ace that I could keep

You probably wouldn't guess by looking at me, I don't wear a visor or a sleeve band. I don't carry a deck of cards in my purse or rattle dice in my coat pocket. Nobody has ever called me "The Charlevoix Kid" or even "Pearl." Only a select few have ever called my bluff in a game of Seven Card Stud. But if confessions were the order of the day, I would have to own up to some gamblin' blood.

Long ago, when I was a child, family gatherings often took the inevitable turn into penny ante sessions. The adults would simply clear away the lace tablecloth and roast beef and spread out the green oil cloth and cards. Some of my earliest memories are linked to my dad's lap, where curled up and peering over his hand, I was educated in the subtleties of poker: yes, to read the eyes as well as to know that three of a kind beats two pairs. It's not that I wasn't exposed to more esthetic pastimes. It's just that I was the first kid on my block able to spot a one-eyed Jack. I never knew for sure if my mother approved (being of more aristocratic stock) until some years later. I happened to catch a glint in her eye as she raked in a $7 pot in a friendly game of "Burnie-Burnie."

The psychology behind the principle of gambling is not only appealing but contagious. Something for nothing or much from little is the whole point behind all of the games: poker, grocery store Bingo, the church turkey raffle, gamepoint pools, the lottery. Why else do we hear from Readers Digest every year? Even the elementary school bazaar participates. One of my children paid out a nickel at the fish pond and hauled in a quarter at the end af his hook. Next year maybe we'll win a cake at the cake walk. It's chance. It's luck. It's titillating. Gambling is part of our American psyche.

You never know who to suspect. I caught my own mother-in-law, a real lady by anyane's standards, red-handed on our daughter's seventh birthday. She was in charge of games while I frosted the cake. "Grandma Ada," I inquired, "What's going on in there?" It was getting awfully quiet for six little girls at a birthday party. "Society Crap." She replied while dealing out the cards. "Don't worry, dear, We're using mints for betting."

I know, I know. Gambling can become a sickness. Whole fortunes and scanty life-long savings have been wiped out in a single evening at the table. Marriages have been ruined, lives wasted. Ponies. Numbers. Hush. Hush. Vegas. Reno. Murders. Coronaries.

But on the wholesome side of the coin, I don't know of any other single educational tool with more diversity than a simple deck of cards. Counting. Classification. Color discrimination. Grouping. Sequence. Try poker chip stacking for small motor coordination. Dice: counting, visual discrimination, matching. Even betting can teach the value of money, which you already know if you've ever lost your shirt.

Kenny Rogers isn't singing a protest either pro or con legalized gambling. He's dabbling in perception. I swear I'm not advocating the installation of slot machines in our schools. I'm dabbling in fun. Gambling is something you either enjoy or you don't. Nevertheless, I can't help thinking about how much more interesting it would make laundry day if we could just think of a way to put a quarter on the corner of each load.

A return to 7 classes

Editors Note: Two weeks ago a parent of a Charlevoix Middle School student wrote the Courier and asked why a seventh class hour was recently created. School Principal Vince Chew sent the followlug release to the Courier in response.

Students at the Charlevoix Middle School are attending seven classes each day due to a schedule change which took effect January 22nd. This is a return to the type of schedule which had been used for several years prior to January, 1975.

The number of daily classes had been reduced to six in 1975 because increased enrollment resulted in too few rooms and teachers to accomodate seven subjects a day for each student. Since the middle school is now back to its pre-1975 enrollment, it is possible to return to seven subjects as many parents, teachers and students have requested.

For sixth-grade students the new schedule provides extra time in English instruction and physical education. The other subjects are decreased five minutes. Recess has been discontinued.

Seventh- and eighth-grade students give up five minutes from each of their former six subjects. This time, along with a 15-minute increase in the total class time for the day, provides for an additional subject to be elected.

Seventh-grade subjects are English, math, physical education, science, social studies, BHS (basic home and shop), and fine arts, which may be band, choir, or an art music combination.

Eighth-grade students must take English, math, science and social studies. They also elect three more courses from a list which includes: art, band, choir, French, home economics, jazz band, journalism, library aide, office aide, physical education and shop.

Reading is required for any seventh- or eight-grade student who is more than one year below grade level on the Metropolitan reading test.

Support waste amendment

Editor:

I am writing to ask you to support the McGovern Amendment on Radioactive Waste.

Michigan's recent experience shows the confused state of nuclear waste disposal technology.

Just two years ago, the Energy Research and Development Administration, now the Department of Energy, was actively investigating the salt beds of northern lower Michigan for a nuclear waste dump. A consultant for the nuclear industry was brought to the area to assure the residents that there were no waste disposal problems without solutions.

The plan was to glassify the waste in large, stainless steel canisters and lower it upproximately 1,000 feet into the salt beds. Recent studies have cnst serious doubt on the advisability of such a procedure.

In the August 5, 1977 issue of Science Magazine, a French research team advised that these wastes be disposed of in dry plains, free of a major ground water recharge table. Northern Inwer Michigan fits neither of these criteria.

An article by Thomas O'Toole in the Washington Post of December 24, 1978 reports the following:

1) Dr. William Lath, Stanford geochemist, recently has said that glass is soluble and leachable and to store nuclear waste in glass is "what you would do...to maximize activity in the geologic environment."

2) Dr. David Stewart, of the U.S. Geologic Survey, says that "salt is not dry and it's not O.K." Recent studies show that salt contains traces of water and chemical impurities resulting in a corrosive liquid which when combined with heat and pressure can eat through stainless steel in a matter of days.

3) Dr. Ferruccia Gera, of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory, says that "it is virtually impossible to make a rational case for any specific length of required containment...100,000 years or...exceeding five million years."

4) An Materials Research Society meeting in Boston in early December, 1978, a dozen papers were presented by scientists challenging glass and salt.

In view of these findings, it hardly seems reasonable to store these wastes in Michigan's salt beds.

In the next three months, Congress will make a decision on whether or not the Federal Government has the right to force a state to accept a national or international radioactive waste dump. The vote in the Senate will come in February. Senator McGovern has proposed an amendment to give states the right to approve or disapprove nuclear waste dumps.

Please support this amendment.

Nevadn has accepted the waste. The bomb test site there, which is already contaminated, may be a suitable spot. If not, perhaps some other Federal nuclear resenrch reservatinn could be used.

Yours truly,
Gerald A. Drake, M.D.

A look at state employee pay

Editor:

It is likely that within the next few weeks there will be a great deal of concern expressed in many quarters over the pay situation for state workers. This letter is an attempt to put the matter in perspective; for you and for your readers.

The issue is not conflict between units of government. It is a matter of differing conclusions reached for different reasons. The Michigan Civil Service Commission must under the Constitution "fix rates of compensation" for all classified employees. Basically, its determination for the 1979-80 fiscal year (which begins Oct. 1, 1979) was for a 7 per cent increase for all classified state employees, and an extra 5 percent for some 2,400 individuals in correctional security classifications. In his budget recommendations to the Legislature, the Governor recommended that these pay increase determinations be reduced by a uniforn 2 percent. Even though they deal with the same point – that is, the pay which state employees will receive beginning October 1 – the Civil Service Commission's action was a compensation decision, while the Governor's recommendatiun was a budgetary decision.

The Civil Service Commission utilizes a "Compensation Hearings Panel" of three experts who take formal testimony on economic and wage matters. The Compensation Hearings Panel recommendations were adopted substantially intact by the Civil Service Commission. Consideration of numerous factors, including the state's fiscal situation, went into the pay determination, which was within the anti-inflation guidelines of President Carter. While the Governor's representative before the Compensation Hearings Panel had advocated a 4 percent increase for state employees, the same representative suggested to the Civil Service Commission that they "resist any attempts to increase the Compensation Hearings Panel recommendations above 7 percent". So in the final analysis, the Civil Service Commission determination on pay reflected the best available statistical and documentary evidence, including the expert testimony of state employee organizations (who all asked for raises higher than 7 percent).

The State Constitution provides that the Civil Service Commission pay determination shall be transmitted to the Legislature as part of the Governor's budget. The budgetary responsibility for the Governor, of course, is much larger than this one item, and his recommendations encompass a great many other things. With regard to classified state employee pay, the Legislature may, in accordance with the Constitution, unifarmly reduce the determination made by the Civil Service Commission. That is what the Governar recommended.

So the issue of pay for state classified employees, addressed from two different perspectives, is properly before the Legislature, the elected representatives of the people. It is my hope that this salient fact will be kept in mind during the next few weeks, when there is likely to be much discussion and debate concerning the matter of state employee pay levels.

Sincerely,
Richard A. Ross
State Personnel Director

George Verwys receives award for achievements

George A. Verwys, former resident now with the Federal Systems Division of IBM, was among four members with the FSD division of the company to receive Technical Excellence Awards for outstanding achievements.

The presentations were made at the FSD Technical Symposium held recently at UCLA in Los Angeles. The symposium, the first held by the company, was to recognize FSDers who have had key roles in sustaining technical excellence. Those attending represented Avionic Systems, Command and Space Systems and Shipboard and Defense Systems.

The prime objective of the Technical Symposium was division-level recognition for engineers and programmers who have made technical contributions to FSD. It was also designed to promote exchange of information and ideas, provide exposure to new technology, stimulate interest in advanced knowledge and broaden business perspectives.

VerWys, an engineer with the Command and Space Systems at Owego, N.Y., received recognition as the prime contributor in the development technology of Owego's Emitter Location System (ELS). He led the technical effort from systems inception through the successful conclusion of the flight tests.

The son of Mrs. Pauline (Polly) VerWys and the late Abe VerWys, Verwys is a 1951 graduate of the Charlevoix High School. He was graduated from the University of Michigan School of Engineering and received his master's degree at the University of Pennsylvania. He was with the Electronics Division of RCA before joining IBM (International Business Machines) 14 years ago.

Art class offered for children 6-10

A legitimate chance to "play in the mud" is coming up for youngsters ages 6 to 10, as The Crooked Tree Arts Council includes a six-week session with clay in their spring art class for children.

The first six weeks of the class will be an exploration of many different art forms including painting and drawing under the direction of Cynthia Haynes, a teacher and artist from the Harbor Springs area.

For the second six weeks, kids will revel in clay, learning the basics of pottery from Bonnie Poellet an art major from Central Michigan University and a stained-glass artist as well.

The 12-week session is $25 per student and will be held Saturday mornings from 9:30 a.m. to 11 a.m. in the art room of North Central Michigan College. Classes begin Feb. 10 and must be limited to 15 children. To reserve space, it's suggested you call the Arts Council office, 347-3973, extension 371 before Friday, Feb. 10. Fees are payable the first day of class and include materials.

Big week ahead for Rayder basketball team

This will be a big week for the Charlevoix Rayder basketball team as the Rayders fight for second place in the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference.

Charlevoix, 5-5 in conference play, hosts Rogers City on Tuesday and then travels to St. Ignace on Friday. Rogers City is 5-4 in the conference while St. Ignace stands 7-3.

If the Rayders can win both contests, they'll be right in the thick of the chase for second place. The Rayders have won seven of their last eight games, including a 75-55 drubbing of Harbor Springs and a 67-66 squeaker over Grayling last week.

The win over Harbor Springs ended a long drought. It had been seven years since a Charlevoix basketball team had beaten Harbor Springs.

Charlevoix led practically the entire game in disposing of the Rams. Tim Hoffman scored a game-high 27 points to pace the Rayder attack. Hoffman played the forward slot usually occupied by Bob Plumm. Plumm injured his knee and did not play in last week's games.

Pat Schmidt and Kevin Kratt also scored in double figures for Charlevoix. Schmidt canned 20 points while Kratt added 16. Harbor Springs had two players in double figures, Doug Leik with 12 and Chris Shepler with 14.

Grayling, 6-10 in the conference, nearly pulled a surprise on Charlevoix. The Vikings played the Rayders even-up all the way. Charlevoix led 17-14 after the first quarter, 41-39 ot half, and 56-54 after three quarters.

Kratt led all Rayder scorers with 25 points, including four throws in the fourth quarter as Grayling tried to overtake the Rayders. Hoffman was the only other Rader to score in double figures. He had 12 points.

High scoring Jeff Stancil popped in 30 points for Grayling.

Charlevoix is 7-5 on the season.

Individual trophies will be presented after each match and the team trophy will be given sbon after the tournament ends.

Parents needed for Koch ski league

Area recreational director Mike Davis reports that about 20 children are now involved in the Bill Koch Ski League, but more parents must become involved to make the program a success.

"We don't want them just to come and drop the kids off," he says. "We want them there to watch the kids and ski themselves."

The Bill Koch Ski League is organized by the United States Ski Association (USSA) for children 15 years old or younger. USSA is responsible for running all kinds of skiing events, and the USSA Bill Koch Ski League is supported by a grant to USSA by The Travelers Insurance Companies through its PEP (Physical Exercise Pays) program. the USSA and The Travelers, in cooperation with the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, want more and more children to get out and try skiing because "it's fun and good exercise, too".

The local league meets Sunday afternoons in different places. Next Sunday the skiers will gather at the entrance to Bell's Bay State Park at 2 p.m. "We will play some games on skis, games like soccer", Davis says, "then if it's nice we'll probably roast some hot dogs and marshmallows."

Davis has seven pairs of skis, sizes one to four and a half, for loan to children who do not have their own. Those wishing to borrow them should call Davis during the week at 547-4471.

Nellie Hiehle has been assisting Davis with skiing instructions. Other adults, even those without children, are welcome to join the group.

The troop and their leaders left here Saturday and spent the day at Tehquamenon Falls and at the American and Canadian Soo where they spent the night.

Departing at 8:30 a.m. Sunday they made the trip 125 miles north through the canyon aboard the 13-car train. During the trip they had their meals in the diner aboard the train. Approximately 700 passengers made the trip.

Meet Charlevoix

...Louie Edwards

Tomorrow marks the beginning of Boy Scout Week, commemorating the founding of the Boy Scouts of America on Feb. 8, 1910. To find out about scouting in the Charlevoix area, this week the Courier talks with Louie Edwards, veteran scoutmaster.

COURIER: How many scout troops are there in Charlevoix, and how long have they been operating?

EDWARDS: There are two, No. 11 and No. 43. Troop 11 is the older one. It has been sponsored by the Kiwanis Club for at least 40 years. There were 45 Scouts in Troop 11 before it was divided in 1972. Now there are fewer than half that Number. I've been scoutmaster of Troop 11 for 21 years.

COURIER: Do you have anything planned to celebrate Boy Scout Week?

EDWARDS: We'll have our annual awards banquet next Monday evening, the 12th. The parents and members of the Kiwanis Club will be there to share in the program. One of our scouts will receive the Life award, which is one step under Eagle. I hope he will achieve the Eagle award later on. Only one out of 100 scouts does. We've had five Eagles in our Troop since I became scoutmaster.

COURIER: What are some of your activities during the year?

EDWARDS: We try to have a variety of activities. We have a campout in the fall, and that's also the time we have our money-raising project. For this we buy popcorn in bulk and the boys package it. It's good popcorn and the project has been a successful one. At Christmas time we have a party with Troop 43. This winter we'll have a campout for the more experienced campus, probably at Bell's Bay or North Point. Recently we took the snow train up to Agawa Canyon. We have campouts in the spring and also participate in the camporee with other troops in the council. We don't meet during the summer but the boys go to the Scenic Trails Council camp down near Traverse City.

COURIER: Where and when do you have your regular meetings?

EDWARDS: At the Middle School cafeteria at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday evenings.

COURIER: Do you need more members?

EDWARDS: Yes, and they can join any time. All boys from 11 to 18 are welcome. Many of the older boys stay in as leaders and work toward higher ranks. Anyone who is interested can call me at 547-6630.

COURIER: Were you a scout when you were a boy?

EDWARDS: No, when I became scoutmaster I just started learning with the boys. It's been a lot of fun during the years. I have the feeling of having accomplished something. There's one boy in the troop now whose father was in it several years ago.

COURIER: What is the basis of scouting?

EDWARDS: The underlying part is learning good citizenship. Everything we do works in that direction.

COURIER: Who works with you in Troop 11?

EDWARDS: John Houting is assistant scoutmaster. He's a fourth grade teacher. Members of the committee are Frank Schuch, Val Avery, David Novotny, Jerry Paul, and Gunnar Lundteigen.

COURIER: What are your hobbies?

EDWARDS: Railroads, for one. I take pictures and ride as much as possible. My parents spend the winter in Florida. I drive them down and come back on a train. Then I go to get them on a train. I take pictures of anything to do with railroads – slides and movies. I figured out a long time ago that if it's moving, I should take a movie, if it's not, I take slides. It's probably because I like trains that I like to visit big cities. I'm also a circus fan. When we went down to Indiana to pick up the popcorn this year, we drove into Chicago from there and saw a circus.

COURIER: Were you born in Charlevoix?

EDWARDS: Yes, and I graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1943. Within the week after graduation, half the boys in the graduating class went into the service. I went about three months later and served in the Navy in the Pacific theater for three and a half years.

COURIER: How long have you been associated with Edwards IGA?

EDWARDS: Dick and I opened the store in 1947.

Consumers Power seeks to increase electric rates

Consumers Power Company will ask the Michigan Public Service Commission today to authorize a three-step increase in its electric rates. Under the proposal, the first part would become effective in 1979 and the other two steps would take effect in 1980.

In the application, the company is requesting $54 million in interim rate relief in 1979. This request is expected to be acted upon by September. The utility said that amount will partially cover the effects of increased costs due to inflation since the last rate increase and that the request is within the price guidelines established by President Carter.

An additional $159 million is requested to reflect added costs due to expected inflation for the remainder of 1979, the expected continuation of cost increases in 1980, and a higher return on investment. The company anticipates that the commission will act upon this rate request in early 1980.

The third step of the increase, for $111 million, reflects revenue requirements because of the third generating unit at the utility's coal-fired J.H. Campbell plant at West Olive, which is expected to go into effect when the new unit is placed in service in September, 1980. The unit construction cost is estimated to be $560 millions.

The company noted that operation of the new unit will reduce the utility's requirements for oil. Substitution of the coal-fired Campbell plant fuel costs for the fuel costs of equivalent generation at the company's oil-fired plants will result in fuel savings of approximately $30 million per year.

John D. Selby, president of Consumers Power, said the Campbell unit is needed to meet the growing energy requirements of present and future customers in the area served by the company. In 1978, 28,000 electric customers were added to Consumers Power's system.

"Any time you add a plant or a unit to a utility's system, the rates must reflect the cost to build and operate it," Selby stated. "The alternative is inadequate generating capacity and, ultimately, inadequate electric supplies for customers. Without that energy, business and industry and the jobs they provide will be lost.

"We must face it," he concluded. "In today's inflationary economy, the cost of electricity and all other forms of energy can go nowhere but up."

If the amount requested is approved, it will total $324 million. Selby emphasized that while the amount requested is substantial, it would be spread over a period of nearly two years.

"To give this a different perspective, a residential customer's monthly bill for 500 kilowatthours will increase about 20 cents per day by late 1980 if the entire amount is granted," Selby said. "I doubt that today there are many restaurants where you can buy a cup of coffee for that price."

The official stated that in addition to recovering the costs of the Campbell unit, the increase is needed to offset increasing operating costs caused by inflation, which have risen 16.4 percent since the company last applied for an electric rate increase in January, 1977, and are expected to continue to increase in the two-year period covered by the rate application.

He pointed out that the company is spending $675 million in 1979 to assure continued relinble service to customers and will invest approximately $2.1 billion between now and 1983. Only one-thirds of the funds the company spends to improve and expand its facilities comes from company-generated earnings. The remaining two-thirds must be obtained from investors, he stated.

In order to raise the required amount of capital from investors, the company is asking the commission to increase the authorized return on overall investment from 8.90 percent to 10.16 percent. This reflects recover of the increased interest cost of new bonds to be issued by the company and an increase in the authorized return on common stock owners portion of total investment from 13.5 percent to 15.5 percent.

Company officials called the present rate of return inadequate when it was approved in 1978, and the executive said it does not realistically represent the true cost of obtaining financing for the company's construction program at today's market prices.

A proposed new depreciation schedule updates the present depreciation rates which were approved by the commission in 1975.

CHARLEVOIX RAYDER MARCHING BAND TO APPEAR AT HOLLAND TULIP FESTIVAL

The Band program in the Charlevoix Public Schools is gearing up for its mid-winter and spring activities. Three hundred seventy five students from grades 6 through 12 are involved in the instrumental program.

The Symphony Band has students from grades 9 thru 12. There are 107 members in this group. The concert band is made up of 9th and 10th grade students. The 8th, 7th and 6th grade students make up the three bands from the middle school. The sixth grade beginning band students meet two times per week with Mrs. Evelyn Wujcik. All the other groups meet under the direction of Gary Stutzman for a full class period every day.

The instrumental programs in all schools meet with many expenses during the course of the year. Our band members work at many fund raising projects throughout the year to help meet these expenses. The current cost for transportation by bus is approximately 76 cents per mile per bus and the bands pay for all of their bus cost when they travel to make special appearances, such as their trip to Marquette this fall. The students raised $1200.00 to pay for the trip to NMU. The uniforms of the Symphony & Marching Bands were purchased in 1968 and they need to be replaced soon. The cost of each uniform will be approximately $200.00. We need 120 uniforms for $200.00 each and the cost will be approximately $20,000.00. 2 years ago the band boosters purchased $10,000.00 worth of new instruments and we will soon be in need of more to replace the instruments that are too old to be used.

The band program has continued to grow and prosper under the direction of Mr. Gary Stutzman. The bands have a very fine reputation throughout the State of Michigan and in order to maintain this status the band members must work hard not only learning to play their instruments, but also on fund raising projects to help keep the band operating.

The goal of every student in the instrumental program is to someday be a member of the Symphony Band. The Symphony Band is the top performing group and its members also make up the nucleus of the Red Rayder Marching Band. The Marching band is open to any concert band member who shows the ability and desire to march and one who's schedule can be altered so he can participate.

The Rayder Marching Band, under the direction of Mr. Stutzman, has appeared at several college band days at Northern Michigan University and Michigan State University and Alma College. They also performed at the half time of the Chicago Bears vs. Greenbay Packers football game in 1975.

They have been the feature band at our local Marching Band Festival and this year the band performed at the half time of the Northern Michigan University vs. Whitewater Wisconsin football game. The marching band has been honored this spring by receiving an invitation to perform at the Tulip Festival in Holland, Michigan, on May 19. Participation in this event is by invitation only and bands from Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Michigan take part. This is the fiftieth anniversary of the festival and it will be a grand event to take part in.

As director of bands I would like to thank all of the students for their participation, dedication, and hours upon hours of hard work to help make our bands what they are today. And a special vote of thanks to the many parents that support their children and the program. We have an executive committee of band parents headed by President Joan Graves. This group organizes all tour fund raising projects and then the band parents are called upon to help. I would like to urge all and/or any of the band parents who would like to help out on this executive committee to please call Mrs. Joan Graves at 547-2390 or Mr. Stutzman at the music office 547-2882.

Please help support our program by taking part in our many fund raising projects. And come out and support our bands when they appear in Petoskey on Feb. 24 at the district band festival for high schools. And the jr. high festival in Harbor Springs on March 3.

The early settlers of Charlevoix recalled

EDITOR'S NOTE: In 1879, Charlevoix became a chartered village. To commemorate the 100 year anniversary, the Courier is publishing a synopsis of Charlevoix history, written by long-time resident Rosa Nettleton in 1944. In this, the second installment, Mrs. Nettleton tells about the arrival of some of the early settlers.

In the fall of 1857, Seth F. Mason and family, with his brother-in-law Morrrs J. Stockman and wife, sailed for Pine River, where they arrived on the 25th day of October in that year. Mr. Mason lived here with his family until his accidental drowning in 1870.

When Mr. Mason first brought his family to Charlevoix, he could find no place to stay but an unfinished, abandoned Mormon cabin. Here the family spent the first night, and Mr. Mason soon took up a homestead and developed the land, being a part of what is now known as the "south side" of Charlevoix. In 1860, a year before his death, Mr. Mason harvested a fine crop of oats on that portion of our town bounded by Bridge, State, Antrim and Mason streets.

Of the Mason family of nine children, there are living today (in 1944) only two, Mrs. Ida Ackert and Mrs. Lottie Markham. Mrs. Markham now lives on land which is a part of the homestead cleared by her father. On looking across the river from her window, she recalled the time when her brother John, then nine years old, walked across. That water is now 17 feet deep.

Among other old settlers who came at about this time or shortly after were Hugh Miller, Philo Beers, who had the first drug store, Wm. Laister, who kept the first general store, Robert Bedwin, Wm. Holland, Nelson Amsile, S.S. Wakefield, and W.C. Newman.

About the last days of that decade, a sail boat came from the direction of Little Traverse (now Harbor Springs). In it were Captain Samuel Horton and his family. Their intention was to sail along the coast to Grand Rapids, where Mr. Horton had two sons living, but the winds remaining adverse after they had put into Pine River for supplies, they at last decided to remain here, Mr. Horton settling in that locality known as Horton's Bay.

With him as a passenger was a young man by the name of Archibald Buttars, who later became a prominent citizen of Charlevoix serving in the State Legislature and being elected as Lieut. Gov. of Michigan.

About this time, Richard Cooper moved from Harbor Springs to Charlevoix and bought the property from Ames Fox which had been the little clearing the Mormons had taken from his father-in-law, Mr. Geer. Mr. Fox had enlarged the little log cabin and had used it for a store. It was the intention of Mr. Cooper to start a boarding house for the men in the employ of A. Fox & Co., who had a contract to ship wood for a Buffalo concern and had built a dock running out into Lake Michigan where the Buffalo boats landed. In 1867, the Fountain City House was commenced as a hotel or boarding house.

In 1867, David C. Nettleton landed at the old Fox & Rose dock from a scow. The little settlement consisted then of about half a dozen houses. The Fountain City House being the hub of the community.

There were some farms in the surrounding country, and an Indian village named Pashabatown a few miles away.

In 1868 came Major E. H. Green, the first attorney, also Henry Morgan came from Canada here.

In 1869, Willard A. Smith came and started the publication of the Sentinel. Dr. Levi Lewis also arrived in October of 1869 and caused quite a sensation as he drove through the streets in a buggy. Something new in Charlevoix.

In the fall of 1867, Messrs. Reddington & Nelson came for the purpose a locating a lumber mill. The country was then heavily wooded and the prospect looked good. In 1868 the mill was started.

Charlevoix Yesterday

THIS PICTURE of Charlevoix was taken in 1928 from the Argo Milling Co. building, on the site of the present Weathervane Inn. The buildings along the east side of Bridge Street are Wilbur's Dock & Freight Office, Bonthron's Plumbing-Heating, Fred Myers Cigar Store, Pauline Hamlin's Beauty Shop, and the Sentinel Building. On the lake along Belvedere Avenue is the R.E. Olds boathouse, and next to it is the roller rink. The Lewis Opera House is on the west side of Bridge Street next to the channel. Local historian Bob Miles points out that the photograph shows three buildings in which the game of basketball got its start in Charlevoix. The first basket was in the Bonthron shop, the first game was played in the Lewis Opera House, and the first scheduled games were played in the roller rink, until 1923. Criminal actions increase in Charlevoix during 1978

Criminal actions in Charlevoix during 1978 showed an increase over 1977, Chief of Police Chief Jack Mol reveals in his annual report.

The department received 354 complaints of either criminal or civil nature during the year, compared with 300 in 1977.

Twenty-three breaking and enterings were reported, of which 65 percent were cleared up. In 1977, there were 18 breaking and enterings.

Criminal arrests made by the department totaled 104. Of this total, 29 were felony arrests and 75 were for misdemeanor offenses. Total arrests for 1977 were 93, with 29 felony arrests and 64 misdemeanor arrests.

Traffic citations numbered 367, compared with 299 for 1977.

The value of property reported stolen was $35,501, compared with $26,108 in 1977. The value of property recovered in 1978 was $10,503.

Fifteen unlawful entries were reported in 1978. Five of these were cleared up.

The department patrol vehicles were driven 69,565 miles in 1978 compared with 69,493 in 1977.

Traffic accidents showed a decrease - 214 down, from 222 in 1977.

Chief Mol reports that in addition to tending to all the above complaints, members of his department were involved in speaking to civic groups, Charlevoix Public School students, and service clubs.

The department also held instructional classes for area young people covering mandatory hunter safety. Forty-eight young people, ages 11 to 16, attended the classes, passed the written examination, and were awarded certificates allowing them to purchase their "first time" hunting license.

The department performed 306 General Assists during 1978, including such services as aid to motorists and directions to travelers.

Chief Mol concludes by saying that his new quarters in the lower level of the City Hall have "proved advantageous beyond any expectations."

Urgent: Local farmers asked to return questionnaires

Charlevoix County officials are urging all local farmers to fill out and return promptly the farm census questionnaires they have received in the mail.

They point out that the farm census is the source of accurate information on the number of farms and farm operators in the county as well as information about the county's basic agricultural assets.

"It also provides accurate data on farm sales as well as farm production costs in our county, and many business decisions made by the county's farmers, as well as those who do business with them, depend heavily upon accurate benchmark data from the Census of Agriculture," the officials conclude.

There have been 21 such census counts since 1840.

Help us celebrate 100 years

To help celebrate the 100th anniversary of Charlevoix becoming a chartered village, the Courier would like to hear from long time settlers, descendents of pioneers, or others who have bits of historical information that would be of interest to our readers.

Family or business histories, stories about happenings large or small, or even just recollections of little things will be acceptable.

All material received will be credited to the sender, handled carefully, and returned when requested.

Please mail material to the Courier at 405 Bridge Street or bring to the office.

Rail committee meets in TC

A special railroad subcommittee just created by the Northwest Michigan Regional Planning and Development Commission met this week in Traverse City for abriefing by officials of the Michigan Interstate and Michigan Northern railways. The subcommittee has scheduled the region's third rail carrier, the Chesapeake and Ohio, for a future meeting.

An uncertain climate for continued rail service and deteriorated track conditions that have led to slow speeds were two of the major difficulties cited in reports given by the railroad representatives at this first meeting of the railroad subcommittee. The subcommittee listened to presentations by Elizabeth Andrus, president of Michigan Northern Railway, and Richard Beagle, manager of industrial development for the Michian Interstate Railways Co., the company which is currently managing the state-controlled Ann Arbor Railway and Carferries.

During the course of the presentation the rail representatives were asked for their opinions on possible solutions to the railroad's dilemmas. Of several solutions offered, both Michigan Northern and Michigan Interstate agreed that an extension of the federal railroad subsidy, which is due to end in March 1981, may be necessary for the continuation of rail service in Michigan.

At the meeting, the first of many for the railroad subcommittee, Beagle stated, "I am pleased to see that the planning commission is continuing its efforts to improve rail service in the region." He also said that he believed the subcommittee is a good forum for the expression of opinions and needs for rail service in the area. The subcommittee was recently formed by the Northwest Michigan Regional Planning and Development Commission's Transportation Advisory Committee to make recommendations for the improvement of rail service.

The subcommittee includes rail users, local government officials, and interested citizens. The railroad companies and the Michigan Department of Transportation are also members and will provide technical advice to the group. The focus of the subcommittee will be to study the plight of the railroads in the Region and to determine what type of rail service is necessary in the area. Their findings and recommendations will be presented to the Transportation Advisory Committee and ultimately, to the regional planning commission to be included in its comprehensive plans and to be used in efforts to influence state officials and rail carriers in their decisions on the future of the railroads.

Over the past several years, the regional planning commission has involved itself deeply with the railroad issue. A study it initiated in 1975 clearly indicated that the abandonment of rail service in the 10 county region would be harmful to the economy. Since then the commission has fought to save the rail service. The most recent accomplishment was its influential role in the Interstate Commerce Commission's decision denying Chesapeak & Ohio Railway Company permission to abandon rail service between Manistee and Petoskey. That decision is currently being appealed by the railroad company.

The commission is the Region's official comprehensive planning agency, created 10 years ago as a joint effort of the ten counties of Antrim, Benzie, Charlevoix, Emmet, Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Leelanau, Manistee, Missaukee, and Wexford. Chaired by Roy Howes, county commission of Manistee, it is composed of representatives of the ten county governing bodies, the 10 county planning commissions, and delegates from the urban areas of the region.

Andrews asks residents for input on Update

State Rep. Steve Andrews (R-106) is asking for input from the resident of the district regarding a service designed for providing information to them on issues and problems of state government. "I believe it is my duty to keep the citizens informed," Andrews stated, "and one way to do this is with a weekly Legislative Update report mailed to restaurants, businesses and other places open to the public where they can easily be obtained.

"However, I believe it is also my duty to strive for efficiency and economy in all state matters, including the operation of my own office," he continued, "an the estimated annual cost of providing the Update is $5,000. Using the alternative method of providing the same or similar information through the local newspapert and other media would come to an estimated annual cost of $300. From the standpoint of cost, there is obviously a vast difference," Andrews said, "but what we would like to determine is the relative value of each of these two methods to the local residents, based on the information we hope to obtain directly from them."

Rep. Andrews would like to hear from all interested citizens on this matter and can be contacted by writing to him at the State Capitol, Lansing, MI 48909, or by calling 517/372-0833. He concluded, "If you feel the Update is helpful and worthwile and should be continued, or if you think we should use the local media, please let me know. We will tabulate the results and then be able to made a decision based on value, as well as cost."

FAITH HONORS THE WISDOM AND EXPERIENCE OF AGE

In our current misguided era where young is baautiful, the oldar segment of our population is largely relagated to tha background of our society. Thora are many factors to blame for this tragic situation, including its wide range of acceptance which pramaturely condemns tha physically and mentally sound along with the infirm, and thereby attaches the stigma of outworn usafulness to all. Whan this is combined with the natural self-importance of today's youth, little respect or companionship axists batween children and thair grandparents, to the detriment of both. Your Church will taach you to appreciate the wisdom of the old, referred to throughout tha Bible. Honor your grandparants and listen to them. You may aven find them fascinating, if you give tham a chance.

Taxes: Effects of law revisions on tax returns analyzed by public accountants

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of articles prepared by The Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants offering advice on filing 1978 Income Tax Returns.

Although most of the tax law revisions adopted by Congress last year did not take effect until this year, taxpayers now getting ready to prepare their returns should be aware of the changes that apply to 1978 incomes, for most of those changes benefit the taxpayer.

Among persons affected are those who:

- Had capital gains or losses
- Are 55 or over and sold their homes after July 26, 1978
- Sold inherited assets that appreciated in value after 1976
- Made energy-saving modifications in their homes after April 19, 1977
- Changed homes for employment reasons

As for the other changes you may have heard about – the raising of personal exemptions, the ending of the general tax credit, the broadening of tax brackets to lessen the effects of inflation, and the increase in the earned-income credit to help low-income taxpayers – all those were indeed enacted, but they became effective only in 1979.

Of more immediate concern, until the law was changed, 50 percent of long-term capital gains had to be added to taxable income. Now, on most gains realized after October 31, 1978, only 40 percent must be included.

Because of the complexity of changes in the treatment of capital gains, which make it necessary to compute gains and losses at two different rates, anyone affected is likely to need professional assistance with 1978 returns.

The same is true of those 55 or over who after July 26, 1978, sold a home at a profit after owning and occupying it for three of the past five years. This once-in-a-lifetime exemption from capital gains tax on the first $100,000 of profit could be the biggest tax break most persons are ever likely to receive, so it should not be treated casually.

A change adopted earlier but which became effective in 1978 and thereafter determines the length of time an asset must have been held in order to qualify for a long-term gain or loss; it is now a full year. Another earlier change provides that in 1978 a taxpayer can offset up to $3,000 of net capital losses against ordinary income. In 1977 the maximum was $2,000.

Anyone sharing in an estate that was settled in the past couple of years may also need professional help. The Tax Reform Act of 1976 provided for new treatment of assets inherited and sold after 1976. But Congress now has moved the start-up date for those changes back to 1980. So anyone who received a post-1976 legacy should check; they may have paid taxes on it that now are refundable.

If you improved the insulation in your home on or after April 20, 1977, or added storm windows or other fuel-saving devices, you may be eligible for a credit of 15 percent of what you spent, up to a total credit of $300. If you put in solar heating or equipment utilizing renewable sources of energy, the credit can be even bigger. The energy-conservation and renewable energy credits apply only to principal places of residence, not vacation homes. The energy-conservation credits do not apply to new homes but the renewable energy credits may apply to new homes.

It has long been true that if you make a profit on a home sale you can defer the capital gain tax if within eighteen months you reinvest in another home costing at least as much. It also has long been true that this 'rollover' could be used no more than once every year and a half.

Toll rates may change

Rep. Charles Varnum (R-Manistique) has introduced legislation to roll back toll rates to 1978 levels for large trucks crossing the Mackinac Bridge.

On Jan. 1 the toll for trucks with more than six axles went to $6.50 plus a dollar for each additional axle. Before, all trucks with at least six axles paid a flat $6.50.

Varnum said the increased rate is having an adverse effect on the Upper Peninsula's two big industries – logging and paper.

Hospital gets ultra-sound equipment

An Ultra-Sound Laminugraphy System, the widely publicized non-radiating xray-type procedure is now in operation at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Ultra-Sound employs sound waves, which are reflected by a patient's internal organs, to produce three-dimensional images on a TV screen.

Dr. Tai-Hee Kang, Charlevoix Area Hospital radiologist, who had four years of diagnostic experience in ultra-sound at Hutzel Hospital in Detroit and a Fellowship at Temple University in Philadelphia, Pa., which included training in ultra-sound, before coming north, demonstrated the hospital's new equipment to a visitor recently.

"The sound waves are sent through transducers and are reflected back to be displayed on the TV-type screen," he explained.

Dr. Kang, a member of the American Institute of Ultra-Sound Medicine, praised the hospital's acquisition of the new equipment, emphasizing that unlike X-ray it creates no harmful radiation.

"Also, it is a non-invasive type of study. There are no fluids injected, no needles used. Everything is done from the outside.

"SThere is no discomfort at all for the patient.

"And, the information we receive is accurate in terms of the position, the size and the location of what we study," the radiologist explained.

Ultra-sound's most well known use is in obstetrics. Because there are no harmful effects from ultra-sound, no dangers to the mother or her unborn child, ultra-sound can be used to help obstetricians study the unborn child's development, its position, whether or not a ceasarian birth is necessary, and answer many other questions.

Dr. Kang emphasized that ultra-sound is not performed routinely on expectant mothers, only when the obstetrician has certain questions. Such a question could be whether or not the unborn child is ready for delivery. Ultra-sound can answer that by showing haw developed the child is.

DR. TAI-HEE KANG, Charlevoix Area Hospital radiologist, and Registered Technician Kristen Bignall demonstrate ultra-sound on another technologist, Bill Hoaglund. Ultra sound uses sound waves to produce an image of a patients' organs on a TV sereen. Beeause ultra-sound produees no dangerous radiation and requires no injections of fluids, it is considered the safest method of viewing a patient's internal organs. The image produced could be compared to a slice of bread out of a loaf, it is an image showing a eross seetion rather than just the top or shape of the organ in question.

Ultra-sound is also used to study internal organs such as the gall bladder, kidneys, pancreas and thyroid, Dr. Kang continued.

Dr. James Gels, medical chief of staff at Charlevoix Area Hospital, also praised the advent of ultra-sound at the hospital.

"It is a good piece of diagnostic equipment," Dr. Gels said. "Not only for obstetrical use, but other medical conditions. It often can be used where traditional X-ray is not helpful or does not provide enough information.

"For example," Gels continued, "an X-ray can show the existence of a tumor. Ultra-sound, because it is three dimensional and shows sections can often tell you whether it is solid or cystic, thereby enchancing the physicians ability to assess whether it might be benign or malignant."

Gels continued saying that "if ultra-sound shows a tumor to be cystic we can sometimes aspirate it (release the fluids) without major surgery."

He explained that ultra-sound can also be used to diagnose, among other things, aneurisms in the aorta, a weakening of the walls of the aorta, which would cause sudden death if ruptured.

Ultra-sound provides a surgeon with detailed information on the size and location of the aneurism and can detect the presence of a clot," Gels added.

While demonstrating the ultra-sound equipment on one of his technicians, Dr. Kang explained that the system actually sweeps the area requested by the physician and when something appears on the TV screen, which should be studied further, the process can be stopped and a photograph automatically produced.

Prior to the installation of the ultra-sound equipment at Charlevoix Area Hospital, patients requiring ultra-sound diagnosis had to travel to neighboring hospitals.

Thus, the ultra-sound equipment will not only enhance the X-ray department's ability to assist doctors in diagnosing a patient's problem, but it will eliminate the necessity of travel for the patients.

Does solid waste plan meet state approval ?

By PEG OHLE

It has been almost four years since Charlevoix County prepared a solid waste (garbage and trash) disposal plan and submitted it to the Department of Natural Resources as required by law.

And the county has still not heard if the plan meets state regulations.

But that all may be changed today (Wednesday) because a meeting has been called by the DNR in Petoskey to "report on the status of solid waste management planning" in several northern Michigan counties, including Charlevoix.

Notice of the meeting states that the DNR will assess whether the county has a solid waste management plan; does it need upgrading, and is it being implemented.

In 1974 and 1975, the Charlevoix County Planning Department spent several months preparing a 50-plus page plan for dispnsing of the county's 13,500 tons of solid waste genernted each year.

The plan called for the use of the then-operating but unlicensed landfills in Boyne City, East Jordan, Melrose Township, and Boyne Falls-Boyne Valley as solid waste transfer stations.

The wastes collected at these transfer stations would be transported to the licensed landfill operated by the Charlevoix Garbage Company in Eveline Township.

The transfer stations, as described in the county plan, would consist of a bulk container with compaction equipment, full fencing around the site with a locking gate to prevent dumping during unsupervised hours, visual screening such as an earthern berm, tree plantings, ground cover screening, or any combination of these, and an attendant's work area including a small shelter for record compilation and site supervision.

Based on 1974 figures, the cost of each transfer station was estimated at $105,000.

An optional plan was presented at the same time. It called for the building of a new landfill at an estimated cost of $325,000, and noted that the cost of hauling solid waste to one central landfill would be considerably more expensive than hauling it to a regional transfer station.

The need for a workable solid waste disposal plan is underlined by the fact that five pounds of solid waste – garbage, glass, metal, paper, plastic, wood, and other materials – are generated by the average person per day.

The City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township generate an estimated 6,000 tons of waste per year, including domestic waste, municipal waste, waste from manufacturing, construction, wholesale and retail trade, and government enterprises.

The largest part of this tonnage, 2,969 tons, comes from households. The second largest part, 1,044 tons, is municipal waste – street sweepings, tree trimmings, litter, sewage sludge, and general city refuse.

Projected increases in population, the continuation of the rise in standard of living, more stringent laws governing the disposal and burning of waste on private property, and increased commercial and industrial productivity will raise the waste tonnage in years to come, experts predict.

Burying the waste in landfills is still the best method of getting rid of it the planning commission believes, but the landfills have to measure up to the strict regulations imposed by the state.

Solid waste disposal rules have changed during the years, and it may be that the plan worked out in 1974 will not meet today's regulations, county planner John Hess points out.

Hess will attend today's meeting in Petoskey. If he learns that the four-year-old plan needs updating, he and members of the planning commission will go to work on it. However, there is some talk among state officials that solid waste disposal should be planned on a regional basis rather than county. If this should come to pass, the Northwest Regional Planning and Development Commission in Traverse City would get the job.

UNCOVER FIRE PLUGS

The other day while driving on the north side of Charlevoix, I saw a fire hydrant which was completely clear of snow for about 6 feet around it, making the plug immediately available in the case of fire. It appeared as though someone in the area had shoveled the snow away rather than this being an Act of God.

After seeing this fire plug, I started looking for other plugs around Charlevoix and to my dismay, I found very few of them visible. All plugs are marked by a green steel stake with a red tip, however many of these stakes are barely visible above the snow and I venture to guess that a few of these markers are completely covered with snow.

I would think that the City fathers would consider the uncovering of these fire plugs, a matter of a first priority and would have the City Streets Dept. complete this job immediately.

Irwin proposes aging committee

Legislation to create a Special Legislative Committee on Aging has been introduced by State Senator Mitch Irwin, D-Sault Ste. Marie, with strong bipartisan support. His legislation would establish a twelve-member committee to study the needs of Michigan's Senior Citizens and review government programs providing services for the elderly.

"Michigan's Senior Citizens are one of our most precious human resources," said Irwin. "Through years of hard work and sacrifice, they have helped make Michigan a great state in which to live and raise a family. My resolution provides a way for state government to thank them for their years of effort and to focus attention on the unique problems that confront them. With the ever-increasing population of seniors, my hope is that we can make specific recommendations to the legislature to help our seniors."

Irwin said that the committee will deal with a wide range of issues affecting the state's 1.3 million residents 60 years or older.

Interlochen director to instruct students

Dennis Johnson, director of the Interlochen Arts Academy Band, will conduct an instrumental music seminar for the music students at the Charlevoix High School on Monday, Feb. 19, Gary L. Stutzman, director of the band program here, announced.

In making the announcement Stutzman said "We are fortunate to have a person with Denny's background spend some time with our band students. It will be a learning experience for me as well as the students".

Johnson will open his seminar at 9 a.m. He will work with various sections of the band, showing the students how they can get more from their instruments and bringing out new and innovative ideas, Stutzman said.

Stutzman added that Johnson is highly regarded among band directors. He was one of two band directors (the second man was from Kansas) to be named as an outstanding band director in the nation by the members of the National Association of Band Directors. He was a band diretor at Traverse City and Boyne City prior to assuming his present position at the Interlochen Arts Academy. During the summer months he is affiliated with the National Music Camp in an administrative capacity. While at Traverse City and Boyne City he was active in District II Michigan Band and Orchestra Association circles.

$1 a gallon for gas? Not this year

Sen. Henry Jackson and others are making grim predictions that the price of gasoline will hit $1 a gallon by the end of the year as the result of the recent upheaval in Iran.

They may be right, but I've heard too many $1-a-gallon predictions to put much stock in what they are saying, at least for the moment.

The United States imported only five percent of its petroleum from Iran, and other oil exporters already are stepping up production to fill the gap. Of course they are increasing prices, too, but not by 25 percent.

Don't get me wrong. Dollar-a-gallon gasoline is coming. But not before Christmas.

I wonder how many times President Carter will say "oil" – or its Spanish equivalent – on his trip to Mexico this week?

HAVE YOU been following the preposterous developments in Iran? At this writing Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini appears to be in charge, with Mehdi Razargan serving as prime minister. Former Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar, who was appointed by the shah, has suddenly disappeared and may have followed the shah into exile.

Khomeini, a 78-year-old Islamic high priest with a 13th century outlook on world affairs, is now calling the shots in Iran. Khomeini is a well-established foe of the United States and other western countries, whom he believes have been stealing Iran's oil while the shah's back was turned.

What isn't known at this point is how big a role the Kremlin will play in charting Iran's new political course. Khomeini's followers are reputed to include many Marxists who have been waiting patiently to get a foehold in Iran.

From here it doesn't appear that Khomeini is ready to cozy up to anyone for the time being, regardless of their political stripes.

It is incredible that Khomeini would attempt to establish a 13th Century Islamic republic in Iran on the eve of the 21st Century. The consequences could be devastating.

Like Christianity, Islam is an outgrowth of Judaism and is better known in the western world as Muhammedanism. Followers of Islamic beliefs are called Muslims.

Muslims accept six articles of faith as set down in the Koran: A belief in one God (Allah), in angels, in scripture, in prophets, in the day of judgment and in predestination. They also subscribe to five religious duties, which are called the "pillars of Islam." They are reciting the creed (There is no God but Allah and Muhammad is the messenger of God), worship, almsgiving, fasting, and pilgrimmage to Mecca.

One Islamic sect – the Kharijites – also includes holy war among the religious duties. Under certain conditions, Muslims are obligated to fight to defend an area governed by Islam, or to extend Islamic territory.

I believe this is what we may have witnessed over the weekend was a "holy war" of sorts, with the strongly Islamic Khomeini forces knocking the bejabbers out of the more worldly remnants of the shah's old monarchy.

Although President Carter supported the shah, and later Bakhtiar, he now has expressed a willingness to work with Khomeini to achieve a stable and independent Iran. Bravo!

Of course, he had no other choice. Either we work with Khomeini and hope the oil starts flowing again toward the west, or we batten down and button up in the years ahead.

It is a strange coincidence that the president scheduled his visit to oil-rich Mexico the same week that the monarchy collapsed in Iran.

A strange coincidence, indeed. But a fortunate one.

"WITH HIGH MEDICAL COSTS, WE'RE NOT SAVING MONEY BY DOING IT OURSELVES!"

Marlene Gaszatt

Do it yourself

You can save money through do-it-yourself projects–if you have the skills and abilities to do the job.

However, spending more to repair mistakes than to hire it done won't help the budget. So, consider the value of alternative uses of your time and energy in relation to money costs. Start by making the decision whether to do the project, taking into account the probable results. Make comparisons between purchasing or hiring the work done. Consider also how you could otherwise use your time and energy.

In building, repairing or remodeling a house, furniture or equipment, consider what mechanical or technical skills you have or can develop. Do you have proper and save tools? If not, what will they cost? Can you use them again? Check the prices of materials needed. also. Do you have the capability or patience to learn needed procedures? If not, you could end up with a fiasco and wasted resources. Don't take on too big a project; rather, start with a simple one.

Don't try to use makeshift or unsafe tools and equipment. Doing this may result in injury, medical costs and loss of income. This points up the importance of knowing your health insurance and income continuation insurance coverage.

Consider trading off one of your capabilities with someone who has the skills you need, like carpentry for painting. Or maybe you should purchase needed services?

You can also prepare yourself by taking classes or getting books and pamphlets helpful in do-it-yourself projects. The do-it-yourself has a good start against the inflation battle.

Erma Bombeck

A long distance friend

A lot of mothers I know are downright meddling when it comes to their children's selection of a boyfriend or a girlfriend.

They want to know how old, how tall, what their father does, where they live, the scope of their education, what their plans are for the future, and how they feel about children.

I don't care about any of those things. All I want to know is, "Is he or she a local call or a toll?"

I don't remember names or faces or old flames. All I remember is their area code. One of my sons once dated an area code 513 for six months. It was marriage by Ma Bell. I figured we were spending $35 a month to share such insights as:

"What are you doing?"

"Nothing, what are you doing?"

"I don't want to interrupt you if you're doing something."

"I told you I wasn't doing anything."

"You sure?"

"I'm sure."

"So, what's new?"

Another of my kids showed an interest in a lovely girl who lived just a few miles from us. It was great. I didn't have to worry about a deep involvement because they were never off the phone. He set his alarm to call her in the morning. At night I used to go in and remove the phone from his ear as he slept. It was like hanging up an umbilical cord. As soon as they left one another at school in the afternoon they would shout, "I'll call you when I get home." I offered to feed him intravenously.

The suggestion by my husband to put a timer by the phone with sand running through was ridiculous. However, I did slip a calendar under his door and circle the month.

Panic didn't set in until one day when I was standing near and saw him dial "1."

"Who are you calling?" I asked.

"You know," he said. "The same person I've been talking with for the last month."

"But I thought she was a local call."

"Don't worry," he said. "It only costs about eight cents a minute. Besides, this isn't just some silly kid infatuation. This is a person I genuinely care for and want to spend the rest of my life with. She's important to me. She's special and there isn't anything I wouldn't do for her."

"I'm glad to hear you say that," I said, "because according to the phone bill you owed us $36.86 in long distance charges."

I learned something that day. When toll charges enter the room ... love goes right out the window.

Jim Fitzgerald

Can it be - Rosalyn Carter has sensuous legs?

The editors of Forum magazine have named the nation's "10 Most Sensuous Pairs of Legs." Liza Minnelli came in first, just ahead of Angie Dickinson. Rosalynn Carter finished sixth.

Rosalynn Carter?

"What about Ken Howard?" my wife asked.

Ken Howard?

My wife explained that Ken Howard is an actor who wears short pants most of the time while coaching a basketball team in a TV show called "The White Shadow."

"I don't suppose it ever occurred to the dumb editors of that magazine that a man's legs could be sensuous," she said, once again flapping her women's lib flag up my nose.

She is apparently correct. According to the Forum article, the owners of the nation's 10 most sensuous pairs of legs are all female. No man got even an honorable mention.

The dictionary says something is sensuous if it "arouses the senses." Can't a woman be aroused by the sight of a man's legs?

To be more specific, for the sake of argument, whose legs are most arousing the the opposite sex – Ken Howard's or Rosalynn Carter's?

I solicited opinions of Howard's legs from several women other than my wife, whose judgment is suspect. Because of the pair of legs she married, she can become aroused when a slipcover is unzipped to reveal the legs of an overstuffed sofa.

The women all agreed Howard has arousing legs and they said it was a typically male chauvinistic injustice that he wasn't listed among the owners of the most sensuous legs in the nation. OK, I'll accept that opinion.

As for Rosalynn Carter's legs, I'll make the appraisal myself. I have been an expert on women's legs ever since 1941 when I first saw Betty Grable in "Down Argentina Way."

Eventually, I saw that movie 24 times. It was a contest between me and a kid named Tom Studer. He insisted he loved Betty more than I did. The only way a guy could prove his love was by how many times he would pay a dime (yes, a dime, sob) to see her movies.

I would tell Studer I was going to stay home and study algebra that night. Then I would run to the Pine Grove Theatre and watch Betty make Alice Fayle look like an old bag again. And someone would whack me on the back of the head and there was Studer sitting behind me.

This was no lusting after a pinup, a la the soldiers who made Betty Grable a latrine legend during World War II. I was no soldier when I fell in love. I was a 15-year-old kid just beginning to wrestle with life's problems, just beginning to make the important decisions that would determine the pattern I would follow the rest of my years.

Such decisions as: Jane Russell or Betty Grable?

Legs beat breasts. Betty Grable made a leg man out of me 38 years ago, and I have never since wandered from my chosen path. Show me a pretty woman, and I'll show you a woman I would rather walk behind than toward. Certainly I'm not swayed today by the sight of Jane Russell on TV, selling bras designed to keep much more than me from swaying.

Those are my qualifications for judging the sensuousness of Rosalynn Carter's legs. It's doubtful that the editors of Forum can match me for experience and dedication. And I'm not relying on photographs or TV. I once met Mrs. Carter in the White House and watched her walk away from me, down a hallway.

I don't remember anything about her legs, so obviously I wasn't aroused by them. When a woman becomes a first lady, ordinary men are automatically dissuaded from becoming aware of her legs. History probably doesn't even record if Martha Washington had a full set. Jackie Kennedy might be an exception, but I doubt it. Even youthful beauty isn't enough to make most men ogle over the shoulder of the Secret Service.

Any fool knows the phonies at Forum magazine named Rosalynn Carter to the sensuous legs list simply because of who she is. It's ironic that her legs would arouse more senses if she were someone else.

Ken Howard beats Mrs. Carter in the arousal contest, but not by a leg. If he were married to the president, women ogiers wouldn't notice whether or not he had a leg to stand on. Onward and Upward.

How snowday is determined

Many people are unsure of exactly how a "snow-day" is decided or who decides upon it.

The people who decide on the cancellations are the superintendent – Mr. VanWieren – and the business manager – Mr. Olach; the final decision resting with Mr. VanWieren.

These men are up and traveling the bus routes at 4 o'clock in the morning, if there has been a heavy snowfall or threatening winds on the previous night.

Many times people will call Mr. VanWieren, Mr. Olach, or possibly a local radio station to inquire about the possibilities of a school cancellation the following day. No one will know for sure whether or not school has been cancelled until the bus routes have been checked the next morning. So please, refrain from disturbing these people.

If by any chance, school is cancelled the previous night you will be notified by way of most radio stations or WPBN or WCLX television stations.

Many people tend to assume that if school has been cancelled the administrative building is also unused that day.

Although school has been cancelled the administrators still hold office hours, as in any other day.

Many people also believe that the school has unlimited snow-days and they do not need to be made up.

The state of Michigan requires students to attend school 180 days a year except in cases of illness with the allowed amount of 5 snow-days.

Any amount of snow-days exceeding the above amount are to be compensated for.

The only exception for not making up additional snow-days is if the state should decide so.

State zoning rears ugly head

During the past several years, state zoning has reared its ugly head many times and under many different disguises. Due to the efforts of many people this unfortunate aspect of bureaucracy has been defeated in the State Legislature many times. It has now reared its ugly head again and the support at the Capitol is so strong that it now appears it probably will pass.

Our Governor in his inaugural speech said that we needed state zoning to protect our wetlands and our agriculture areas, etc. Bobby Crim, the Democrat who is the majority leader, said practically the same thing in his speech in Traverse City. The Republican leader, along with many others in our state governing body advocates land use.

Land use is simply state zoning regardless of the name. Someone once said, "A rose is still a rose under any other name."

Lets take land use and what we have in Michigan today. It would seem that our very knowledgable law makers (who most all live down state that advocate state zoning) should really find out what the existing laws are and what they cover.

At present we have the Soil Erosion Control Act, The Wetlands Act, the DNR, which controls about everything, The Land Sales Act, The Subdivision Control Act, The Health Department, and from the federal level The Army Corps of Engineers that control even the farmers ponds. Now I ask you, do we need more state control (Big Brother).

I am a member of the Michigan Association of Realtors (MAR) and on their legislation committee. My special committee is land use. We meet mostly once a month in Lansing and check legislation that effects the people of Michigan. Not only realtors, but people – property owners.

This is not only true in land use, but the realtors have committees on many other things such as taxes, etc., and the people that vulunteer to work with our paid lobbyist at the MAR come from all over Michigan as do our Legislators.

We try to protect the people from unreal and unfair legislation. Many times we have been successful in having changes made in the proposed bills that keep them from being oppressive. Many have fallen by the wayside, due to our efforts. We also support many good bills that make laws or changes in present laws that are very beneficial to the general public.

We work with and support a great many Legislators and try and get them to listen to reason.

I'm sure all people realize that there are many trade off's in the legislative body such as, "You support my bill and I will support yours".

There are several thousand bills proposed each year and it is impossible for the legislator to read and study them all. The final result is that if there isn't any objection from the people who this bill effects, then the Legislators will believe it is a good bill and vote for it.

There are many lobbyists from all professions and walks of life who stand as watchdogs in our political arena.

I listened to both the Democratic view and the Republican view at our last meeting in Janunry, and they both told us that they hoped to have a bill that the MAR would support and that if local townships, villages and cities would have their own zoning ordinance that local people would be in control and that the State would allow the local people to rezone or do whatever the local officials decided without State interference.

Now in Torch Lake Township, we did have zoning, but by a vote of the people it was voted out.

I had personally worked on the original zoning board and on the planning board, when the zoning board was absorbed by the planning board. The planning board has no authority, but is only an advisory board. There is now a planning board in Torch Lake Township and Doris Leech, at the Eastport Hardware is the chairperson.

I am also a member and any expression or thought is strictly my own, as I do not speak for the planning board, but simply as an individual citizen that loves our area.

It was my belief that our original zoning ordinance was the best of all in the Townships, but the general public did not agree and voted it out. It is also my belief that if all had really understood the ordinance we would still have it. However, we don't and I'm sure we have those that still say, "Don't confuse me with the facts, my mind is made up."

Well, I hope these people have a good mind because it looks very much like the state will enact the state land use bill this year and I for one would rather be able to talk to people who live here and have an interest in the area if I ever need help or a change in zoning.

Can you imagine the help we would get out of the downstate people who want to use the North as their personal playground and not consider what is best for us but what is best for them?

Why not send some letters expressing your views on this. Let's work together.

Evergreen: A story of Anna

A few years ago we were all humming along to "Evergreen," the song which had achieved popularity both as a single release and as the beautiful luve theme from the motion picture "A Star Is Born." Now, through there is no connection between the two other than title, "Evergreen" is a best selling novel by Belva Plain. I can't help thinking that it's a shame the song has already been used in a movie. "Evergrgen" has all the possibilities of becoming an outstanding film and Paul Williams' "Evergreen" was an equally outstanding song.

Like "The Immigrant", "Evergreen" deals with the nurturing of one of turn-of-the-century-America's newcomers. It takes her by the hand, as well as the reader vicariously by the heart-strings, and follows the main character through the two generations to present tense.

This time the inmigrant is Anna, young Jewish girl of Polish descent, who, left orphaned eventually decides to join her cousins in New Yurk. America, where poverty can be shed, where there is no living in fear. Anna soon learns the truth, that the sweat shop where her cousins labor, sew and sleep is just another name for poverty. And her fear is that she too, will be unable to escape its vice. For this reason, Anna decides that pride or no, to become a servant in a fine home would be a faster tack towards self-improvement. It is during her employment as maid in the formidable Werner mansion, that Anna falls in love with one man, and as circumstance cruelly would dictate, he marries another. It is the former to whom Anna's passion will forever be awarded, and to her husband, a caring love and loyalty which she cannot deny. There it is: the menage a trois with the beautiful, vibrant Anna smack dab in the middle. The theme of unrequited love was and has been played again and again, before and after Shakespeare donated "Romeo and Juliet" to literature. Perhaps there is no other single love theme so soul-wrenching. There is real merit in the concept, for what might be is always so much more romantic than what is.

The story offers just enough history, romance, intrigue and suspense to afford wide audience appeal. But most of all, "Evergreen" is the story of Anna. And it is a human Anna. Religious tradition and scruples, familial caring and friction, personal pride and weakness are all there. Love versus loyalty and which shall prevail are the keynotes of this very fine book.

On second thought, perhaps "Evergreen" the song wouldn't be appropriate for this hypothetical movie. Love in Anna's life was never "soft as an easy chair." Only the title really survives comparison. Her love like an evergreen never makes dramatic changes; it is the constant factor upon which the lives of two men rely.

Charlevoix Grayling split match

It was a good day for the boys ski team Wednesday, but not so good for the girls.

Charlevoix beat Grayling, 29-47, in boys competition, but the tables were turned in the girls meet with Grayling winning, 33-40.

Mark Lignell took first place in both the slalom and giant slalom events to lead the boys to victory. Pat Stangis was third in the slalom while Bill Fels was second in the giant slalom for the Rayders.

In girls competition, Kristen Lignell took a second place and Hope Malpeli a third in the slalom event while Malpeli was second and Lignell third in the giant slalom. Sherri Reed of Grayling finished first in both events.

In the junior varsity meet, Charlevoix and Grayling tied, 41-41. Bill Ranger of Charlevoix won both the slalom and giant slalom events. Mark Morgridge was third in the giant slalom and Charlie Morris was second and Jeff Morgridge was third in the slalom for Charlevoix.

Cheryl Pence - CMU basketball leader

Cheryl Pence

By KAREN RICH

MT. PLEASANT – Agility and consistent hustling have made Cheryl Pence a strong leader on the Central Michigan University women's varsity basketball team.

The Charlevoix senior, known as "Shaggy" because of her curly hairstyle, is called a subtle leader by third-year coach Ro DiBrezzo.

"Shaggy is not in the limelight," DiBrezzo said. "She's just out there on the court hustling. When the underclassmen see a senior hustling, then they imitate her and that generates team enthusiasm."

The four-year varsity player supports the team verbally as well.

"Shaggy yells her support to the players while she's on the bench during a game," DiBrezzo explained.

She also encourages her teammates during practice by commenting on especially good plays, DiBrezzo continued.

"The team appreciates these actions," DiBrezzo added. "It means something special to a player, having another player tell her she's doing the job."

Pence also helps players, individually, to improve their skills, Ro commented.

"Team players are greatly appreciated by coaches," Ro said. "Shaggy is one of the best."

Pence is gaining confidence with every game, DiBrezzo said. "Shaggy is becoming a better player as a result."

The co-captain uses good court sense to overcome opponents, Ro continued.

"Bright players like Shaggy take fewer steps and make fewer mistakes, DiBrezzo said. "She thinks before she acts, which forces the defensive player to do the same."

The versatile Pence continues to improve every season.

"Veteran players are often overthrown by freshmen because each year the high school competition improves, making for stronger players," the coach said.

Pence has never been overthrown.

"By constantly pushing herself to improve, Shaggy has never been ousted by incoming players."

The factors that have helped Pence improve are discipline and tougher competition.

"I knew the competition during tryouts would be very stiff," she said. "I worked hard during the six-week training period before the season began, pushing myself so I'd be ready."

This year's team is the best Cheryl can remember.

"We have better all-around talent," she continued. "The returning players have improved a lot and the freshmen are learning very fast."

They play well together, she added. "We have 12 good people, all of whom can carry the load for the team."

CMU is a Division I school, which means it must compete with larger schools like Michigan State and the University of Michigan for the state title.

This does not frighten Pence who still feels the title may be forthcoming for the Chippewas.

"We've been clicking together," she said. "I think we can win the state championship and then do well in the regionals.

In the meantime, Central has its toughest schedule ever, Pence said. "The added competition helps us prepare better for the state tournament."

Pence feels basketball has better prepared her to deal with people.

"I've also learned about sportsmanship, self-control and how to maintain during tense situations," she commented.

Pence plans to graduate in December and become a secondary education teacher of physical education and health education. She also hopes to coach basketball and volleyball.

The Rayders beat East Jordan, 88-66, on Monday. Dave Buday tossed in 24 points Jeff Greene 16 and Gary Shores 10 to pace the Rayders. Charlevoix broke out to a 23-13 lead and never trailed the rest of the way.

Odd-Fellows maintain cribbage lead

The Odd Fellows' lead in the annual cribbage tournament is down to 429 points according to Sims Baker, tournament secretary, reported following play on Thursday night.

With seven tables in play, the Masons won by 354 points to cut back the Odd Fellows' 783 point lead.

Robert Wise had 961 points for the Masons, John LaRuse had 942 for the Odd Fellows.

Going into the seventh week of play, action this week will be at the American Legion post home.

8th, 7th graders win

Charlevoix's 8th grade basketball team had a close call last week against Cheboygan, but when the buzzer sounded to end the game Charlevoix was on top, 44-42.

The Rayders trailed almost the entire game before finally catching and surpassing the Chiefs in the last quarter. Craig Klooster was high point man for the Rayders with 12 points while teammate Jeff Thompson chipped in with 10.

The 7th grade team also posted a victory over Cheboygan, and again the score was tight, 42-36.

Tim LaBlanc had 18 points to lead Charlevoix in scoring.

Saints thump Rayders, still have shot at Gaylord

There is a basketball race in the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference afterall.

Unfortunately, it does not include Charlevoix.

While St. Ignaoe was stopping Charlevoix Friday night, Petoskey was upsetting Gaylord, the conference leader. Gaylord has now lost two of its last three games and has seen its three game lead over St. Ignaca evaporate to one and a half. And conference officials better hold off before they send the trophy to the engraver because Gaylord plays St. Ignace in the last game of the season. The game is at St. Ignace.

Charlevoix, meanwhile, lost ground in its quest for a first division ranking. The Rayders are 5-6 in the conference and are mired in sixth place. A victory over St. Ignace would have put the Rayders in a fourth place tie just a game out of second.

St. Ignace, however, squashed Rayder hopes early. With Andy LeCant scoring eight first quarter points, the Saints jumped out to a 14-6 lead. St. Ignace kept an eight point advantage at halftime, 26-16, but then extended it to 13 points, 42-29, after three quarters.

Charlevoix Coach Dave Moyer was forced into reshuffleing his line-up in the game as Tim Hoffman, who has been the Rayders most improved player in recent weeks, injured an ankle. Hoffman had been filling in for Bob Plumrn, who was out with an injured knee. Plumm did see limited action against St. Ignace and scored 12 points.

The Rayders were plagued by foul trouble as three players fouled out and two ended the game with four each. St. Ignace had 27 attempts at the charity stripe. Kevin Kratt, one of the Rayders top scorers, picked up four fouls in the first half. As a result he scored only three points.

Plumm's 12 points led the Charlevoix scoring. Pat Schmidt and Ken Otmanowski added 10 eacli.

For the Saints, LeCant scored 14 points, Grant Simmons 11 and Kurt Wyers 10.

Grapplers finish 5th

Petoskey claimed its first wrestling championship in the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference Saturday by dethron ing defending champ Rogers City and five other schools.

The Northmen had four individual winners in the conference meet and placed 10 wrestlers altogether to win the crown. Rogers City finished second, seven points behind.

Charlevoix came in fifth place. Dennis Whitley was the only Rayder to win a weight championship, Whitley beat Jac Getzinger of Rogers City, 10-3, at 191 pounds. Whitley normally wrestles at 176 pounds. Dave Golovich at 132 pounds and Ken Wojan as heavyweight took third place medals. Golovich beat Andy Lehto of St. Ignace, 14-3, in the consolation finals while Wojan pinned Steve CadBaea of Grayling. Micky Belfy at 105 pounds and Norbert Scharenbrock at 138 pounds finished fourth.

This was one of the closest conference champtonships in history with only 17 points separating Petoskey from St. Ignace, the fourth place finisher.

Charlevoix will host a Class C district tournament this weekend. Matches will start at noon on Saturday. Rogers City is the defending champ, but because of re-districting, Shelby will also be in the district. Shelby has twice won the state finals.

Charlevoix Coach Norm Probert says Mason County Central should be the team to beat however with Rogers City, Shelby and Hart dark horse contenders. Fifteen schools will be represented. The finals are expected to get underway at 6 p.m.

The Rayders won their last home dual match of the season Monday by beating Sault Ste. Marie, 45-27. Sault Ste. Marie has never beaten Charlevoix in wrestling.

The Rayders, performing before a Parents Night crowd, were led by freshmen Micky Belfy and Gregg Whitley. Belfy pinned his opponent while Whitley won by default. Dave Golovich won by decision at 132 pounds while Joe Borths, Norbert Scharenbroch, Mark Drenth and Ken Wojan won by forfeit.

FAITH HONORS THE WISDOM AND EXPERIENCE OF AGE

In our current misguided era where young is beautiful, the older segment of our population is largely relegated to the background of our society. There are many factors to blame for this tragic situation, including its wide range of acceptance which prematurely condemns the physically and mentally sound along with the infirm, and thereby attaches the stigma of outworn usefulness to all. When this is combined with the natural self-importance of today's youth, little respect or companionship exists between children and their grandparents, to the detriment of both. Your Church will teach you to appreciate the wisdom of the old, referred to throughout the Bible. Honor your grandparents and listen to them. You may even find them fascinating, if you give them a chance.

"This is he, that was in the church in the wilderness." --Acts 7:38

The graves were God's first temples. --William Cullen Bryant

Meet Charlevoix ...Anah Potter

It's tax-paying time again, the time of year when the county treasurer is busy receiving property tax money from all over the county, be it willingly or grudgingly paid. This week Treasurer Anah Potter tells the Courier about her job.

COURIER: Where does the property tax procedure start?

POTTER: With the township and city assessors. They put the value on the property.

COURIER: Then what happens?

POTTER: The Board of Review meets, and those taxpayers who want to discuss their assessments have a chance to do so. After that, the assessors send their rolls to the Equalization Department. The rolls list the description of the property, name and address of owner, school district in which property is located, class of property (residential, commercial, industrial, etc.) last year's assessment, the assessment was last changed, present year's assessment, as fixed by the Board of Review, and any loss or addition to property (house burned down, property split, new house built, addition to or remodeling of house on property -- the reason why assessment was changed).

COURIER: What does the Equalization Department do with this material?

POTTER: They audit and total it. Then they go over all the rolls to make sure that the total cash value of townships and cities are equitable among each other. They send all this information to the County Board of Commissioners for equalization. This is called county equalization. After this, the information is sent to the State Tax Commission for state equalization. During this period, up to Oct. 1, millages are approved and certified to the Board of Commissioners for apportionment. Then the tax rolls are run, based on new assessments as finally equalized, and the new millages. This information is sent to a data processing center, which prepares the tax rolls for tax statements. These statements are then sent to the township and city treasurers for mailing to the taxpayers.

COURIER: Then where do they pay their taxes?

POTTER: Between Dec. 1 and March 1, they are paid to the township or city treasurer -- the amount of taxes plus a one percent collection fee. After Feb. 14, there is a three percent penalty, and after March 1, an additional three-quarters of one percent a month penalty until the taxes are paid. For instance, on April 1 of this year, there will be a twenty-three and a half percent penalty on 1976 taxes (three years old) plus a $5.50 state tax sale expense.

COURIER: How do tax sales work?

POTTER: By law, on the first Tuesday in May, any taxes that have not been paid for three years (this year, 1976 taxes) are put up for sale. First, they are advertised in a local newspaper. After the sale, property owners have a year to pay up the taxes. Most of them do.

COURIER: How many people turn up at a tax sale?

POTTER: Not many, probably 10 or 15. There used to be a lot more, a lot from downstate.

COURIER: How does the tax money get to your office?

POTTER: The township and city treasurers bring it in, but only that portion payable to the county and the Intermediate School District. They make the payments due the local school districts directly to them. Those who haven't paid their taxes to the township or city treasurer by March 1 must pay them at the county treasurer's office, with the penalties as listed above.

COURIER: How many property tax bills aren't paid by March 1?

POTTER: We usually have about 3,000 unpaid out of the 19,500 sent out.

COURIER: Getting back to the tax sale, what happens to property that no one is willing to pay the taxes on?

POTTER: It reverts back to the state if the taxes are not paid one year after the published tax sale, which means in 1980 any property on which 1976 taxes are not paid. This happens very seldom now, except on some swamp land that isn't good for anything.

COURIER: What do you tell people when they complain about the amount of their taxes?

POTTER: We explain that we don't have anything to do with it -- it's all a matter of assessment. When they're unhappy about interest and penalties we tell them that is the law.

COURIER: What are some of the other things the office of county treasurer does?

POTTER: We collect money for dog licenses. We sell them all year around but double the price after March 1 on all dogs over six months old. We take people's word for the age; we don't ask for birth certificates! We open safety deposit boxes for Probate Court, go to the bank with a member of the family. All revenues from all county offices are deposited with us at least once a month. The road commission and Grandvue have their own accounts, but they send us notices of all deposits. All in all, we keep records of all county receipts and disbursements. In 1978, our total receipts were $8,893,425. That's a lot to be responsible for.

COURIER: How long have you been county treasurer?

POTTER: Since 1965. Before that I worked for Social Services as a bookkeeper, started there in 1969, and before that I was a bookkeeper at the County Bank for eight years.

COURIER: Where did you go to school?

POTTER: I graduated from Central Lake High School when there were only 13 in the class, then went to business school in Detroit.

COURIER: You have a family in town, don't you?

POTTER: Yes, my husband Eldon, daughter Cheryl Browe and sons Larry and Jim and three grandchildren.

COURIER: What do you do in your spare time?

Anah Potter

POTTER: I like to play golf. I used to bowl but now only do a little open bowling now and then.

Is it fun to be a parent?

A film festival and rap session for all parents is to be held Thursday, Feb. 22 at 7 p.m. at the Charlevoix Elementary School.

The evening called "It Should be Fun to Be a Parent" has been developed through the cooperation of more than a dozen individuals and agencies, public and private, in the area.

The evening grew out of the thought that area parents would enjoy a stimulating and fun opportunity to discuss mutual concerns.

"We wanted to get together with other parents, to increase our awareness of our own feelings, as well as our childrens'," Connie Pointner, Charlevoix school board member and one of the organizers explained.

"I find that after talking with other people, hearing from new resources, I always feel the better for it," she said, explaining how the idea grew.

"There are a lot of people who would like to be exposed to the various resources we have in this community, but who don't feel they have problems so serious that they must call for an appointment," she continued.

"The four films, which I have seen, are well done. They are good films and they are sure to be stimulating," Mrs. Pointner said with enthusiasm.

Oren Schroeder, director of CHIP Counseling Center, representing one of the several agencies involved in the planning, said, "This is to be a very positive evening. We will not focus on mistakes or negatives, but rather on what opportunities there are for us."

The evening will open with a film entitled "Replay" whose subject is the "generation gap." It will be followed by another short but provocative film entitled "Claude."

Mrs. Pointner and Mr. Schroeder asked, with broad smiles on their faces, that the subject matter of "Claude" not be revealed because the suspense element is part of its impact.

"Down and Back", a film dealing with a typical adolescent crisis will follow "Claude."

After "Down and Back" discussion groups will be conducted by professionals from the Char-Em offices, the womens Resource Center, District Health Department #3, the Department of Social Services, and Chip Counseling Center.

A final film "Pack Your Own Shoot" will close the evening.

Schroeder said that "Pack Your Own Shoot" could be called a "good mentnl health pcp talk."

The counselor continued, "Several agencies with concerns about parent-child relationships have worked together in a spirit of cooperation to put on this evening."

Among these active in planning the "It Should be Fun to be a Parent" evening were Charles Bentley, high school counselor, Connie Drury, middle school counselor, Marianne Chew, elementary teacher, Marilyn Friedly, of the Parent Council, Gayle Weimer and Sandy Spielas from Char-Em, and Bob Sell from District Health Department #3.

Despite the impressive list of professionals involved, Mrs. Pointner stressed the focus of the evening is to be positive, to share parent's thoughts and experiences, with an emphasis on the "Fun" of being parents.

CONNIE POINTNER and CHIP Center Director Oren Schroeder discuss plans for the film festival and group discussions at the "It Should Be Fun to be a Parent" night Feb. 22 at the Charlevoix Elementary School. The film festival and "rap sessions" are free to all interested parents.

'78 fuel bill caused problems? Assistance available

Monies have been made available thru the Community Services Administration for an Emergency Energy Assistance Program to assist persons who had hardships due to 1978 fuel bills.

Fuel bills from Jan. 1, 1978 to June 30, 1978 will be used to prove eligibility for assistance. Current bills may be used if the applicant can prove a hardship does exist due to high fuel energy bills in 1978.

The program's guidelines state that for a family of one the income must be under $3925 per year and a senior citizen's income must be under $4710 a year. Applications will be accepted until March 15.

For more information call Northwest Michigan Human Services Agency in Traverse City at 947-3780, in Cadillac call 775-9781 and in Petoskey call 347-9070.

Health Center closed Feb. 14

The East Jordan Family Health Center will be closed Wednesday, Feb. 14 due to the installation of additional electrical service for the new x-ray machine. Since the work will interrupt electrical service most of the day, the center will not be able to open. The center will return to its regular schedule on Thursday, Feb. 15.

If there is need for emergency care, patients are asked to utilize Charlevoix Hospital emergency room. The center physican, Dr Hergt, will be in communication with the hospital.

Flouride registrations accepted

Registrations are now being accepted for the annual topical fluoride program for children in the Charlevoix School District.

Sponsored by the Michigan Department of Health, the program is designed primarily for children who do not drink from a fluoridated water supply.

Topical fluoride applications are being offered to pre-schoolers three years and older, and children in the second, fifth and eighth grades who do not drink water from the Charlevoix city water supply.

Pre-schoolers and second graders who have been residents of the city for less than three years; fifth graders who have lived here less than five years and eighth graders less than eight years are also urged to participate in the program which is offered for a nominal fee.

The service is offered at the ages listed above because these are the approximate ages at which children get new teeth which should be protected with the flouride treatments.

Assisting with the registration of children for the program in Charlevoix are Mrs. Scott Beatty who can be reached at 547-6347 and Mrs. Frank Hoffman, 547-4578.

Jensen guest at Assembly of God

Gordon Jensen, well known recording artist and composer, will be sharing in word and song at the Charlevoix Assembly of God Church on Feb. 18 both in the morning worship service at 11 a.m. and in the evening service at 7 p.m.

Gordon, in the past 10 years, has written and published over 200 songs, many of which have been recorded by the likes of Evie, Doug Oldham, Jimmy Swaggert, Dallas Holm and others.

He has been nominated by the American Music Association in the category of the top five gospel songwriters on four occasions. Along with his many concert appearances, he appears regularly on the PTL Club and 700 Club.

Though relatively young, Jensen has shown a maturity in the things of God and consequently his popularity is extensive. He has been influential in shaping the thoughts and attitudes of people around the world.

Reportedly, people everywhere are turning to what the Christian songwriter has to say – something in the words he writes leaves every heart open to what others have failed to communicate. That's why Jensen has gathered such a following. His music has a message, n ministry that's the perfect blend of song and prayer.

Wedding

Johnson-Drost

Debbie Lyn Johnson and Benjamin Edward Orost, Jr. were married Feb. 3 at the Assembly of God Church in Charlevoix.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Johnson of Charlevoix, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Drost, also of Charlevoix.

The double-ring evening ceremony was performed by the Reverened Fred Springs, with the bride's father giving her in marriage.

The bride's gown was fashioned of ivory satin and trimmed with ivory lace. Her head piece consisted of ivory ribbons and baby's breath, and her bouquet was made up of yellow carnations and pale orange roses, with baby's breath and ferns.

Organ music was furnished by Ruthanna Caplin.

Linda Johnson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Bob Drost served as best man. Steve Johnson and Chris Orost were ushers.

The wedding reception was hosted by the bride's parents at the American Legion Hall. The rehearsal dinner was hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Spence, sister and brother-in-law of the bridegroom, at their home.

Both young people are graduates of Charlevoix High School. The bridegroom served four years in the United States Navy and is presently employed by the East Jordan Iron Works. The bride is employed by Courter, Inc.

Following a wedding trip to Florida, the newlyweds will be at home in Charlevoix.

CHARLEVOIX COUNCIL MINUTES

FEBRUAHY 5, 1979
7:30 p.m.

The Common Council of the City of Charlevoix met on the above date and time with Mayor Supernaw presiding. Councilmen present: Timms, Plumm, Wood, and Muma. Absent: Councilman Porter.

The Minutes of the January 15, 1979 regular meeting and the January 22, 1979 special meeting were approved as presented in writing and as recorded in the Council Minutes Book.

Moved by Councilman Wood and supported by Councilman Muma that William L. Bellows of 507 State Street be appointed to complete the unexpired term of Councilman Whitley in the Second Ward. Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Councilmen Timms, Plumm, Wood, and Muma. Nays: None. Absent: Councilman Porter.

Following the motion, Councilman took the Oath of Office as administered by the Deputy City Clerk.

Moved by Councilmen Timms and supported by Councilman Muma that Rex Oavis of 708 E. Oixon be appointed to serve on the Board of Review for a term of two years. Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Councilmen Timms, Plumm, Wood, Muma, and Bellows. Nays: None. Absent: Councilman Porter.

Council discussed a letter from the Administrator of Charlevoix Hospital requesting that the City Fire Oepartment continue to service the Hospital and that the direct line fire alarm between the Hospital and the City Fire Oepartment be maintained. It had been previously suggested that the City discontinue service to the Hospital as the Charlevoix Township Fire Department also responds to fire calls there. Mayor Supernaw stated that it had been suggested to him that, if the City would continue to cover fire calls at the Hospital, the Township Fire Department would reciprocate by covering the areas north of town when a freighter goes through the bridge. Doug Bergmann, a volunteer member of the City Fire Department, pointed out that this arrangement would also make the Township responsible for fires in Hayes Township and other outlying areas north of town when the bridge is up for an extended period of time. The matter was tabled for further discussion at the next Committee of the Whole Meeting.

The following Resolution was offered and moved for its adoption by Councilman Timms and supported by Councilman Plumm.

The following Resolution was offered and moved for its adoption by Councilman Plumm and supported by Councilman Wood.

RESOLUTION 79-2-2

WHEREAS, it is the policy of this locality to eliminate substandard and other inadequate housing, to prevent the spread of slums and blight, and to realize as soon as feasible the goal of a decent home in a suitable living environment for all of its citizens; and

A Public Hearing was held to obtain public input regarding proposed uses for approximately $67,000 the City will be receiving in Federal Revenue Sharing Funds. The City Manager stated that the City's auditing firm and the City Comptroller agree that the entire amount should be used in the Local Street Fund which has a large deficit. Doug Bergmann, a member of the General Public present, suggested the money be used for a building to house City emergency vehicles.

Exit Councilman Plumm.

A Public Hearing was held regarding a proposed City Snow Ordinance. Doug Bergmann, a member of the General Public present, stated that, in his belief, individuals who plow should be allowed to pile snow on the corners as the City does when they clean the intersections. Council generally agreed that individuals will not be allowed to pile snow on the corners under the new Ordinance but they would be allowed to push the snow from a driveway across the street and into the opposite bank as long as it does not obstruct the view of drivers.

Moved by Councilman Muma and supported by Councilman Timms that the following Ordinance be adopted.

According to Staff Sergeant Ryan K. Renz, the Air Force recruiter here, Foster's entry into the OEP serves two purposes. First, it allows the Air Force to schedule an opening for him to attend basic training and be assigned to a job or skill area. Second, the OEP enables Foster, a 1979 graduate of Petoskey High School, to wrap up his personal affairs before leaving home.

Foster will enter the Regular Air Force on July 9th. Following graduation from the six-week basic training course at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, he will receive technical training as a Jet Engine Mechanic and be assigned to an Air Force duty station.

Folklore

Charlevoix Resorters' Song.

(Tune—"Beulah Land.")

We've reached the land of beech and pine,
Where northern suns lirough blue skies shine;
From city's heat a cool retreat,
Where Michigan and Pine Lakes meet.

REFRAIN.

Oh! Charlevoix, sweet Charlevoix,
Blest land where nothing can annoy,
Where friends again each other meet,
And with warm welcome strangers greet,
We sing thy praise with heart-felt joy,
Oear Charlevoix, our Charlevoix.

When nerve and brain cry out for rest,
We fly to thee, O', haven blest;
Here, free from eare, from labor free-
We find rest, sweet rest in Ilee.

Here friends aud lovers wander free,
Here children shout with playful glee;
On clear Pine Lake we sail or row,
Or seek the spots where berries grow.

A sweet perfume from Linden trees
Is borne on every passing breeze,
And clover blossoms in the grass
Exhale their fragrance, as we pass.

The waves that lash thy western shore,
Proclaim thy fame with thund'rous roar;
And zephyrs that with wavelets toy,
Murmur thy praise, O', Charlevoix,

Rev. N. S. Burton, D.O.

County gets grant for plant

Antrim County officials will be getting federal grant for $164,000 to help pay costs for renovating the hydroelectric power plant at the Elk Rapids dam.

County officials decided tu renovate and reactivate the 64-year-old plant after they found out they might be able to sell power generated by the dam for up to $100,000 annually.

Total cost of renovation is estimated at $679,000. The federal grant was awarded by the Department of Energy.

East Jordan

Parking problem on Main St.

There is a parking problem on Main Street.

It seems parking spaces on the street are at a premium, oftentimes discouraging shoppers from coming into town to shop.

Merchants have asked the East Jordan City Council to consider putting a one hour time limit on Main Street parking. But, according to Mayor James Meredith, this would require a full-time police officer to enforce the law -- at a cost of about one mill.

Councilman Harry Watson said merchants could help the situation by not parking their own cars in front of their stores and tying up spaces.

Harbor Springs

Gibson accused of stabbing wife

Norman Gibson has been charged with assault with intent to commit murder after allegedly stabbing his wife, Lillian.

Mrs. Gibson is listed in stable condition at the Little Traverse Division of Northern Michigan Hospitals. The Harbor Springs Police said Mrs. Gibson was able to make it to a neighbor's home after she was stabbed to notify police.

Petoskey

Task force recommends options

A task force has recommended to the Petoskey Board of Education that a new middle school be constructed or Sheridan Elementary School be converted into a middle school.

The present middle school is 65 years-old and, according to an architect's study, it would cost at least $4.2 million to renovate the deierlorating building.

The task force decided the best solution to the problem would be to construct a new middle school near the high school or convert Sheridan, one of five active elementary schools in the district.

No 8 - Mitchell Dam to stand

Bellaire

Doney, Caldwell resign

Douglas Doney, superintendent of Bellaire Public Schools, and David Caldwell, president of the Bellaire Board of Education, have submitted letters of resignation.

According to the Antrim County News, both Doney and Caldwell cited the district's financial problems as prompting the resignations.

Voters in the school district twice turned down a request to increase the property tax by 3.965 mills. On a third try, voters did approve a 2.8 mill increase after school officials had cut staff, transportation and extra-curricular activities.

The resignations become effective June 30.

Also, it was reported that two other board members, John Oberpeul and Art Lennox, would not seek re-election in June.

Boyne Falls

Mercury drops to 30 below

Pellston is usually the icebox of Michigan, but Thursday night Boyne Falls had that dubious distinction.

The temperature dipped to 30 degrees below zero -- the coldest spot in the state. It wasn't much warmer elsewhere. Pellston had 28 below, Charlevoix 23 below and Petoskey 18 below.

Of local interest, Charlevoix's coldest temperature in recent years was recorded Feb. 1, 1976. That day the mercury dropped to 25 below.

Two men held in robbery

Rex Bannister, 18, of Clarion and Anthony Gilmette, 19, of Boyne Falls are in Charlevoix County Jail on charges of armed robbery.

The two men are accused of stealing $100 from the Four Season's Motor Lodge. According to police, a sawed off shotgun was apparently used in the robbery.

Charlevoix

Hospital seeks certificate

The Northern Michigan Health Systems Agency has unanimously approved Charlevoix Area Hospital's planned expansion and renovation project.

The 44 bed hospital has now asked the state to approve the project.

At an estimated cost of $2,575,000, the project would focus on providing improved outpatient ambulatory and treatment facilities. The vacated space then would be renovated to enlarge and relocate other departments.

Three areas of new construction would be located at the south side, north side and east side of the facility.

The project would be completed in January, 1981.

In keeping with federal regulations requiring state approval prior to capital expenditure and construction, Charlevoix Area Hospital has applied for a Certificate of Need. The application is on file with the Michigan Department of Public Health, division of Health Facility Planning and Construction.

Wanted: One city servant

The Charlevoix City Council is having a hard time finding a person to accept a two-year term to the Board of Review.

In January council appointed Ralph Shapton. Shapton, however, declined. So, at its last meeting, council appointed Rex Davis to succeed Shapton. Last week Davis informed city officials that he will be on vacation in March and thus will be unable to serve on the board.

Corps puts harbor project on backburner

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has apparently put Charlevoix's proposed harbor modification project on the backburner.

City officials have received a letter from the Corps stating that "all work on the project has been suspended, the project has been placed in the inactive status and actions have been undertaken to reallocate the 1979 construction funds to other higher priority projects."

The project would have included deepening the harbor "to provide for economic deep draft transportation of commodities such as coal for the Northern Michigan Electric Cooperative and limestone for the Charlevoix County Road Commission." The city would have been required to relocate certain utilities presently buried under water in the harbor.

Although the Charlevoix City Council is not opposed to the project, council has said it has no intentions of offering financial assistance because a) no funds are available and b) the project would be more of a benefit to the commercial users than to the city at large.

Since the project lacks a local sponsor the Corps has decided to suspend the project. It could be reactivated if a local sponsor such as the city, county or state demunstrates a "willingness and ability to provide local assurances."

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR), which is the local agency designated to cooperate with the Corps in development of navigation projects, has been informed of the city's position.

Since the DNR acts as only a coordinator in commercial navigation projects such as the Charlevoix Harbor improvement, any assurances of local cooperation issued by the department would be founded upon identical assurances provided by a local entity. Thus, lacking a local project sponsor which has the "ability and willingness" to fulfill the required items of local cooperation, the DNR cannot convey the required local assurances.

The DNR is hoping the city can obtain funds in the "near future" so the project can be reactivated.

Council acknowledged the letter from the Corps at Monday night's meeting, but made little comment on it.

In other action, council:

* Appointed Mrs. Douglas Wilks to a two-year term on the Board of Review.

* Appointed Dr. Jeff Porter as the council's legislative representative.

* Agreed to pay Board of Review members $35 a session.

* Transferred funds to the Local Street Fund.

* Agreed to increase non-union wages at the same time union increases go into effect.

* Tabled a request for a tax concession from Charlevoix Products until it can be determined if the company can indeed qualify for a tax break. City Attorney Mike Gibbons told council he believes Charlevoix Products waited too long after construction of the plant to apply for the break.

* Approved the city's Fly-In for Aug. 19.

* Learned that Hart Forbrig has applied to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for permission to construct a marina. The proposed project, near Lake View Cemetery subdivision, would consist of floating piers, with finger piers for about 60 boats and a 190 foot breakwall of riprap. Approximately 35,000 cubic yards of material would have to be dredged to provide adequate water depths.

PLAUDIT FOR THE FIRE DEPT.

A public Thank You letter to the local fire department members for the tremendous effort put forth last Monday morning.

Working under the most adverse conditions. They did a super, professional job in containing the fire.

Thank You again!!
LeHavre owners and Le Havre Association

MANY THANKS

In behalf of myself and the Association of Owners at LeHavre, I would like to thank the firemen who gave so generously of their time, in combating the terrible fire we suffered, in the early morning hours last Monday. Their experience, their efforts, and their obvious deep concern prevented the entire building from burning down. There is smoke damage in eight of the twelve apartments. The third and fourth floor apartments, above the two apartments that were burned out, suffered some structural damage and complete loss from smoke and fume distruction. However, there were no injuries or loss of lives, and for this we sincerely wish, once again, to thank and commend our volunteer firemen.

Harry Leiber

Leiber to resign as electrical inspector

"The county is not paying its electrical inspector commensurate with his ability", says Harry Leiber, who has resigned the job effective March 2.

Leiber was hired by the county last summer to administer the State Electrical Code which went into effect at that time.

"I was hired at $10,500 and was supposed to go to $11,500 but they only went to $11,225," Leiber explains.

"The state pays its electrical inspectors $18,000 to $22,000 and furnishes a vehicle. The county pays 17 cents a mile. It costs me about 12 cents every mile I travel on the job. The commissioners won't talk about it," Leiber added.

Airline promotional fares gives travel agent fits

Ever since the Civil Aeronautics Board started relaxing its stiff regulations on air fares, airlines have been enticing the public with promotional fares at varying prices.

It's now possible to get reductions of up to 50 percent on airfares. In fact, some of the fares are so low it's cheaper to fly than drive.

American carriers are offering nearly 100 different discount fares. United Airlines has 21 different fares -- depending on how long the flight has been booked, what time the flight leaves, how long the traveler plans to stay, etc. Delta Airlines has 18 different fares just between Atlanta and London.

It has been a boom for the airlines, but it has created havoc for travel agents.

"It's like the weather," said Vic Weyand, who opened a travel agency in Charlevoix last summer but closed it Feb. 1, "you have to call each day to see what the fare is."

Analysts estimate that 40 percent of all air travelers are flying in discount seats. One travel agent said people feel they can't afford not to go.

Weyand said it used to take him 10 to 15 minutes to book a flight for a would-be traveler. Now, he adds, it takes an average of 30 minutes.

"I hate to admit that," he said, "but it's true.

"The volume is just unbelievable."

Airlines say that the volume of calls to their offices is up about 35 percent. This in turn slows down Weyand's efforts to book flights.

"I've got two people on hold right now," he said.

The Traverse City Record-Eagle recently did a random check on how long it took to reach air carrier desks. It took 45 minutes to reach United, 10 minutes to reach North Central and 15 minutes to reach Northwest Orient.

Although he has closed his office here, Weyand said he will still service his Charlevoix clients via his 800-442-3303 toll free number.

"It's really a shame," Weyand said of the closing. "Charlevoix is a very good market and should have a travel agency of its own. But unless you're completely automated it's just not a money making venture."

Weyand has transferred the records of his Charlevoix clients to his office in Traverse City.

With so many people flying, several flights are now booked solid. And Weyand doesn't see any let up.

His advice? "Call early, be more flexible about when you want to leave and when you want to come back and you're more likely to get what you want."

Housing Commission applies for funding

The Charlevoix Housing Commission has applied for funding for a 62-unit facility for the elderly and the handicapped it has been announced.

The application has been submitted to the HUD office in Grand Rapids.

A spokesman for the commission said that it is anticipated that the application will be accepted and the funds reserved specifically for Charlevoix.

The spokesman went on to say that the Charlevoix Housing Commission has been fortunate in that Sen. Donald E. Riegle, Jr. (D), is well aware of the needs of the community for such housing. He has taken a personal interest in our situation and has recommended that our application be seriously considered. The Commission is now confident a favorable notice will be announced within 45 days.

Tom's Thomas Real Estate

by Jim Thomas

One of the biggest concerns of homeowners and prospective buyers is heating and air conditioning systems and insulation. A poor system in a badly insulated house could break a moderate income family the first winter and summer. When buying a home, investigate the systems, and inquire about previous fuel costs. If you already own a home, make sure your system works efficiently. Paying to improve your heating and air conditioning system could, in the long run, save you money. If you are really adventurous, you might look into opportunities for solar heating and wind energy. Tax breaks may be available on all such home improvements.

THOMAS REAL ESTATE, 100 Pine River Lane, 547-4494 invites you to come in and talk with any one of our friendly sales staff...they will be happy to discuss with you any of the concerns you have regarding home ownership. "LATE IN OCTOBER of 1857, the small schooner 'Sonora' worked its way into Pine River and Seth F. Mason, father of A. E. Will cross-country ski classes be part of physical education program?

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

Cross-country skiing will become part of Charlevoix Elementary School's physical education program next year, if this Saturday's Ski-a-Thon is a success.

That will make Charlevoix Elementary School the first in Michigan to establish cross country skiing as part of its curriculum, as far as anyone knows.

Beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday (Feb. 24), students will ski for money pledged per mile, to help the school raise funds to purchase cross country ski equipment.

Principal Ralph Raymer told the Courier that he estimates the cost of equipment will be in the vicinity of $1,500.

"People who pledge, we hope, will dig a little deeper than for walk-a-thons, because the kids will be skiing fewer miles – 2 to 10 – rather than the 20 or so in walk-a-thons," Raymer observed.

"Rather than dimes, we'll need dollars per mile for the skiers," Raymer suggested.

Discussing the introduction of cross country skiing to the school, Raymer said plans were just being formulated for a program to begin next year.

"We anticipate cross country skiing will be offered in three-week units for grades 3 through 5.

"We'll organize this so that kids will have an hour's class per week, which should allow enough time to dress and ski," Raymer explained.

The idea of introducing cross country skiing to the curriculum was generated during discussions with Nellie Hiehle, Raymer said.

"There's a lot of enthusiasm for this among our staff. At least one-third of our teachers are cross country skiers," the principal reported.

The Cross Country Ski-a-Thon is being sponsored by the Parent Advisory Council of the Elementary School.

Marilyn Friedly, council president, said that anyone who wants to ski for pledges may, but the organizers request that children younger than third grade be accompanied by a parent.

"A mile track will be set, using the Windmill Farms track setter, on the golf course, next to the school.

"Volunteers from the Advisory Council will keep track of the skiers' miles and supply orange juice and cookies in a warming room in the school building," Ms. Friedly said.

Cross country skis will be available for rent at half-price, provided by Nellie Hiehle through Silent Sports North.

Ms. Hiehle said she was excited about the school's plans because she believes cross country skiing is such a healthful activity.

"It's a total body activity, that is its number one benefit," she explained.

"And, its natural. Kids naturally run and cross country skiing is the closest thing on snow.

"Also," Ms. Hiehle observed, "This will get the kids outside."

Ms. Hiehle added, "With the energy crisis, it might be a good idea to raise a generation of cross country skiers. Why drive to work or school if you can ski?" she asked rhetorically.

Ski-a-Thon organizers have set a minimum goal of 30 skis. They urge people to respond generously to skiers pledge requests.

Meet Charlevoix ...Christa-Maria

A newcomer to Charlevoix, Christa-Maria is an artist in many media. This week the Courier talks with her about the art forms in which she works.

COURIER: Your ad in the Courier says you are going to have workshops in working with cornhusk materials and making apple dolls. How did you happen to learn these crafts?

CHRISTA-MARIA: I grew up in Germany and learned all the European crafts, so when I married and came to this country, I wanted to learn a truly American art. Cornhusk art is at least 200 years old and very popular in some sections of the country. So is the making of apple dolls.

COURIER: What arts did you learn in Germany?

CHRISTA-MARIA: The first thing I tried out were my grandmother's oil paints, then I started working with scraps of my mother's sewing materials. I learned to knit at five, and to make things from straw, like stars which I still make at Christmas time. At 12 I made and sold copper jewelry. I used my grandfather's plumbing tools because that's all we had. Anyway, I made enough money to buy all my own clothes. I never studied handicrafts in school but I did story art history in this country. My professional training was in banking – I was an apprentice for three years. Everyone in my family was an artist but we were first made to learn a decent trade.

COURIER: How did you learn to work with cornhusks and apples?

CHRISTA-MARIA: I just looked to see how they were done, then proceeded. I've been working with them for about 14 years now. I've made them to sell and taught how to make them. I've taught adults and children, senior citizens and the handicapped. Cornhusk dolls are made much like yarn dolls, which most people have made. Sometimes I make mobiles with cornhusk dolls hanging on them. When I was married recently, I made my bouquet out of cornhusks and decorated the cake and table with them.

COURIER: Are apple dolls difficult to do?

CHRISTA-MARIA: No, you just peel the apple and carve a basic headshape, make notches for eyes and mouth, carve cheeks so a nose forms and stick a clove into the notches which will be the eyes. Then you press wires into the apple to form arms and legs and let the apples dry naturally. To finish the doll, you wrap the wire frame with nylons for padding and sew the clothes directly on the doll. When the doll is dressed it will resemble someone you know and you think of what that person likes to do – cook or do needlework or whatever – and you add some symbol of that activity to the doll.

COURIER: Can the rest of the apple be used for anything?

CHRISTA-MARIA: In pioneer times, nothing was wasted. Juice can be made from the apple peels by covering the peels with water, adding a touch of cinnamon and sugar for flavoring, then strained. The apple chips left over from carving the face can be dehydrated on a brown paper bag in the oven until hard and used for a snack or in pancakes or cookies. The apple chips also make very realistic hands for the apple dolls.

COURIER: Are there any books on making cornhusk and apple dolls?

CHRISTA-MARIA: I'm sure there are but I don't use any.

COURIER: Do you plan future workshops in other art forms?

CHRISTA-MARIA: Yes, I would like to have some on working with driftwood and plastics and making jewelry.

COURIER: What other art forms have you worked with?

CHRISTA-MARIA: Macrame, floral designs, preserving flowers, batik, and stained glass, among others.

COURIER: Have you had any art experience other than teaching?

CHRISTA-MARIA: I was coordinator for the children's wing of the Fort Wayne Art Museum. I coordinated workshops for them and helped to handle the 10,000 children who came to the museum during the year. My feeling is that art is for everyone. You don't need talent, money, or education. I also have given demonstration-lectures in shopping malls that were attended by several thousand people.

Christa Maria

COURIER: When are you going to have your workshops here?

CHRISTA-MARIA: On March 5 and 9 on cornhusk materials and on March 19 and 23 on apple dolls. They will be in the evening from 7:30 to 9:00. Anyone wanting more information can call me at 547-2381.

COURIER: Have you done anything new and different since you've been in Charlevoix?

CHRISTA-MARIA: I entered the ice sculpturing contest. My sculpture shows four Star Wars sandpeople peeking out of a cave. I did it by myself.

COURIER: How do you like Charlevoix?

CHRISTA-MARIA: I love it. I'm from northern Germany on the Baltic Sea, and Charlevoix reminds me of that area.

COURIER: Do you have a family?

CHRISTA-MARIA: Four children. All of them are artistic. My 13-year-old daughter is the only girl in shop class at school. I always permit my children to be part of what I do but I steer them into their own interests.

County must implement waste plan

By PEG OHLE

Charlevoix County was told last week by the Resource Recovery Commission of the Department of Natural Resources that it must develop and implement a plan for disposal of its solid waste (garbage and trash).

The county submitted such a plan to the DNR in 1975. In June of 1978 it was reviewed but not accepted by the department because it presented two options rather than one definite procedure.

One option called for a central landfill which would be serviced by transfer stations in different sections of the county. The other option called for digging a new landfill in the eastern portion of the county.

County Planner John Hess pointed out to the DNR commission that the reason no definite procedure was selected at that time was that the final decision lay with the DNR closing of unlicensed landfills within the county, which the DNR has threatened for some time.

Now there is a new solid waste law, passed in January, under which the county's plan will apparently have to be updated. The county will soon receive for its signature a "letter of intent" to this effect. After studying the contents of this letter, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners will decide whether or not to proceed with the updating.

If the county decides not to draw up a plan, the municipalities within the county will be asked to do so. If they decline, the burden will then fall to the Northwest Regional Planning and Development Commission.

Larry Thornton, regional supervisor for the Solid Waste Division of the DNR, will attend the April 5 meeting of the Charlevoix County Planning Commission to discuss the matter further.

Special Olympics start today

Some 850 mentally impaired athletes from Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, and Ontario are expected to compete in the first Great Lakes Regional Winter Olympics this week at Schuss Mountain in Mancelona and Shanty Creek Hilton in Bellaire.

The events will begin today (Wednesday) and continue through Friday. Among those competing will be four young people from the Bergmann Center in Charlevoix.

The event is co-sponsored by the Kennedy Foundation and Michigan Special Olympics, Inc. with the purpose of creating a fun experience for the participants. Long-range objectives are to help develop confidence and self-esteem among the participants and others in the community, to give athletes a chance to react in a social setting outside the local community, to bring awareness of the total capabilities of the mentally impaired in all forms of activities, and to continue efforts to reach the goal of a complete year-round program.

Participants will compete in both individual and team events. Individual events include Alpine skiing, cross-country skiing, figure skating, speed skating, and snow shoeing. Team events include tobogganing, a downhill derby, ice block pushing, snow sculpturing, and tubing. There will also be some wheelchair events.

Volunteer coaches, trainers, officials, and other helpers have been recruited locally and throughout the area to assist with the activities.

The event is open for the public to witness without charge.

Watchout for school children

With banks getting higher and higher and streets becoming narrower and narrower because of the snow, a warning has been issued regarding children walking in the area of the K-5 school on the city's north side.

Only 20 students among the school's total enrollment of 650 walk to school and all of them live in the immediate area Ralph Raymer, elementary school principal said in urging motorists to drive with care on the streets near the elementary school.

"We have every child who is eligible to ride the buses using them. However, when children live such a short distance from the school they have to walk. The sidewalks are impassable and the children have no choice but to walk in the roadway so we are asking motorists to drive with care in the area of the school." Raymer said in appealing to the driving public.

Good credit rating is important

A good credit rating may be as important as money in the bank at almost any time in your life.

Your credit report largely determines your ability to get credit to buy a coat, a car, or even a house. How do you get a good credit rating – or credit itself.

If you've ever used credit, credit bureaus will have records of your payment performance as reported to them by the lenders. Whenever you want to buy on credit, information is available to member businesses when they ask for it.

The credit bureau does not rate you as a "grade A" risk, but will report what kind of credit accounts you have and whether you pay "as agreed". Of course, that's the best way to pay. They also report if you are overdue in payments and by how long.

Credit bureaus record your occupation, your employer, how long you've had the same job, your approximate income, your age, address and how long you've lived in the same place.

These data give a lender a way to judge whether he wishes to give you credit.

Many consumers are curious about the information a credit bureau may have about them. Others wonder why credit is so hard for them to get.

The Fair Credit Reporting Act requires that a lender who denies you credit because he has received adverse information about you must tell you the source of that information.

Credit bureaus or lending agents must tell you what the adverse information is. If it is a mistake, they must correct it. If you ask about your credit report because you've been denied credit, there will be no charge to you.

If, however, you ask just because you want to know, the bureau may make a small charge for the interview.

What if you do not agree with the report and the original source of the adverse information refuses to correct it? In cases of such a dispute, you have the right to file your version of the dispute with the credit bureau.

If you've really earned a poor credit report by paying late, never paying or going bankrupt, you can improve your credit rating. It may take time.

Get a good start by establishing a checking account. Build up a savings account and pay your bills at the time you've agreed to pay.

If you're new in town a good – or bad – credit report may follow you from your last home. Many credit bureaus are affiliated and maintain an information network. But it's important to remember that a credit bureau or any lender only reports on your performance. They don't make your record. You do.

It's to your advantage to build a good credit report – and if in doubt, check it out.

Thirty-six below! Brrr

Q.-How do yuu cope when the temperature hits 36 below zero?

A.-You don't cope. You stay indoors close to the stove and write notes to all of your friends in Florida telling them how good they have it. Frequent references to 36-below will make them glad they left – and do wonders for your own martyr complex.

Thirty-six below? That appears to have been the official low in Charlevoix early Saturday morning. There were scattered reports of some lower temperatures – and some higher – but 36 was the figure you heard most often downtown.

So 36-below it is. I think we should carve that number in stone along with the date and put the rock in East Park as a fair warning to summer visitors in danger of falling in love with the plaee.

Such temperatures wouldn't be so bad if we didn't live in a society which requires us to get out and about every day. Why if I didn't have to get my car started and get to work, I could abnost enjoy a whole string of days with the mercury standing at 36 degrees below zero.

But automobiles just aren't built to funetion well at temperatures which not only sap life from batteries but also eengeal all of the fluids and lubricants required to move twu tons of steel from point A to point B.

Is 36-below all that unusual in these climes? I'd say yes, based on my 14 years in Charlevoix. I remember winters since we moved north that the mercury never sank below zero. Early Chamber of Commeree brochures pointed out that Charlevoix had o climate comparable to Battle Creek ur Kalamazoo because of its proximity to Lake Miehigan, whieh tends to moderate temperatures.

But Lake Michigan – like all of the Great Lakes except Ontario – has been frozen solid for the past several days and the influence of open water in zilch because there isn't any.

The recent cold snap has revived memories of the winter of 1933-'34 among old timers. That was the winter the temperature plunged to 51 degrees below zero at Vanderbilt on Feb. 9.

If you're old enough, you'll reinember that was the month that thc mereury scarcely moved above zero any place in Michigan for almost four weeks. I was just a kid at the time, but I remember budding close to the living room register and listening to the grate, grate, grate of my father's coal shovel on the basement floor.

Then there was the winter of 1950-'51 when I had my basic training at Camp McCoy, Wisc., and lived in an uninsulated clapboard barracks intended for use by the Wisconsin National Guard during its summer encampment. Not only were our quarters uninsulated, but you actually could see the great outdoors through cracks in the thin walls.

It was a lovely spot in the sunmer.

But the winter of 1950-'51 was a different story. The temperature dropped steadily for days, hitting a low of 53 degrees below zero in early February. That was the day the Army took mercy on us poor recruits and let us listen to lectures on map reading and troop deployment from our beds.

Then the plumbing froze and the Army would have sent us all home, if the Korean War hadn't been raging across the Pacific.

The mercury sank below zero for every night for weeks. Forty below was common. So was 30 below. When the mercury stopped at 20 below, we all high-tailed it down to the PX for a cold beer. Wasn't that silly? A hot toddy would have made more sense, but the PX never had a very fancy wine list.

Most sensuous legs

Because I am basically shallow, I am always drawn to lists of the ten best anything. Somehow, I feel my life will have no meaning unless I know who are the ten best lovers, the ten best dressed people, or who have the ten best noses.

I naturally pored over the story listing the Ten Most Sensuous Pairs of Legs which "best epitomize the beauty of human limbs."

It was interesting because sandwiched between Liza Minnelli, Angie Dickinson, Shirley MacLaine, Jane Fonda, Chris Evert, Bianca Jagger, Nancy Lopez, Cheryl Ladd and Bess Myerson was Rosalynn Carter.

To tell you the truth, I didn't know Rosalynn Carter had legs that went to the hip. There must be thousands of her legs filling the wastebaskets of every city room in the country, but they rarely see the printed page of a newspaper.

That is not the point. The point is why women? Why don't we honor the Most Sensuous Pair of Legs in men? Here are my nominations.

For the Most Sensuous Legs on a Television Personality: Walter Cronkite. Walter's legs (if indeed there are two under the desk) for years have titillated women's imaginations. For sheer mystique and lingering fantasy, no one tops Walter.

For the Most Sensuous Legs in the Literary Field: Jim Fixx, whose legs dominated the cover of the No. 1 best seller of 1978, RUNNING. Legs have not had such an impact on the Amerlean way of life since the two hind ones of Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over a lanter in Chieago in 1871.

The Most Sensuous Legs in the Military: Klinger on MASH, who proves week after week that when you're in a war zone it doesn't matter if you shave your legs or not, you can still be attractive.

The Most Sensuous Legs in Science Fiction: The bionic ones belonging to Lee Majors. When they come with varicose veins, it will open up an entire market for women.

The Most Sensuous Legs in Sports: Joe Namath, who proved to the world that the claims made by pantyhose are true: one size fits all.

The Most Sensuous Legs in Politics: Harold Stassen and Ronald Reagan, whose legs have logged more miles on the campaign trail than any other legs in political history.

And finally the Most Sensuous Legs occupying a White House in Washington: Jimmy Carter, because he's married to Rosalynn Carter and Sensuous-Legs marry sensuous legs and if you don't believe me just check the wastebaskets of the city rooms.

Jim Fitzgerald

A perplexing prejudice against our senior citizens

The young priest walked among his elderly flock and touched their faces lightly, speaking soothing words as he called each of them by name. He told them they shouldn't be fooled by his beard: "I'm not Jesus Christ, I'm just Father Jim."

The middle-aged son was there, sitting in the back, outside the flock. He had arrived at mass much later than his mother, who was seated up front, in a wheelchair. Most of the flock were in wheelchairs, or shuffled slowly with the aid of walkers or canes.

This wasn't a church, it was a recreation room in a nursing home. Father Jim comes every Saturday afternoon to say mass at a makeshift altar. One candle was lit. There was no one to play the piano, su hymns were sung a capella. The middle-aged son didn't know all the words.

He watched his mother as she sang. She looked toward the sound of the priest's voice, straining to see him with eyes that have failed her. He wondered how many thousands of masses his mother had heard since 1900, and how many times they had attended the same mass, with the mother up front, praying, and the son in back, a late arrival, not knowing all the words.

There were maybe 70 other patients at the mass. The middle-aged son watched them, too. There was a woman who couldn't stop her right leg from twitching violently. There was a woman who interrupted the service to say something that couldn't be understood and then slowly left the room.

Out in the hallway, there was a woman he sees every time he visits the nursing home. She can't propel her wheelchair with her hands, so she uses one foot. She thrusts the foot against the floor in front of her and drags the wheelchair forward, again and again and again. Sometimes her slipper comes off and it takes her many minutes to get her foot back into it. She doesn't want anyone to help her. She smiles at everyone.

there was an old man who wasn't a patient. He attended the mass with his wife, who appeared to be asleep in her wheelchair. The old man held his wife's head up, and he held her hand. The middle-aged son later learned that the old man comes to the nursing home and sits by his wife's side all day, every day. She is usually not conscious. He usually holds her hand.

Before the mass was over, some un-Christian thoughts pushed into the middle-aged son's mind. He thought of all he has read lately about suburban neighborhoods that don't want groups of old people living in their midsts. The suburbanites say the old people are breaking zoning ordinances and lowering property values. They hire smart lawyers and go to court and ask judges to order the old people to go away.

There are many young people who claim they have nothing against old people but they "just don't like to be around them." To the middle-aged son, this is the most perplexing prejudice of them all.

You can be prejudiced against Negroes or Irishmen without worrying about waking up someday and discovering you have become black or Irish. You'll always wake up the same nationality you were when you went to sleep – a native idiot.

But someday you'll wake up old, or you won't wake up at all.

The middle-aged son was trying to decide what terrible punishment would be fitting for the idiots who run people out of neighborhoods because they're over 75. But then he remembered where he was, and he recalled that his mother had always advised him "to pay attention in church."

So he listened while Father Jim relayed the words of Jesus Christ. The priest's gentle preaching made the middle-aged sun understand why some of the elderly flock might be fooled by his beard.

Towards the end of the mass, Father Jim suggested that his audience touch hands with those nearby and wish each other love and peace. The middle-aged son moved forward to kiss his mother. He wanted to tell her how sorry he was he didn't know all the words.

Don't Cry Out Loud
Baby cried the day the circus came to town
'cause she didn't want parades just passin' by her so she painted on a smile and took off with some elown
while she danced without a net upon the wire
I know a lot about her 'cause you see
Baby is an awful hot like me

Don't cry out loud, just keep it inside
and learn how to hide your feelings
Fly high and proud, and if you should fall
remember you almost had it all

Baby saw that when they pulled the Big Top down they left behind her dreams among the litter
the different kind of love she thought she'd found there was nothing left but sawdust and some glitter
But Baby can't be broken 'cause you'll see
She had the finest teacher that was me
I told her...

Once upon a time, there was a little girl named Baby. Baby was full of the devil. "Uncorked emotional response," the therapist reported. When she was happy, she would jump up and down, a grin spreading from ear to ear. She would jump up and down, a grin spreading from ear to ear. She would hug and kiss everyone in sight. When she was sad or angry or frustrated on the other hand, there was no holding back the tears. The hurt would well up and overflow into enormous rivers of pain and injustiee. Anger and frustration would drive her bitle body to the floor – pounding, kicking and sobbing. Baby was a baby. "Now don't get so excited, you'll mess your dress. You'll spill your juice," the mother worried. "Big girls don't cry."

It wasn't very long before Baby learned the facts of living life so as not to rock the proverbial boat. There is HAPPY on one end of the emotional spectrum, and SAD on the other. The "well-adjusted" adult is found somewhere in the corner of a little square box right in the middle.

Baby knew that someday, she too would take herself with all her laughing and erying, and jump into that box. It would probably happen when she was about 18. By then she would have learned to smile with her hands folded and to ery without using Kleenex. By then, Baby would have learned to put in the eork.

One afternoon, Baby's father drove a brand new Blazer up their ilrive way. He had saved up for two years to feel free enough to meet the monthly car payments. Baby thought she heard him explode with excitement. He didn't know she was listening outside the garage door. "By God, it's mine! It's mine! Lookit everybody, it's mine!" That's what Baby thought she heard but she must have been mistaken. Later on, he just tooled down the street to the grocery sture to pick up some bread and didn't say a word. Just sort of smiled.

A friend of her mother's "finally was going to have a baby," the neighbors reported. Baby thought it was peculiar that the friend was shouting her good fortune from the housetops if she was as happy as everyone said. When she was older she realized that the way you show your excitement for that blessed event is to wear maternity clothes when you're two months along. Strange, thought Baby. Grown-ups are strange. "Mature," the neighbors confirmed.

Baby's grandma died one year. Everyone had red eyes. Everyone loved grandma. Everyone wanted to lug and kiss and talk about death and the terrible emptiness they were feeling. Nobody did. They just acted embarrassed. And then, like it hadn't happened. There was a vaeancy in everybody's heart but nobody hung out a sign. "Realism," Baby concluded.

Well, Baby finally grew up, jumped into the box and pulled in the cork after her. Only one thing threatened her well-being all those years. That was falling in love. It was almost like growing up all over again. For a while, she was a child in a woman's body. Learning how to hide those feelings was the hardest metamorphosis Baby had to endure. Baby was lucky. She had merely joined the ranks of mediocrity, where the tempo is neither upbeat nor down. It could have been so much worse. Except for the children, there were many empty smiles in her world, and eyes devoid of enthusiasm and emotion. But nevertheless, Baby had survived. In a world where drugs, alcohol and nervous breakdowns lurked just around the corner, Baby had made it without any major emotional dependency, her analyst recorded.

Push for land use

Editor:

I wonder if the ones who keep saying they don't like downstate people, and all people who are for land use control, to reserve land for their playgrounds, have something else in mind. Profits?

Has it entered the heads of these Philistines that, without "playing", there is much cause for enjoying deep woods, waterfalls, wetlands for wildlife, and similar non-commercial bonuses granted us by nature?

My grandfather had a farm north of Kalamazoo in the first third of this century. Attached to it was a glorious woodlot with many of Michigan's primeval oaks. Now, where this woodlot stood is a row of houses spewing steam from their electric dryers into the unshaded air.

Do the objectors take into the account that products, materials, and numbers of people have changed? We bury the new kinds of stuff, but one day the burial grounds will run out. Then what? It'll serve us right if we have to live on garbage as well as make it.

Push for land use control. The next generation will thank you.

Sincerely,
Louise Bush Beutner

For the Most Sensuous Legs in the Literary Field: Jim Fixx, whose legs dominated the cover of the No. 1 best seller of 1978, RUNNING. Legs have not had such an impact on the American way of life since the two hind ones of Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over a lanter in Chicago in 1871.

The Most Sensuous Legs in the Military: Klinger on MASH, who proves week after week that when you're in a war zone it doesn't matter if you shave your legs or not, you can still be attractive.

The Most Sensuous Legs in Science Fiction: The bionic ones belonging to Lee Majors. When they come with varicose veins, it will open up an entire market for women.

The Most Sensuous Legs in Sports: Joe Namath, who proved to the world that the claims made by pantyhose are true: one size fits all.

The Most Sensuous Legs in Politics: Harold Stassen and Ronald Reagan, whose legs have logged more miles on the campaign trail than any other legs in political history.

And finally the Most Sensuous Legs occupying a White House in Washington: Jimmy Carter, because he's married to Rosalynn Carter and Sensuous Legs marry sensuous legs and if you don't believe me just check the wastebaskets of the city rooms.

Jim Fitzgerald

A perplexing prejudice against our senior citizens

The young priest walked among his elderly flock and touched their faces lightly, speaking soothing words as he called each of them by name. He told them they shouldn't be fooled by his beard: "I'm not Jesus Christ, I'm just Father Jim."

The middle-aged son was there, sitting in the back, outside the flock. He had arrived at mass much later than his mother, who was seated up front, in a wheelchair. Most of the flock were in wheelchairs, or shuffled slowly with the aid of walkers or canes.

This wasn't a church, it was a recreation room in a nursing home. Father Jim comes every Saturday afternoon to say mass at a makeshift altar. One candle was lit. There was no one to play the piano, so hymns were sung a capella. The middle-aged son didn't know all the words.

He watched his mother as she sang. She looked toward the sound of the priest's voice, straining to see him with eyes that have failed her. He wondered how many thousands of masses his mother had heard since 1900, and how many times they had attended the same mass, with the mother up front, praying, and the son in back, a late arrival, not knowing all the words.

There were maybe 70 other patients at the mass. The middle-aged son watched them, too. There was a woman who couldn't stop her right leg from twitching violently. There was a woman who interrupted the service to say something that couldn't be understood and then slowly left the room.

Out in the hallway, there was a woman he sees every time he visits the nursing home. She can't propel her wheelchair with her hands, so she uses one foot. She thrusts the foot against the floor in front of her and drags the wheelchair forward, again and again and again. Sometimes her slipper comes off and it takes her many minutes to get her foot back into it. She doesn't want anyone to help her. She smiles at everyone.

there was an old man who wasn't a patient. He attended the mass with his wife, who appeared to be asleep in her wheelchair. The old man held his wife's head up, and he held her hand. The middle-aged son later learned that the old man comes to the nursing home and sits by his wife's side all day, every day. She is usually not conscious. He usually holds her hand.

Before the mass was over, some un-Christian thoughts pushed into the middle-aged son's mind. He thought of all he has read lately about suburban neighborhoods that don't want groups of old people living in their midsts. The suburbanites say the old people are breaking zoning ordinances and lowering property values. They hire smart lawyers and go to court and ask judges to order the old people to go away.

There are many young people who claim they have nothing against old people but they "just don't like to be around them." To the middle-aged son, this is the most perplexing prejudice of them all.

You can be prejudiced against Negroes or Irishmen without worrying about waking up someday and discovering you have become black or Irish. You'll always wake up the same nationality you were when you went to sleep – a native idiot.

But someday you'll wake up old, or you won't wake up at all.

The middle-aged son was trying to decide what terrible punishment would be fitting for the idiots who run people out of neighborhoods because they're over 75. But then he remembered where he was, and he recalled that his mother had always advised him "to pay attention in church."

So he listened while Father Jim relayed the words of Jesus Christ. The priest's gentle preaching made the middle-aged son understand why some of the elderly flock might be fooled by his beard.

Towards the end of the mass, Father Jim suggested that his audience touch hands with those nearby and wish each other love and peace. The middle-aged son moved forward to kiss his mother. He wanted to tell her how sorry he was he didn't know all the words.

Don't Cry Out Loud
Baby cried the day the circus came to town
'cause she didn't want parades just passin' by her so she painted on a smile and took off with some clown
while she danced without a net upon the wire
I know a lot about her 'cause you see
Baby is an awful lot like me

Don't cry out loud, just keep it inside
and learn how to hide your feelings
Fly high and proud, and if you should fall
remember you almost had it all

Baby saw that when they pulled the Big Top down they left behind her dreams among the litter the different kind of love she thought she'd found
there was nothing left but sawdust and some glitter
But Baby can't be broken 'cause you'll see
She had the finest teacher that was me
I told her...

Once upon a time, there was a little girl named Baby. Baby was full of the devil. "Uncorked emotional response," the therapist reported. When she was happy, she would jump up and down, a grin spreading from ear to ear. She would jump up and down, a grin spreading from ear to ear. She would hug and kiss everyone in sight. When she was sad or angry or frustrated on the other hand, there was no holding back the tears. The hurt would well up and overflow into enormous rivers of pain and injustice. Anger and frustration would drive her little body to the floor – pounding, kicking and sobbing. Baby was a baby. "Now don't get so excited, you'll mess your dress. You'll spill your juice," the mother worried. "Big girls don't cry," admonished the father.

It wasn't very long before Baby learned the facts of living life so as not to rock the proverbial boat. There is HAPPY on one end of the emotional spectrum, and SAD on the other. The "well-adjusted" adult is found somewhere in the corner of a little square box right in the middle.

Baby knew that someday, she too would take herself with all her laughing and crying, and jump into that box. It would probably happen when she was about 18. By then she would have learned to smile with her hands folded and to cry without using Kleenex. By then, Baby would have learned to put in the cork.

One afternoon, Baby's father drove a brand new Blazer up their drive way. He had saved up for two years to feel free enough to meet the monthly car payments. Baby thought she heard him explode with excitement. He didn't know she was listening outside the garage door. "By God, it's mine! It's mine! Lookit everybody, it's mine!" That's what Baby thought she heard but she must have been in staken. Later on, he just tooled down the street to the grocery store to pick up some bread and didn't say a word. Just sort of smiled.

A friend of her mother's "finally was going to have a baby," the neighbors reported. Baby thought it was peculiar that the friend was shouting her good fortune from the housetops if she was as happy as everyone said. When she was older she realized that the way you show your excitement for that blessed event is to wear maternity clothes when you're two months along. Strange, thought Baby. Grown-ups are strange. "Mature," the neighbors confirmed.

Baby's grandma died one year. Everyone had red eyes. Everyone loved grandma. Everyone wanted to hug and kiss and talk about death and the terrible emptiness they were feeling. Nobody did. They just acted embarrassed. And then, like it hadn't happened. There was a vacancy in everybody's heart but nobody hung out a sign. "Realism," Baby concluded.

Well, Baby finally grew up, jumped into the box and pulled in the cork after her. Only one thing threatened her well-being all those years. That was falling in love. It was almost like growing up all over again. For a while, she was a child in a woman's body. Learning how to hide those feelings was the hardest metamorphosis Baby had to endure. Baby was lucky. She had merely joined the ranks of mediocrity where the tempo is neither upbeat nor down. It could have been so much worse. Except for the children, there were many empty smiles in her world, and eyes devoid of enthusiasm and emotion. But nevertheless, Baby had survived. In a world where drugs, alcohol and nervous breakdowns lurked just around the corner, Baby had made it without any major emotional dependency, her analyst recorded.

Push for land use

Editor:

I wonder if the ones who keep saying they don't like downstate people, and all people who are for land use control, to reserve land for their playgrounds, have something else in mind. Profits?

Has it entered the heads of these Philistines that, without "playing", there is much cause for enjoying deep woods, waterfalls, wetlands for wildlife, and similar non-commercial bonuses granted us by nature?

My grandfather had a farm north of Kalamazoo in the first third of this century. Attached to it was a glorious woodlot with many of Michigan's primeval oaks. Now, where this woodlot stood is a row of houses spewing steam from their electric dryers into the unshaded air.

Do the objectors take into the account that products, materials, and numbers of people have changed? We bury the new kinds of stuff, but one day the burial grounds will run out. Then what? It'll serve us right if we have to live on garbage as well as make it.

Push for land use control. The next generation will thank you.

Sincerely,
Louise Bush Beutner

Rayders beat Boyne City, Harbor Springs and Petoskey next

Coach Dave Moyer's Charlevoix Rayders celebrated Winter Homecoming with a statisfying triumph over neighboring Boyne City Friday, 53-49.

The win evened Charlevoix's Michigan-Huron Shores record at 6-6 and improved the Rayders overall record to 10-6.

Both squads got off to slow starts in Friday's contest. Charlevoix led 9-6 after the first quarter, but Boyne City rallied to take a 22-21 halftime advantage as Tim Hartwick and Dean Hicks combined for 14 points in the second quarter.

Boyne City's lead was shortlived, however. The Rayders jumped back on top early in the third quarter and held off the pesky Ramblers the rest of the way.

Seniors Pat Schmidt and Bob Plumm paced the Rayder attack. Schmidt tallied 23 points while Plumm was not far behind with 21. Both players fouled out of the contest. No other Rayder scored more than three points.

Hartwick and Hicks carried the load for Boyne City. Hartwick finished with 18 points and Hicks added 12.

It was the second straight game Charlevoix had to come from behind to win. Against Kalkaska Tuesday, the Rayders tallied, 31-23 at intermission. Charlevoix then outscored Kalkaska, 22-7, in the third quarter to take a 55-38 lead into the final quarter. The Rayders won the game, 69-61.

This time the Rayder scoring was spread out with four players hitting double figures. Schmidt, who scored 14 points in the third quarter splurge, ended up with 27 points, Plumm 16 and Kevin Kratt and Scott Morgan 10 each.

This week Charlevoix will travel to Harbor Springs for a non-conference affair on Tuesday and then on Friday the Rayders will meet arch-rival Petoskey. Both Harbor Springs and Petoskey will be looking for revenge against the Rayders. The Rayders are one game behind Petoskey in the conference standings. A win Friday would greatly enhance Charlevoix's chances of a third place finish.

Hope Malpeli and Kristen Lignell were the top two girl skiers for Charlevoix. Malpeli finished fourth in the slalom and sixth in the giant slalom while Lignell was sixth in the slalom and ninth in the giant slalom.

Earlier in the week, Charlevoix participated in the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference meet at Bear Mountain.

The boys came in second to Petoskey as Lignell took a first in the slalom and a third in the giant slalom. The girls took third place as Kristen Lignell placed fifth in the slalom and Malpeli was sixth.

Skiers finishing in the top six in each race received medals and were named to the all-conference team.

St. Ignace wins volleyball tourney

St. Ignace won the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference volleyball tournament held over the weekend. The Saints beat Charlevoix, one of the conference's top squads, by scores of 15-7 and 15-10. Earlier Charlevoix had beaten Gaylord 15-12 and 15-8.

Last week Charlevoix beat Grayling and Boyne City.

After losing the opening game to Grayling, 5-1, Charlevoix bounced back to win the next three by scores of 15-2, 15-11 and 15-10.

The Boyne City match went right down to the wire. The Ramblers won the opening match, 15-12, Charlevoix won the next two, 15-5 and 15-13, Boyne City won the fourth game, 15-6, and Charlevoix took the deciding fifth game, 15-11.

The two wins improved the Rayders record to 6-1 overall and 5-1 in the conference.

In junior varsity play, Charlevoix lost to Grayling 15-12, 6-15, and 7-15. The Rayders, however, beat Boyne City 15-10, 9-15 and 15-8.

8th grades win

Charlevoix's 8th grade A team rolled over Gaylord last week, 58-39.

The Rayders had a strong third quarter - outscoring Gaylord 18-9 and coasted to victory.

Craig Klooster tallied 20 points and Fred Mielke added 14 for Charlevoix.

In the B game, Charlevoix was victorious again, 42-32. Duane Herriman scored 13 points for Charlevoix.

JV's beat Kalkaska, lose to Boyne

The Charlevoix Rayder JV basketball team split its two games last week. The Rayders beat Kalkaska, 76-46, but bowed to Boyne City, 68-59.

Against Kalkaska, Charlevoix fell behind, 12-11, after the first quarter and led by only three points, 25-22, at halftime. But in the second half the Rayders caught fire. With Jim Buchanan tossing in 18 points, Charlevoix outscored Kalkaska, 29-10, in the third quarter. Buchanan, ironically, but not score a point in the other three quarters.

Besides Buchanan, Gary and Jeff Drury each contributed 12 points and Mike Loper added 11.

In the Boyne City game, Charlevoix trailed by two points after the first quarter, 19-17, and at halftime, 39-37. Boyne City increased the margin to eight, 52-44, after three quarters and the Rayders could not catch up.

For the Rayders, Loper and Jeff Drury each had 14 points while Gary Drury added 11.

Frosh drop two games

Charlevoix's freshman basketball team fell upon hard times last week.

The frosh lost twice. Monday Cheboygan handled the Rayders, 70-65, and Thursday Boyne City came out on top, 56-43.

The Cheboygan game was close all the way. It was 13-13 after the first quarter, 33-32 in Cheboygan's favor at halftime, and 54-52 in Charlevoix's favor after three quarters.

Dave Buday blistered the nets for 30 points for Charlevoix while teammate Jeff Greene added 12.

A cold third quarter spelled trouble against Boyne City. Charlevoix led after the first quarter, 11-8, and only trailed by one point, 26-25, at halftime. But Boyne City outscored the Rayders 18-8 in the third quarter to tuck the game away.

Buday led all Rayder scorers with 16 points.

Ski & Shore discloses '79 plans

With sales of $4.2 million during the last six months and total sales for the year of $6.8 million, Ski and Shore Charlevoix is predicting an even bigger year in 1979, R. E. Georgi, president of Ski and Shore, estimates that in 1979 his Charlevoix office sales will exceed $8 million. Though tight money and high interest rates are a concern, people are still buying homes and other types of real estate at a record rate. It appears that fear of rising prices is prompting the many real estate transactions at this time.

In addition to publishing the Ski and Shore catalogs and utilizing other more conventional advertising methods, Ski and Shore Charlevoix is developing an entirely new approach to marketing their real estate. The new program employs extensive use of video tape equipment. Properties for sale will be filmed in full color, complete with narration and music. There will be two video screens operating continuously. One screen will be viewed outside the Ski and Shore office on Bridge Street and will feature a moving picture presentation of current listings. For more detailed information, the customer may come into the office where particular properties can be "called up" on the second video screen. Ski and Shore plans to have the video tape program operating by late spring. Other selling tools presently used include: a Guaranteed Sales Plan, an Inter-community Relocation Service, and a Home Warranty Protection Program.

Staff changes at Ski and Shore include the promotion of Richard Lobenherz (see photo) to Charlevoix Sales Manager. Lobenherz is a licensed broker and has been associated with Ski and Shore for three years. He is a graduate of University of Michigan and holds a Degree in Business Administration with a concentration in real estate. R.E. Georgi, who formerly assumed the sales management duties, will now be managing the Commercial - Investment department, specializing in the sale of business opportunities. Ski and Shore, under the direction of R. E. Georgi, has long been recognized as a premier training center for successful real estate professionals in Northern Michigan.

Bands in district festival Saturday

The Charlevoix bands have a busy schedule ahead of them during the next 10 days according to their director, Gary L. Stutzman.

The Charlevoix High School Symphony and Concert bands are scheduled to participate in the District II, Michigan School band and Orchestra Association festival for high school bands in Petoskey Saturday and the Seventh and Eighth grade bands in the Junior High division of the festival at Harbor Springs on the following Saturday, March 3.

In between the two festivals, all four bands will appear in a local concert scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 26.

"This is a busy time for us. However, I want the community to hear the music we have prepared for the District II Festivals on the next two Saturdays. This, I feel, will give the community an idea of the hard work these people do to prepare for the festival." Stutzman said in announcing the concert featuring all four bands playing the music they have prepared for the festivals.

He went on to say that playing in a band represents hard work. "All the public hears is the finished work, so to speak. It represents hours and days of preparation to reach the point where the band is ready for a festival or concert."

Stutzman urged the public to attend the concert and hear what all four bands have accomplished during the present school year.

The Symphony and Concert Bands will appear in the festival featuring bands in all classes playing before a panel of judges. The bands will be rated and those with I and II ratings will advance to state festivals scheduled for late April.

The Symphony Band composed of sophomores, juniors and seniors will make its appearance in the District II festival at 9:55 a.m. Saturday at the team teaching room at the Petoskey High School. The band will play three numbers, two selected numbers and a required number. The Charlevoix Symphony band, playing in Class B, will play the march, "Burst of Flame" by Bowles; "First Suite in E Flat" Gustave Holtz and the required number, "Chorale and Capriccio," Ceszar Giocanini.

The concert band, composed chiefly of freshmen, will play in Class D at the same site, the Team Teaching room at the Petoskey High School, at 4:35 p.m. Saturday. This band, also appearing under the direction of Stutzman, will play the "Monterey March" by King; "Occasional Suite" Osterling and the required number "Pageantry Overture", Edmondson.

Parents and interested persons are urged to attend the festival which is open to the public.

The following week the Seventh Grade band will play at 10:25 a.m. and the Eighth Grade band at 2:55 p.m. in the Junior High Festival to be held at the Harbor, Springs High School.

Like the other festivals this, too, is open to the public and friends of the band are urged to attend.

Selections to be played by the seventh grade band will be "Forward March", Shields; "Little Irish Suite", Jackson and "Holiday in London", Barnes.

The Eighth grade band will play "Concord March", Logan; "Battok for Children", Bartok and "Overture to Henry VIII", Cacavas.

The selections listed will be among those included in the 90 minute concert scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Colson film Sunday

"The New Chuck Colson" a film describing what really happened to the White house hatchet man will be snow at Community Church of God on Sunday, Feb. 25 at 7 p.m., according to Rev. Walter G. Hastings, postor.

Charles W. Colson, described by TIME magazine as "Tough, wily, nasty and tenaciously loyol to Richard Nixon" at the peak of a brilliant law career became one of the president's closest confidants.

In December of 1973, in the middle of the Watergate Scandal, the headline "Colson Makes Decision for Christ" jarred Washington. Many people suspected a gimmick, while most who knew him as "Nixon's hatchet man" just laughed.

Then came his surprising plea of "guilty" followed by long months in federal prison. It soon became apparent that something real had happened to Colson. The cnol calculating "tough guy" was different.

The film makes no attempt to stage or dramatize events nor does it ottempt to justify what happened. In a straightforward manner it describes what made Charles W. Colson a new man.

Vote likely on use of city funds

It appears residents in Petoskey will be voting soon to determine if city funds should be used to operate and maintain a swimming pool. A city ordinance presently prohibits this.

But several residents in the city have petitioned the Petoskey City Council and it is believed enough valid signatures have been obtained to put the question on the ballot in March.

Central Lake

Grants = recreational facilities

Officials in Central Lake have received $21,000 grants from the Herrick Foundation and the State Department of Natural Resources Land and Conservation Fund.

The grant money will be used to provide two tennis courts, a softball diamond, a fresh water well and parking facilities.

The recreational facilities will be constructed on a 16 acre parcel of land donated to the school district by Texas Instruments. The school district later deeded the property to the village to enhance chances of receiving grant money.

Charlevoix

Air tour to visit June 12

Charlevoix has been picked as one of 70 cities that will visited on the Michigan Air Tour in June.

Gov. William Milliken has proclaimed 1979 to be Michigan Aviation Year. It was 50 years ago that the Michigan Aeronautics Commission was formed.

Many events have been planned for the people of the state, to emphasize the important role aviation plays in our lives, both in business and recreation. One major event will be the air tour, where three flights involving 75 aircraft will visit 70 cities between June 11-15.

The air tour is expected in Charlevoix on Tuesday, June 12.

Budget given tentative approval

The general fund budget primarily covers administrative salaries, board expenses and operating costs for the intermediate service center.

Symphony Band, Concert Band qualify for state competition

Both the Charlevoix High School Symphony Band and the Concert Band received first division ratings in the District II Michigan School Band and Orchestra Festival at Petoskey thus qualifying for state competition, Director Gary L. Stutzman, reports.

The Symphony Band, composed of musicians from the top three grades, received straight I's in concert and a II in sight-reading resulting in a First Division rating. The Charlevoix band was one of four entered in Class B.

The Concert band, whose membership is composed of freshmen students, was awarded two I's and a II in concert and a I in sight reading. In fact, the Concert Band, playing in Class D, was the only band entered in this class to receive a First Division rating. There were nine bands entered in Class D.

Stutzman added that only six First Division ratings were given during the festival and Charlevoix received two of them.

Speaking of the Symphony Band's performance, Stutzman described it as "fantastic. They really came through. The selected piece, "Suite in E Flat" is the first piece of music written for bands. They did it justice".

As for the Concert Band, Stutzman said this was a happy surprise. "All the comments made by the judges were about the many things in music I had been emphasizing...all the disciplines I knew were needed. They had never met all these goals at one time. They did it Saturday. That was the time to make it happen. They reached their peak. I am proud of them. They have a right to be proud of themselves for they showed they had learned the things that were important." He went on to say that the selection they played to receive a 1 in sight reading was a Class A selected number.

Both bands are now eligible to participate in the State Festival. The festival site has not been named at this time. The date will be April 28.

The two bands along with the seventh and eighth grade bands from the middle school appeared in concert at the high school gymnasium Monday. The two high school bands played the selections that brought them top ratings at Petoskey Saturday and the two middle school bands will be presenting the selections they will be playing in the junior high district band festival at Harbor Springs on March 3.

Zoning meet tonight

The Charlevoix Township Zoning Board will meet tonight (Wednesday) to discuss a rezoning request from Medusa.

Medusa is seeking to have land presently zoned scenic reserve and agriculture rezoned to industrial.

The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m. at the township hall on the corner of Norwood and Carpenter Avenues.

Shy of funds for maintenance work, will school board seek additional millage?

By FRAN MARTIN

The Charlevoix Board of Education, at its regular meeting Monday night, heard numerous reports but took little action before adjourning to executive session to discuss personnel.

Vincent Olach, business manager, outlined for the board maintenance problems that cannot be taken care of with the funds available. He said there were problems such as the maintenance of roofs on the three buildings that would require extensive work. He advised that some thought be given to levying special millage to underwrite the cost of the repairs.

He also told the board that he had visited the nutritional dinner site at the high school and offered his services to senior citizens needing assistance with their property tax refunds.

He also reported on a piece of property located on May Street known as the Browe property which the school is considering purchasing as future building sites for building trade homes. The property, 150 x 260 feet will be split, probably into two lots, he told the board.

With CETA funds running out later this year, Olach advised the board that the school would lose eight employees in various departments including three custodians at the high school as the result of the cut off of funds.

Roy M. Fortin reported on the action that had taken to date regarding classes in human growth and development. He said a committee appointed earlier was being re-activated to study P.A. 226 of 1977. He said the committee would review the materials and the methods of teaching human growth and development.

Supt. Gordon W. VanWieren presented the idea of hiring an educational consultant or lobbyist to serve school districts in northern Michigan. He said it has been the thought for many years that larger school districts in southern Michigan, which have someone in Lansing looking out for their interests, are faring far better, money-wise, than smaller, out-state districts.

Though no action was taken, the board decided to pursue the subject further before making a decision.

Mrs. Connie Pointner of the board reported that the sessions on parenting conducted recently at the Charlevoix Elementary School were successful and well attended.

The resignation of James J. Haggard from the Charlevoix Board of Education after being elected to a three-year term last June was accepted with regret. Haggard is leaving the community to accept position with Channell & Chaffin, a commercial design firm in Newport Beach, Calif. No action was taken on the resignation.

Supt. VanWieren also made the board aware of petitions for the Char-Em Intermediate School District board of education. There are two six-year terms to be filled.

March 5 will be the date of the next meeting.

CETA funds running out, school to lose eight employees, Jim Haggard resigns

Charlevoix Co-op Nursery accepting enrollment applications starting Thursday

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

Charlevoix Cooperative Nursery School, entering its 9th year, is accepting enrollment applications for next fall, as of March 1st.

The nursery, for which tuition is kept remarkably low – $75 per semester for three-day a week sessions and $50 for two-day sessions – is open to any child who will be three years old by Sept. 1st. The tuition covers teacher's salaries and buys all the schools equipment and teaching materials.

Parents have an opportunity to choose between two or three days per week classes and morning or afternoon sessions.

As with other cooperative nursery schools, Charlevoix's operates on the combined forces of professional teachers and parent-power.

Parents, who are a vital ingredient in the organization of the school, oversee the nursery, serving on the Board of Directors and committees, as well as acting as teaching assistants several sessions each semester.

The two professionals, Dorothy Miller and Nancy Taylor take responsibility for the day-to-day planning of the nursery curriculum and direct the classroom activities.

All parents are assigned to committees and given teaching times.

Dorothy Miller, who this year teaches the morning sessions, holds a B.A. in elementary education. She has been teaching at the Charlevoix Cooperative Nursery since 1972.

Nancy Taylor who has been with the nursery school for four years, holds a BA in music and an elementary teaching certificate.

Both teachers hold "ZA Endorsements" – meaning they have completed 18 graduate credits in early childhood education.

Classes are held at the Charlevoix Elementary School, in a room adjacent to the kindergarten. While the nursery is able to make use of school facilities because of a contractural arrangement with the public schools, the direction and management of the nursery is entirely independent.

Recently, sitting in the child-sized chairs around equally child-sized tables in the spacious nursery classroom, the two teachers discussed some of the goals and activities of the nursery school.

"Socialization," Mrs. Taylor began, "is very important. Children learn about the world around them in class and through field trips."

Mrs. Miller picked up the conversation, "And we are attempting to build a good self-concept in each child. We stress the positive – the 'I can,' 'and 'I will try' rather than 'I cannot.'"

Both agreed that parental involvement was one of the key ingredients to success of the Charlevoix nursery.

"Parents can observe their children interacting with other children and they can see other children the same age as their own," Mrs. Miller said.

The teachers emphasized that they do not have set learning goals for their three, four and five year old students.

"We provide exposure to materials and let the children go to it," Mrs. Taylor said.

"Teaching is highly individualized," she emphasized.

The classroom is divided into several sections. In one quarter a small red playhouse, with furniture and record player stands invitingly. Other sections are crammed with budding blocks, easels and paints. Tables with games and puzzles are all around the room. At every turn something interesting and stimulating sits waiting for discovery by small hands.

The teachers explained that the two hour and 15 minute classes are divided into several blocks of time.

A portion of each session is unstructured so that children can pursue their own interests, whether that be working on a puzzle, looking at one of the books from the crowded book shelf, or chatting with their friends. Each day a period of time is set aside for small group directed activity, where children can use paints, scissors, paste and other materials to produce objects to take home.

There are large group activities as well, where children learn songs, finger plays and listen to the teacher read stories.

While the teachers downplay formalized learning, an observer can see that most of what looks like just plain fun has plenty of educational value. Games with color associations and counting songs are but two examples. Activities designed to help children develop small motor skills, such as cutting and coloring, are balanced with activities to develop large motor skills, such as walking on the balance beams, learning to jump and hop, and the games played in the elementary school gym.

Snacks, often something the children have participated in making, are offered each class session.

The emphasis, the teachers say, is on stimulating children's natural curiosity and initiative while developing their ability to act independently and relate to other children and adults.

Because the nursery has been so successful, applications for enrollment are accepted on a first come first serve basis. Applications are available at the nursery school classroom.

PRACTICE WHAT YOU PREACH

Would someone please tell me why the Post Office insists on immediate removal of snow from rural boxes, before they will deliver mail, when the conditions in front of their mail deposit boxes by the street in front of their budding are absolutely abominable.

Just try to keep it from smashing your car when you try to get close enough to deposit a letter. A little shoveling once in a while would do wonders.

Let's practice what you preach.

Thank you

ELIMINATE SNOW FROM INTERSECTION

I would like to thank Leonard Dubey, the head of the street department, for the excellent job he has been doing on the city streets. We have been most appreciative of the quick sanding of the hills, when they are icy.

However, I would like to offer a simple solution to the snow plowing problem. When the plows cross the highways to continue plowing in a straight line, snow is being deposited across the intersections, and in the intersections. Years ago, they would begin to plow around a block, turning to the right when they reached the intersection, and continuing around the block. This way, each corner was cleared clean of snow, and there were no dangerous furrows across the highway. I almost got in a wreck from hitting some heavy snow on U.S. 31 this week. If you will notice, on the corners where they go across the highway, the snow is so thick, that it is very difficult to make a turn on to the highway. This would all be remedied if they would plow around each block individually. You could do it just as quickly, too. Also, it is against the law to leave all that excess snow on the highway, so this would solve many problems.

Thank you
A Charlevoix resident

CETA jobs dry up - at least until October

by Jim Thomas

Certain unavoidable expenses are incurred in the process of buying a house. It's always better to know in advance what the closing costs are likely to be and to plan them accordingly. The expenses from purchase and finance of a house fall into two groups: those loan acquiring title to the property, and those from financing the transaction. Legal procedures vary in different states and some of the costs will vary with the size of the purchase. So the best idea is to be informed of all costs in advance. We so advise our clients to the best of our ability and we urge you to inquire about them from your broker as well.

Professionals from the office of THOMAS REAL ESTATE, 100 Pine River Lane, 547-4434 can help you with all the details involved in buying a house, from finding the perfect piece of property to the closing. We are known for personalized and dependable service in all phases of real estate. Stop in and check our selected listings at choice properties in all price ranges. "Do Business Where Business is Being Done" Open: Daily 9-5, evenings and Sundays by appointment.

A survey, or map of the lot is essential, not only to the buyer, but the lender will also want a copy of it.

Congratulations to Michael and Barbara Holmes for their new home on Auld in Charlevoix.

There will be no more hiring under the Comprehensive Euployment and Training (CETA) program until at least the first of October.

This news was transmitted to Helen Phillips, assistant director of the Public Program Administration for Charlevoix County last week.

CETA has accounted for the employment of approximately 50 people at the time by public service organizations throughout the county, including schools, hospitals, cities, road commission, sheriff's department, and many others.

The program has been one of the victims of cuts in government spending and no one knows at this time whether hiring will be resumed even after the present "freeze", Mrs. Phillips says.

"The Inn" was one of the early resort hotels in Charlevoix. It was started in 1896, but as it neared completion in the spring of 1897, it collapsed, apparently due to the weight of wet plaster on the upper floors. Two people were killed and several injured in the accident. The wreckage was torn out and a new building started. "The Inn" was completed in 1898, in time for the summer season. It is interesting to note that the lumber used in constructing "The Inn" came from the Central Lake area and cost $5 per thousand feet. Charlevoix House acts as launching pad for mentally handicapped

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

Since 1974 an unconspicuous green two-story frame house has sat quietly between condominiums and summer cottages on Belvedere Avenue bordering Round Lake.

It's story is a success story.

Like the harbor by which it sits, Charlevoix House is a peaceful refuge.

It is home to 6 mentally handicapped adults, all of whom came to Charlevoix House from foster homes and institutions around Michigan.

Their neighbors, who greeted the opening of Charlevoix House with few qualms, today extoll the virtues of the quiet residents. The community, too, has taken pride in Charlevoix House. Volunteers serve on the Board of Directors and downtown merchants have been notably helpful to the residents.

Most of the residents share a common hope of someday leaving Charlevoix House to live independently in the community.

House Manager Kathy Hynes; an energetic and ever optimistic 30-year-old, describes Charlevoix House as "a launching ground."

"We try to provide a supportive home base, aimed at independent individual growth for our residents. We want them to be free to launch into new things and not be hung up on the unfinished business of their own growing up."

That "unfinished business" is often hardly begun when residents first arrive.

The majority have been in foster homes or institutionalized. The few who have come directly from their own homes have been in a state of child-like dependence, despite the fact that they are young adults.

So, for Kathy and her husband, Pat, who acts as house father when home from his full-time job as plant superintendent at ITT Industries in East Jordan, their first job is to help new residents overcome the additional handicaps society has imposed on them, because they were dingnosed as "retarded."

"Our first efforts are to try to normalize behavior," Kathy says, laughing at her recollections of each resident's first experiences.

"We have to show residents why they can't look outrageously different and help them overcome what is known as "institutional behavior" – infantile behavior.

"When Ken arrived at the age of 20, he was dressed in old Salvation Army clothes, pants hiked up under his arms, with an enormous belt which hung down to his knees," Kathy remembered.

"Pat teaches the men, just once how to bathe, wash their hair and take care of their personal hygeine. I do the same for women. Many have never done any of that for themselves," she continued.

"We emphasize how to take care of themselves, including how to cook nutritious meals.

"Ken was overweight because he'd had to survive on starchy foods, his family had serious financial problems," Kathy explained.

She said he quickly began to lose weight, but he still had trouble adjusting his pants until Pat went up to him one day and set his pants down on his hips, saying "this is the in way to wear your pants, Ken."

Kathy said that because Ken cares about what is in, he has worn his pants stylishly ever since."

One of the hallmarks of Charlevoix House is the upenness and easy comraderie between residents and the Hynes family.

While talking with a visitor, moving from the family's private quarters through the communal living and dining room, and into the kitchen, Kathy kept a constant flow of conversation going, including residents in as she went.

Her two children, Gabriel, 3, and Raefiel, 5, moved between their parents and the extended family of residents with ease.

Ken was hard at work in the kitchen, helping prepare dinner. Moderately tall, he has a sensitive, inquisitive face, with smiling eyes that peer out from his glasses. He sported a short trimmed beard and wore casual sweater, shirt and slacks.

"I was in an institution," Ken stated. "It was terrible. Just terrible. Institutions are awful," he shook his head for emphasis.

Looking owlishly through his glasses, to be sure his message was received, his face changed to a broad open smile. "But Charlevoix House is great, just great. I like it here."

Kathy Hynes explained that Charlevoix House is run with a mixture of casual family style living and a set of basic goals for each resident. Formal learning sessions are held regularly.

The eventual goal being to move out, each resident is carefully taught basics, including the handling of their own finances.

"Charlevoix House is unique in that Kathy and Pat Hynes have an unusual combination of philosophy and ability to apply it – they are the magic of Charlevoix House," Bob Freeman an After Care Case Manager from Traverse City who has placed clients at Charlevoix house commented.

"They accept every resident as an individual, as human beings with rights and responsibilities," he concluded.

Sue Hartz, social worker in Oscoda County, said she transferred one downstate client north to Charlevoix House because "while a few homes say they work toward the same goals, most don't really work that hard. This is an unique program, with directors who have a unique level of education."

Perhaps the most telling compliment came from Fred Chappel, Director for Mentally Retarded Services in Grand Rapids, and a parent of a resident.

"Charlevoix House is an excellent living situation. My son Fred needed a place where he could be with other young adults, where he could progress socially and develop mentally.

"Fred appreciates living there and Charlevoix has taken the handicapped adults into the community," Chappel said.

Charlevoix House began with state and federal grants, but today survives basically on the room and board each resident pays from his Social Security Supplemental Income.

Support in Charlevoix comes largely from the Board of Directors who help the Hynes with the business end of the home.

Most of the residents work at the nearby Bergmann Center, where they are trained in vocational skills while performing piece work on a contractural basis with local industry. Like Charlevoix House, the Bergmann Center's goals are to move their clients into jobs in the local economy, when they are ready.

Residents come and go as they please, but are expected to keep the Hynes informed. There are no locked doors.

Developing personal skills and responsibility is what Charlevoix House is all about.

Last June, two residents, Dale Martin, 22, and David Vaughan, 27, had reached that "launching point". They were ready by Charlevoix House standards and their own, to live and work independently. Today they are roommates in their own apartment from which they go to work at the Bergmann Center, and to which they invite their friends for dinner.

With three men and three women, romances have blossomed.

Two years ago two young adults who were approaching the moving out stage decided they wanted to marry.

Harold, as a result of a bicycling accident at the age of 11, suffered brain damage and epileptic seizures. Sharon suffered brain damage after a childhood case of spinal meningitis.

They had progressed steadily since they had arrived and the concensus was they too were ready.

The Hynes, Charlevoix House directors and professional personnel from the Community Mental Health Services in Petoskey, who had been instrumental in the establishment of Charlevoix House, agreed that marriage was also a positive move.

As Lilian Bergmann, founder of the Bergmann Center and a Life Consultant After Care Worker for the mental health group said, "Why shouldn't these people know what it is to have a warm body next to you at night, to know love and be loved?"

Today, lounging in front of their TV in their Charlevoix apartment, after a dinner which Sharon proudly prepared, their conversation is typically domestic. Sharon has joined a weight reducing club. Harold talks about his job at the Bergmann Center. They beam across the room at each other with love and self-confidence.

Food bill too high? Cooperative explores ways to beat rising prices; meeting set for today at library

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

A food buying club, just forming in Charlevoix will hold an open meeting with David Houseman, food systems consultant from the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging, Wednesday (Feb 28) at 3:30 p.m. in the Charlevoix Public Library.

The food buying club or cooperative held an initial organizational meeting Sunday, Feb. 18, at the library, which was attended by more than 40 individuals. A second organizational meeting will be held Sunday March 4 at 7:30 p.m. at the library, to which everyone is welcomed.

The group decided, at its first meeting, to explore every possible method of beating the rising costs of food.

The club is open to anyone in the area, according to Fritz Dodge, one of the founders.

"Basically we are looking for cheaper ways to buy food," Dodge explained matter of factly.

"The forty people at our first meeting represented a cross section of our community, which is the way we hope to continue. There were young people, families and older people.

"We are especially interested in involving senior citizens in this effort," Dodge, a Charlevoix home builder explained.

He said that at Wednesday's meeting Houseman will discuss various avenues the club can take to buy low cost food.

Houseman is particularly interested in helping senior citizens deal with the effects on inflation on the cost of food.

At last Sunday's meeting, the group was shown a short film entitled "Harvest Comes Home", which presented many projects similar groups around the country have pursued.

While the Charlevoix group discussed several sources of low cost food, they have agreed to begin by associating themselves with the Michigan Federation of Food Cooperatives, which maintains a food warehouse in Ann Arbor.

The warehouse, called "Wherehouse", offers savings averaging about 40 percent on food, ranging from juices, oils, fruits, soaps and sweeteners (honey, molasses etc), to nuts and grains and flours.

The Charlevoix Food Buying Club will begin placing orders for members through the Wherehouse soon, Dodge said. A complete list of food available can be obtained at the Wednesday meeting, or the March 4th organizational meeting, both at the library.

Initially the Charlevoix group will order through the Grain Train Food Cooperative in Petoskey, but as soon as local orders are large enough, the Charlevoix Club will order directly from Wherehouse.

At the meeting, last week, additional means of obtaining low cost food were considered for future projects.

Dodge said that cooperative bakeries, cooperative chicken farms, canning cooperatives and gleaning projects were some ideas stimulated by the film.

Gleaning involves picking through fields already harvested to salvage food such as corn, peppers, tomatoes and so on, that would be otherwise left to rot. There have been several successful gleaning projects around the country.

Dodge said that the March 4th meeting will be devoted to formally organizing the Charlevoix Food Buying Club.

"We will distribute food orders, elect our Board of Directors and establish our by-laws," he said.

"We expect that we will order twice a month and receive deliveries twice a month," he continued.

"Quantities will be up to each individual," he said.

Membership fees or dues, which the group hopes to keep to a minimum, will be established to cover local costs.

Dodge said he hoped people would join the club now and help establish its direction. He emphasized that it is open to everyone and senior citizens will be especially welcomed.

Further information about the group and the forthcoming meetings may be obtained by calling Dodge at 547-9525 or Liane Christensen at 547-6360.

Nuclear Reactors in state pose safety problems

Editor:

All four of the operating commereial nuclear reactors in Michigan are involved in serious questinns of safety.

At the Big Rock Plant, the trial of the 14 persons who were arrested for trespassing during a demonstratiun on December 2 (now called the Big Rock 14) is now before District Judge David W. Fershee of Charlevoix, Michigan. The attorney for the Big Rock 14, James M. Oison of Traverse City, is asking that the health and safety issues of nuclear power plants be taken into account, and argues that the trespassing was a non-violent symbolic actiun to demonstrate the concern of his clients over nuclear power. The Big Rock Plant, situated on Lake Michigan, has had trouble with leakage of radioactive material.

On several occasions in the past few months, according to the New York Times, plant operators of the Big Rock n-plant have appealed to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in Washington because the management of Consumers Power Co. was applying pressure on them to start up the plant after shutdown, before the operators felt that it was safe to do so. The NRC upheld the operators. The Big Rock plant does not have a number of the back-up safety systems that are now required at n-plants.

Following the repudiation of the Rasmussen nuclear safety study by the NRC, which claimed that the chances of a serious accident at a nuclear reactor was as unlikely as a meteor striking a city, the Union of Concerned Scientists called for the shutting down of 16 U.S. reactors for safety reasons. Two of those reactors are the Donald C Cook Plants at Bridgman, Michigan. According to the Union of Concerned Scientists, those plants have the same faulty wiring systems that caused all the safety systems to fail at the Brown's Ferry plant in the nuclear industry's most disastrous fire. The Union of Concerned Scientists held a briefing for the Congressmen of those districts where the sixteen reactors are located on Monday, February 5, 1979.

At the Palisades n-plant, it was recently discovered that cases are causing the stainless steel racks that are housing spent fuel that is stored on site at the present time, to expand. The swelling of the racks can lock the spent fuel inside them. These high density racks were intended to allow more storage of spent fuel at the reactor site than was originally planned for.

Consumers has had to return to the original storage system in its old racks. The company estimates that this could mean the Palisades plant could run out of spent fuel storage space by 1981. The plant would have to be shut down unless this spent fuel can be shipped to another nuclear reactor that has storage space available. No other storage for spent fuel is available for the forseeable future.

Palisades is also experiencing severe corrosion problems in its steam generators. These problems have caused two nuclear plants to shut down for repairs, the Turkey Point Plant in Florida, and the Surry Plant in Virginia. Florida Power and Light estimates that the costs of the repairs plus the fuel that will have to be purchased is expected to total more than a quarter of a billion dollars.

Carter's foreign policy: It works

Poor Jimmy Carter is taking his lumps again from critics of his foreign policy – or his lack of one. Some of them are even accusing Jimmy of letting the government drift without a firm hand on the rudder in turbulent international waters.

And, you know, they are absolutely right. At this writing the United States is not busy knocking the brains out of anybody any place in the world. Oh, we still have a few troops scattered from South Korea to West Germany, but from all reports they make better lovers than fighters.

No sir. We are not involved in a single "police action," war, or armed conflict at any kind on the face of the globe. And it makes a lot of people uncomfortable. It just isn't natural.

They view with alarm the turmoil in Iran which has interrupted the flow of oil and has caused the shah to flee his native country in terror. They'd like to step in with a battalion or two of Marines and put the situation to rights, but old Carter just sits there, smiling.

Then Ayahtnflah Khomeini pops up in France and says he intends to take over the reins of power in Iran and establish an Islamic government. The old regime takes him with a grain of salt and even Bakhtiar, the shah's hand-picked successor, says the dottery old man is welcome to come home. He looks upon the ayahtollah as a joke. Ilut Khomeini no sooner sets foot in Iran than he has the country in his hip pocket. Bakhtiar, like the shah, flees for his life.

And still Jimmy Carter sits idly by, offically recognizing one Iranian government after another with embarrassing frequency. Could it be that Carter is afraid to fight?

Meanwhile, our new friends in Asia – the Chinese – decide that Vietnam must be punished for invading Cambodia, creating a damned-if-you-do-or-damned-if-you-don't situation for the United States. We would like to see someone knock the bejabbers out of our old foes, the Vietnamese. But the Vietnamese have been doing a superb job of routing the dreaded Khmer Rouge in Cambodia, fellows who are 1,000 times worse than the most bloodthirsty Vietnamese.

What should we do? Call out the gunboats, as Russia has elected to do? Or sit back and watch, as Jimmy Carter has chosen to do?

Carter's critics seem to feel that the president has no foreign policy at all and that the United States should leap to its feet and rattle its swords every time there is a commotion anywhere in the world. Which, of course, is nonsense.

Carter's critics simply have not learned the lesson of Vietnam, namely that is is impossible for a single nation, regardless of its muscle and its good intentions, to maintain peace and tranquility around the globe.

Carter last week was felt compelled to explain his foreign policy on two occasions. He was careful to point out that the United States is well prepared to assure the safety of American soil. And frankly, I don't know what more we could expect of him.

The mentality of world leadership appears to be at low ebb in this dying days of the seventh decade of the 20th Century. With the likes of Idi Amin running Uganda, Pot Pol trying to save Cambodia, Khomeini calling the shots in Iran, Yassar Arafat representing the displaced Palestinians, and assorted emirs, fakirs, and political hacks holding sway around the world, trouble could break out anywhere.

President Carter has chosen a "hands off" policy in the international brush fire department, which I think is very wise and prudent of him. If we have the defense capability to keep the screwballs overseas – and I believe we have – then Carter is on the right track.

Soaking up fragments of history

Those who have walked carefully – along the summer streets of Mackinac Island, buying fudge and trinkets, soaking up fragments of history in the forts and quaintness in the white picket-fenced yards, remnants of a French and Indian heritage preserved as much as commercialism allows, will delight in reading "The Loon Feather" by Iola Fuller.

Those who have sailed across the expanse and nestled their crafts in the harbor, who have explored by foot the interior of the Island, who have taken the time to breathe deeply of the natural beauty of the Straits as they stretch away into shades of green and blue beyond the rocky shoreline–will find a hundred times more. In fact, to fully appreciate the poctry of this novel, and the simplicity of Indian tradition, one must don for the duration a pair of deerskin mocassins and then slip quietly across the sand into the pines.

Here, in the person of Oneta, daughter of revered chief Tecumseh, we can at least begin to experience the drama and the dilemma of one who must eventually choose between her own people and those of her French step father, Pierre Debans.

"The Loon Feather" is the story of two cultures simultaneously resisting yet dependent upon one another. The Indians and the white settlers formed a necessary, if abrasive fusion of the two races for economic purposes. If the black man was of value to the white by virtue of sheer manpower, the red man was of value as a source of ingenuity and know-how in the fur trading industry. Both are important for the promulgation of our own peculiar American version of racism and prejudice.

Oneta, as a character, serves the purpose of symbolizing the hope for eventual understanding, one heritage of the other. Born and raised in an Ojibway lodge, she soon finds herself fatherless, and subsequently interpreter and ally of her French step father. When her mother also dies, Oneta and her half-breed brother, Paul, must needs be civilized, "domesticated", as grandmere Debans would put it. Thusly, she is sent to a French boarding school in Quebec where she remains tacitly for twelve years.

Oneta must be close to twenty-four, when she returns to find her Ojibway tribe and others close to insurrection and her step father far from being any closer to compromise than when she left. It is Oneta, now refined and educated, but still primarily the daughter of Tecumseh, who alone has the influence to deter tragedy on the Island. Her commitment to the cause of her people, all the while sustaining a genuine respect for Pierre and Grandmere Debans is more than commendable, it is unbelievable. Perhaps it struck me as such because quiet acceptance and resignation are not traits which are in my non-Indian blood.

"The Loon Feather" is finally, a love story, of a girl for her heritage, for her Island home, and eventually for a white man who comes to be blessed with Indian sensitivity for all that Oneta values in life. Together they foreshadow a future time when the residual pollution of prejudice, will settle on men of all races alike, as embarrassing and repulsive reminders of man's injustice to man.

It's time to study Lake Charlevoix shoreline

Editor:

The western shoreline of Lake Charlevoix is undergoing considerable change. Irish Marina is in the process of adding a new facility at the old fuel dock area. They have also done considerable dredging to expand their existing facilities to the south of the city beach. Mr. Helmut Forbrig has applied for approval to build yet another marina to the south of Irish. All this expansion may pose a severe threat to the water quality at Ferry Beach.

By bracketing the beach with large areas of stagnant water containing the refuse and occasional discharge from some careless boaters, the marinas will contribute to pollution of the water in the immediate vicinity. It can only be a matter of time before the rising culiform county will close the beach for good.

The cleansing currents produced by the reversing flow of water through the Pine River channel will be to no avail when the beach is threatened from both sides.

Are we willing to sacrifice the beach for the continued commercialization of the western shoreline of the lake?

I think a critical study should be done before allowing any further development of marina facilities in this specific area.

Support for the Big Rock 14

Editor:

This letter is in support of the people risking their personal freedom to protest what I consider the most outrageous neighbor this community has. Being new to Charlevoix and a new property owner, I have only this comment: Never would I have invested my money here in Real Estate would I have known that a nuclear plant is that close.

How safe really is the water to swim in and how safe is my drinking water? Maybe I am too old to care for myself but I am risking genetic mutation in my future grandchildren?

I want to know! Besides providing the particularies about the trial of the Nomad people, how about a little information on facts considering that a newspaper should report good or bad.

Thank you

Fat Capital of Midwest

Are women in small towns fatter than women in big cities?

This is a question I am eminently quabfied to answer. I used to live in a small town and now I live in a big city. And I always look at women.

This fat subject is not raised frivolously, nor chauvinistically. Fat is serious, and bisexual. Probably as many men as women die from being overweight in small towns.

Today's dollop of wisdom will deal with female fat specifically because it is female fat that is worrying a doctor named Rashidul Islam who lives in Corydon, Ind (population 2,719).

The doctor's worries were published by a newspaper in my old hometown, Lapeer, Mich. (population 6,314), along with a letter from a dismayed resident who claimed Lapeer's women are big enough to eat the town designated "Fat Capital of the Midwest."

Aecording to The Lapeer County Press, Dr. Islam said: "I'm concerned that what I call the Small Town Disease. That's my term for obesity. It is especially a disease of the small-town woman. She marries young, right out of high school, and her life becomes centered entirely in the home, and the center of her home is the kitchen. She eats too much. She has no other outlet."

Why would this be more true in a small town than in a big city? Dr. Islam explained:

"There is no social force in the small town to restrain (the fat woman). I think of it as a cultural thing. There is no tradition of chic. The city woman responds to social pressures that she look well. The small-town woman doesn't care.

The Lapeer letterwriter, who signed himself "Mac," would certainly agree with the Corydon doctor. Mac decided Lapeer should be the fat capital while watching the women waddle by the local Kmart.

"About nine out of 10 who walked by were overweight - and some of them not just a few pounds, either," Mac said. "At least 20 f saw could lose 50 pounds and still lap over both edges of an ordinary chair."

Mac's assessment of Lapeer's fatties didn't surprise me. I lived there 25 years and heard similar opinions many times.

In fact, my oldest son-in-law went shopping at the same Kmart while visiting in Lapeer several years ago and he still talks about the amazing surplus of female fat he encountered there.

If he tried, perhaps Dr. Islam could narrow the social phenomenon that is worrying him. Could it be that more fat small-town women shop in Kmarts than in Sears stores? Is there less tradition of chic among the shoppers in a Kmart than in an A&P?

The doctor has a right to be concerned. It's his business. It is unhealthy to be grossly overweight. Everyone knows Stan Laurel lived longer than Oliver Hardy. Small-town fat women shouldn't be offended by Dr. Islam's diagnosis. He has their best interest at heart.

But what about Mac?

On TV recently, I saw a report from a nationwide convention of very fat women. They are sick of people laughing or sneering at them, and discriminating against them. They would tell Mac if he doesn't like the view at the Kmart, he should shop somewhere else or risk a severe case of squash.

These organized fat women claim they like being huge. I don't believe them. I'm sure they'd rather be slim but, for whatever reason, don't have the willpower to stop eating so much. But I'm not mad at them.

I don't want very fat women shot for clogging the aisles at the Kmart. I want them to receive help from Dr. Islam, not cruelty from a Mac. Fat people aren't criminals, and a blubbery thigh is no protection against a cruel jibe.

As for Dr. Islam's theory that small towns contain more fat women, you can't prove it by me. Here in the big city, the percentage of women who could have Goodyear stamped on their sides doesn't appear any lower than in several small towns where I used to live. Of course, maybe the big-city fatties moved there from small towns in search of football games to hover over.

Concerning Mac's suggestion that my old hometown should be designated the fat capital of the Midwest, I have nothing to say. I still have relatives and friends being held hostage there.

...Art Saworski

Art Saworski is director of the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging, which provides many services to senior citizens in the county. This week the Courier talks with him about the commission.

COURIER: How long has the Commission on Aging been operating?

SAWORSKI: Since the summer of 1974.

COURIER: Who are the members of the commission, and what do they do?

SAWORSKI: They are appointed by the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners and are a policy-making group. I report to them. Those serving at the present time are Theora Kotowich of East Jordan, chairman; Florence Stucker of East Jordan, secretary; Ruth Behrens of Boyne City, past chairman; Raymond Giffin of Charlevoix; Hal Cunningham of Charlevoix, Vern Whiteford of East Jordan; Mildred Ilathke of East Jordan; and Eleanore Squire of Boyne City. There is an opening for someone to represent the Boyne Falls area. Marvin Loding represents the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

COURIER: Tell us about your nutrition program.

SAWORSKI: We serve nutritionally balanced meals to senior citizens throughout the county – five days a week in East Jordan, three days a week in Charlevoix, four days a week in Boyne City, and one day a week in Boyne Falls.

COURIER: And the transportation program.

SAWORSKI: We have two busses, one equipped with a lift, for use by elderly and handicapped people.

COURIER: What goes on at the county Senior Center in East Jordan?

SAWORSKI: We provide several services there -- health related, counseling, educational, cultural, and information referral services. We have a kitchen there to cook the meals for Boyne City and East Jordan, and fur Charlevoix and Boyne Falls when needed. The center is also the dispatcher for the transportation program. Dorothy Pelton is the director.

COURIER: Aren't you going to have another center in Buyne City?

SAWORSKI: Yes. It will be a drop-in center, open five days a week with a full time staff person.

COURIER: You have some in-home services, too, don't you?

SAWORSKI: Yes. Under our homemaker chore services program we provide incidental help to the handicapped and shut-ins in their homes.

COURIER: What about health services?

SAWORSKI: We have some health screening and personal care services which are provided on a contractual basis with the health department.

COURIER: Any other services?

SAWORSKI: The senior identification program. We prepare ID cards for senior citizens which they can use for age identification. Many of them don't have driver's licenses.

COURIER: What kind of a budget do you have?

SAWORSKI: For the fiscal year 1978-1979 it amounts to $158,719. It breaks down like this: nutrition, $48,339; transportation, $6,630, plus $7,500 for the elderly and handicapped bus and $2,400 for the other bus; health screening, $5,706; administration, $3,903; homemaker services, $5,862; senior center in East Jordan, $21,500; senior center in Boyne City, $4,952; personal care, $5,362; County Commission on Aging, $5,455; East Jordan rent, $600; senior equipment, $10,810; and CETA, $30,000.

COURIER: Where does all this money come from?

SAWORSKI: From federal, state, and local funds and contributions and in-kind donations. The county pays the $5,455 for the commission on aging and the $600 for East Jordan rent.

COURIER: How many meals do you serve during the month?

SAWORSKI: We average 2,223 and expect to serve about 30,000 this year. About 350 meals a month are delivered to shut-ins by volunteers. The cost averages 86 cents a meal for raw materials.

COURIER: How many people trips do you make during the month?

SAWORSKI: About 870, and estimate 10,500 for the year.

COURIER: It must take a lot of people to run the programs.

SAWORSKI: It does. We have the cooks for the nutrition program as well as the meal site coordinators. The coordinators work three hours a meal day. They set tables, keep records, serve the meals, and arrange for speakers and other supportive services. The cooks are Phyllis Legato and Pearl Rennet and Jennie Davis. The coordinators are Louise Pop and Rose Waffle in Charlevoix, Alice Munson in Boyne City, Ruth Moore in East Jordan, and Eva Gillespie in Boyne Falls. We have two bus drivers, Gene Beer and Ken Prevost. Al Boughton is a part time maintenance man and also acts as a substitute bus driver.

COURIER: Are any of these CETA employees?

SAWORSKI: The two bus drivers are. We probably won't be able to keep them after the end of September unless we can get funding from another source.

COURIER: What will happen to the transportation program if you can't?

SAWORSKI: We may have to go to "Dial a Ride". Under the transportation package that was passed in November, the state would pay 100 percent for the third year, and 50 percent for the 4th year. Some units of government area already operating bus programs ou voted millage, about one-quarter of a mill. We can also foresee programs in 1979-1980 for the nutrition program because of a cut in Michigan's share of funds from $11.2 million to $9 million.

CHIP to sponsor two workshops in March

CHIP Counseling Center in Charlevoix will be sponsoring two workshops in early March.

A parenting workshop, held on two evenings, will be conducted March 13 and 20. A couples communication workshop, consisting of four evening sessions, will be held March 15, 22, 29 and April 5.

The parenting workshop, directed by CHIP Center counselor Terry Smith will be held at the first State Bank of Charlevoix from 7 to 10 p.m. Participants will be able to attend both sessions for a fee of $15 per person or $25 per couple.

The couples communication workshop will be held at the First State Bank of Charlevoix from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m., all four nights. The fee for these four sessions is $55 a couple, which includes the cost of books and other materials.

The workshops are open to everyone in the area.

One of the major themes of the parenting workshop will be the question of parental authority, who should exercise it, and how it should be applied, according to Smith.

Smith speaks of developing a "master plan" for parenting, the goal of which is "training a child for maturity and independence."

The couples communication workshops will focus on improving individuals' ability to communicate with each other in marriage.

"These workshops are not to be seen as therapy," CHIP Director Oren Schroeder explained, "But as enrichment for people who want to improve and bolster their marriages. A major cause of breakdown in a marriage is poor communication, which is why we have chosen this as a focus for the workshop," the counselor concluded.

The workshops are informal, yet structured. Both counselors explained that the participants will play a major role in the direction of the sessions.

In the couples workshop, Schroeder explained, participants will become involved in exercises that will help them develop more self-awareness and become more attuned to how they communicate with their spouses.

"We will work on developing better communication skills and better listening skills," Schroeder explained.

Schroeder said some reading material will be discussed and concepts will be presented in seminar type discussions.

Smith, speaking about the parenting workshop, said that communication, too, will be a major theme.

"We will also discuss the stresses involved in being a parent. We will make brief profiles of a typical week and attempt to identify stress points and how to eliminate them."

Smith said that he hopes to help parents learn how to take a rational approach to situations which are often highly charged emotional times between parents and children.

Both workshops are aprt of CHIP Center's program of Preventative Mental Health, bringing to the public the benefits of consulting with professional counselors before problems reach serious proportions.

The deadline for registering for the March workshops is Friday, March 9. To register call CHIP Center, 547-6551.

Club to present hog, lamb data

The Charlevoix County 4-H Market Livestock Clubs will be presenting slides and information on raising lambs and hogs. The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 7, at the Royne City High School.

The livestock clubs, whose members raise steers for sale at the Emmet County Fair, are branching out to hogs and lambs this year. It is hoped that the new projects will attract new members who do not have the facilities nor the physical strength to handle a 1200 pound steer.

The program will show youngsters and parents how to care for lambs and hogs, and how they are judged. Booklets will also be available for youngsters wishing to join the project. It is expected that the actual project will begin around May 1.

The market livestock project is a cooperative effort of the Charlevoix and Emmet County 4-H & F.F.A. clubs. It is open to all youngsters in Charlevoix & Emmet counties. For further information, call Bob Bellairs, 4-H program assistant.

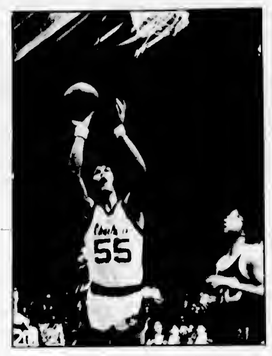
Rayders have aspirations for third place in M-HSC



Ken Otmanowski

Coach Dave Moyer's Charlevoix Rayders will be playing for third place in the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference Tuesday when Rogers City comes to town.

Charlevoix is 7-6 in conference play while Rogers City sports a 6-6 record. A Charlevoix win would guarantee the Rayders of a third place tie in the conference with either Petoskey or Cheboygan. These two teams collide Tuesday.

The Rayders made it all possible with an impressive, 68-54 triumph over Petoskey Friday night.

Charlevoix led from start to finish in whipping Petoskey for the second time this season.

Senior Pat Schmidt put on a fine shooting exhibition in the contest by scoring 29 points. Guard Kevin Kratt tallied 16 points and center Ken Otmanowski had 13.

Otmanowski and Bob Plumm were terrors on the boards for Charlevoix. Plumm garnered 18 rebounds and Otmanowski 10 as Charlevoix out-rebounded Petoskey, 42-23.

Moyer, obviously, was pleased with his team's play.

A win over Rogers City is paramount for third place finish

"I thought we played real well," he said. "We got a lot out of our big men.

"We played good defense, but the offense still worries me. When we're patient we play OK, but when we get too greedy or hungry we take some crazy shots."

Despite some "crazy shots," Charlevoix still hit 51 percent from the floor. Petoskey, meanwhile, hit only 33 percent.

"It was just the opposite at Harbor Springs," said Moyer, referring to Tuesday's 75-55 loss to the Rams.

In that game both teams put up the ball 72 times. The difference was Harbor made 34 and Charlevoix made 23.

The Rams jumped out to a 22-11 first quarter lead and it was downhill the rest of the way for Charlevoix. Schmidt was virtually the entire offense. He scored 36 points. No other Rayder scored more than four points.

After Tuesday night's battle with Rogers City, Charlevoix will conclude the season at home against Onaway. The Rayders will then open district tournament play on Monday at Onaway against the host Cardinals. If Charlevoix should win that contest, they would play East Jordan on Wednesday. The winner would meet the winner of the Boyne City-Rogers City game in the final.

Overall, the Rayders are 11-7. Charlevoix trails Gaylord and St. Ignace in the standings. Gaylord has already finished conference play. The Vikings ended up with an 11-3 record. Saint Ignace is 10-3 and can clinch a tie for the title with a win over Grayling Tuesday. Grayling has yet to win a conference game.

Fishback & Natkin and John Deere won first round playoff games in the Charlevoix Recreation B League last week.

Fishback & Natkin won a thriller over Charlevoix County State Bank, 58-57. The score was tied, 14-14, after the first quarter. Charlevoix County State Bank moved ahead, 31-29, at half and ,47-46, after three quarters before Fishback & Natkin rallied for the win.

Dave Storm had 16 points to pace the winners while Bill Snill added 13 and Jim Olenziak 12. For Charlevoix County State Bank, Jerry Skippergosh canned 16 points and Steve Martinus chipped in with 12.

The second game of the night was just as close as the first one with John Deere pulling out a 54-50 triumph over Kit Carson. The game seesawed back and forth as John Deere trailed, 9-6, after the first quarter, then led, 22-21, at half and then fell behind again, 32-27, after three quarters.

Paul Collins had 27 points and Conrad Klooster 10 for the winners while Butch Klooster had 23 points and Tim Elenbaas 12 for the losers.

The best two-out-of-three series continues on Monday.

In the A league last week, Depot Restaurant beat Site Planning, 84-79. Al Looze had 27 points, Ralph Bedford 14 and Tim Elzinga 13 for the winners, who trailed virtually the entire first half. Kevin Griffin's 29 points led Site Planning. Paul Osterberg added 16 points and Jerry Skippergosh 13 for the losers.

Townhouse upended Swanson's, 76-63. Townhouse had a one point lead at half, 30-29, before outscoring Swanson's, 20-12, in the third quarter. Steve Dunkelberg scored 33 points for the winners while teammates Rick Lesley, Dan McKenzie and Ike Boss added 14, 13 and 10 points, respectively. Bruce Meggison paced Swanson's with 20 points while Vince Left and Dave Moyer contributed 12 points apiece.

Century 21 scored a forfeit win over F.B. Taylor Inc.

Whitley, Golovich qualify for state finals in Lansing

Charlevoix wrestlers Dave Golovich and Dennis Whitley qualified for the state wrestling tournament with impressive showings in regional competition at Lakeview Saturday.

The senior co-captains will participate in the state finals at Lansing Eastern High School Friday and Saturday, March 2 and 3.

Whitley finished second in the 191 pound weight class.He was the only fourth seeded wrestler in the tournament to beat the top seed, beating Tim Green of Lakeview on a 4-1 decision. Whitley also beat Mark Pomeranke of Onaway by score of 6-2 before bowing to Bruce Larson of Mason County Central, 6-2.

Golovich, Charlevoix's other four year letterman, won his first match by stopping Brad Charnley of Lakeview. Golovich then lost to Steve Gross of Shepherd by default. He returned to claim third place in the 132 pound weight class by defeating Rich Childs of Benzie Central and Charnley in a rematch.

Ken Wojan, a sophomore, also participated in the regional. Wojan scored one victory in the tournament that coming over Fred Garza of St. Louis, 15-4.

"Ken has been the most improved wrestler on our team," said Coach Norm Probert.

Wojan ended his season with a 26-17 record. He beat seven wrestlers - whom he lost to earlier in the season - in rematches, including Garza who beat Wojan in the Petoskey Invitational.

As a team, Charlevoix placed 13th in the regional. Mason County Central won the Class C regional title.

This marks the eighth straight year that Probert has sent at least two wrestlers to the state finals. In fact, since he started coaching in 1961, Probert has always had at least two wrestlers make the state finals.

Fifty-two wrestlers participated in the tournament. Golovich, Whitley and Wojan placed in the top four in their respectvie weight divisions. In the district tournament held in Charlevoix to qualify for the regional. Golovich was second, Wojan third and Whitley fourth in the district.

Masons trim lead

The Odd Fellows' lead in the annual Odd Fellows-Masons cribbage tournament was trimmed even more last week at the conclusion of eight nights of play as the Masons won by 137 points. This cut the Odd Fellows lead to a slim 368 points, according to Sims Baker, tournament secretary.

Baker said that this is the closest tournament since 1975 when the Masons won by 424 points.

Mike Reinhart posted the highest score for the evening with 950 points. Tim Bergmann had 932 for the Odd Fellows.

Seven and one-half tables were in play.

This week's play will be at the American Legion post home.

JV's drop two games

The Charlevoix Rayder JV basketball team suffered losses to Harbor Springs and Petoskey last week.

The Rayders lost to Harbor Springs, 54-45. Charlevoix led most of the first half and carried a 26-25 lead into the lockeroom at halftime. However, Harbor Springs came alive in the second half to claim the win.

Jeff Drury had 16 points and Jim Buchanan 10 to lead the Rayder attack.

Against Petoskey, it was the same story. Charlevoix led at halftime only to see the lead evaporate and disappear in the second half. Petoskey wiped out a 30-24 halftime deficit and went on to post a 73-56 triumph.

Mike Loper had 21 points to pace the Charlevoix attack.

Frosh finish 10-4

Charlevoix's freshman basketball team ended the season on a big note last week with wins over Harbor Springs and Petoskey.

The Rayders beat Harbor Springs, 60-45. Charlevoix bolted out to a commanding 27-1 lead after the first quarter. Dave Buday had 18 points and Mike Schmidt 15 for Charlevoix.

The Rayders beat Petoskey, 57-55. The game was tight all the way with Charlevoix leading by just two points going into the final eight minutes of play.

Buday had 26 points to lead all scorers while teammate Scott Kelly added 18 for Charlevoix.

MICHIGAN BELL CONSUMER TIPS

Your children could save a life, with a little help from you and your telephone.

If you have children at home, would they know who to call in case of a fire, accident or sudden illness? Be sure you have listed near your phone the numbers of your doctor, hospital, poison control, police, fire department and other emergency numbers. Show your children how to find those numbers, how to dial them (if they don't already know), how to call the operator, let them know 911 can be dialed for fire, medical or police help in your area. Write down your home address near these numbers, too, so your children or your baby-sitter can give it to people who need to find your home in a hurry. (But, for safety's sake, you should instruct them not to give your address or other information to strangers on the phone.) Your telephone can be a lifesaving help in an emergency. Teach your children how to use it for their protection and yours.

Road work planned

Hodgkiss & Dounia of Petoskey were low bidders on two road surfacing projects in Charlevoix County, the Michigan Department of Transportation has announced.

One project calls for the resurfacing, with addition of bituminous shoulders, on 4.5 miles of M-75 from west to US-131, west of Boyne City, work to be completed by July. The bid was $298,893.

The other project calls for resurfacing, with addition of bituminous shoulders, at three locations: on US-131 in Boyne Falls south of the south intersection with M-75, north two miles to the north county line; and on M-75 from the south junction with US-131, northwesterly three-tenths of a mile; work to be completed by August. The bid was $253,971.

OPERATING Room Supervisor Audrey Egler, RN, shows Charlevoix Area Hospital's new orthopedic surgical table, with its various adjustable parts, which enable surgeons to set fractures and apply casts with a high degree of efficiency.

Charlevoix Hospital gets surgical table

The recent acquisition of a new orthopedic surgical table provides Charlevoix Area Hospital with an increased ability to handle the areas' orthopedic problems, according to one of the two staff orthopedic surgeons.

The new operating table, a CHICK orthopedic surgical table, "can handle most orthopedic or trauma cases that occur," this physician explained.

"It rounds out our abilities, here at Charlevoix Area Hospital," he said.

The table, which resembles a regular operating table, has innumerable attachments which permit a surgeon to better hold a patient in position while he repairs fractures, realigns bones and applies casts.

Richard Krueger, Charlevoix Area Hospital administrator, explained that the surgical table which the new one replaced had many of the same capabilities, but that the new table is specifically designed for orthopedic surgical work.

One of the most crucial factors in orthopedic surgery, hospital administrator Krueger pointed out, is maintaining the proper tension on the broken limb, so that the bones can be put back in place and held there while the surgeons work.

The new table at Charlevoix Area Hospital can be finely adjusted to maintain the proper amount of tension.

The operating room staff at Charlevoix Area Hospital also pointed out that because the new table is very efficient, the amount of time a patient must spend under anesthesia can be reduced.

The surgeon added that purchasing the table had been economically wise, "because the day we took delivery the cost of that same table rose by $1,000."

High fuel bills can be thing of past, agency says

High fuel costs can be reduced and cold drafty rooms could be a thing of the past for low-income families and individuals, living in this area, by taking advantage of Northwest Michigan Human Services Agency's Energy Conservation and Weatherization Program.

NMHSA operates this program in the 10 counties of Antrim, Benzie, Charlevoix, Emmet, Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Leelanau, Missaukee, Roscommon, and Wexford.

Homes will be insulated, broken windows replaced, air infiltration corrected, and when possible, storm windows and doors will be installed. Also, in some cases, trailer skirting will be installed. The limit to be spent per home is $350.00 with the most urgent problems corrected first. There is no charge to the homeowner for materials or labor.

In order to qualify for this service, the home must be owner-occupied and the family income cannot exceed $7925 for the first person and $1275 for each additional family member. Recipients of SSI and ADC automatically qualify. Income guidelines for farm families are slightly less. For applications for this service, contact your local Department of Social Services, the Lundgren Building, Cadillac; the NMHSA Northern Sector Office, 221W Mitchell Street, Petoskey; or Northwest Michigan Human Services Agency, 1102 Cass Street, Traverse City.

FAITH HONORS THE WISDOM AND EXPERIENCE OF AGE

In our current misguided era where young is beautiful, the older segment of our population is largely relegated to the background of our society. There are many factors to blame for this tragic situation, including its wide range of acceptance which prematurely condemns the physically and mentally sound along with the infirm, and thereby attaches the stigma of outworn usefulness to all. When this is combined with the natural self-importance of today's youth, little respect or companionship exists between children and their grandparents, to the detriment of both. Your Church will teach you to appreciate tha wisdom of the old, referred to throughout the Bible. Honor your grandparents and listen to them. You may even find them fascinating, if you give them a chance.

"This is he, that was in the church in the wilderness." --Acts 7:38

Michael Gibbons, City Attorney, stated that, in his opinion, the application does not qualify as it was not filed within the allowable time limit from date of completion of the facility.

Moved by Councilman Timms and supported by Councilman Muma to table any action regarding the Charlevoix Products request for a tax concession for a period of two weeks in order to allow the City Attorney time to research the validity of the application. Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Councilmen Timms, Plumm, Wood, Muma, and Porter. Nays: None. Absent: Councilman Bellows.

Council discussed a letter directed to the City Manager by Melvyn D. Remus of the Army Corps of Engineers. Mr. Remus stated that, due to the City's refusal to assume the role of local project sponsor of the Corps proposed project to deepen the channel, all work on the project has been suspended. Mr. Remus further stated that reactivation of the project is totally dependent upon the identification of such a sponsor.

Moved by Councilman Timms and supported by Councilmen Porter to receive and file the letter from Melvyn D. Remus of the Army Corps of Engineers dated February 9, 1979 stating the Corps' current position on their proposed project for deepening the channel. Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Councilmen Timms, Plumm, Wood, Muma, and Porter. Nays: None. Absent: Councilman Bellows.

Marian LaBlance, music instructor at the school, and Katy Bourdon, student teacher, are directing the show.

Elementary students to put on show

Every student in the Charlevoix Elementary School will have an opportunity to show off his or her acting ability in the upcoming product of "Kids"

Scheduled for Wednesday, March 7, and Thursday, March 8, the show is a take-off on Shirley Temple and The Little Rascals. It will be replete with music, dancing, and skits.

The girls will all be dressed in Shirley Temple costumes and the boys will wear ragtag garments similar to those of "Alfalfa", "Buckwheat", and "Spanky".

There should be much toe-tapping as the children present "On the Good Ship Lollipop", "At the Codfish Ball", "Animal Crackers", "Hello, My Baby", "Baby Face", and other favorite songs of years gone by.

The public is invited to attend either of the performances. Wednesday's show will be held at 9:30 in the morning at the high school gym, and Thursday's show will be held at 7:30 in the evening at the same place.

Debbie Kimble

Ceramic Place opens on US-31

Dave Kimble walked over to a shelf and pointed to a nativity set done in greenware.

"When finished, I've seen this sell for as much as $200 to $250," he said.

Dave and his wife, Debbie, who own The Ceramic Place on U.S.-31 South, sell the nativity set in greenware for under $30. Primarily, all that separates greenware from a finished ceramic product is a paint job and one last firing in the kiln.

And painting greenware is not all that hard, the Kimbles say.

In fact, the Kimbles will show you how. Weekday evenings (Monday-Thursday) from 6:30 p.m. until 9 p.m. the Kimbles hold class. It's open to anyone over 10 years of age. The cost is $1 per lesson plus materials. All materials can be purchased at The Ceramic Place. As an added incentive, the Kimbles offer a free mug in greenware for those who sign up for an adult evening class.

On Saturday, the Kimbles have children's classes. A beginners class is offered from 11 a.m. until noon for children five and older. The class is constantly supervised and children are taught the basics in ceramics. The cost is $3 and that includes the class fee, tools, paints and greenware. A more advanced class is offered at the same time for those between 10 and 17 years of age. This class costs 50 cents plus materials.

In the afternoon from 1 p.m. until 4 p.m., additional children and adult classes are scheduled.

So far, the classes have proved to be quite successful. But because of a limited number of seats, capacity for each class is held to 16. The Kimbles stress that anyone who is interested in attending a children's class should make a reservation at least two days in advance.

"You can come in and pick out any of the designs you want and we'll teach you the techniques," Dave said. "It's quite easy, really. Anyone can do it."

The Ceramics Place carries a wide variety of designs in greenware – plates, ash trays, candle holders, chess sets, planters, lamps, statues, and of course, mugs. The Jimmy Carter smiling peanut mug is a top seller.

The Kimbles became interested in opening a ceramic business when Gail's Ceramics (which was in the same building the Kimbles are now in) closed.

"If you wanted to do ceramics you had to go to either Traverse City or Harbor Springs," Debbie said. "I got tired of the travel."

And it just so happened Dave had visions of some type of business venture. The Ceramic Place, which opened Dec. 2, was the result.

The Kimbles started from scratch. Greenware was purchased by the truckload. Paints, tools and an automatic kiln were acquired. And Dave, a carpenter by trade, built tables for the classes and shelves to display the products.

Besides selling greenware, The Ceramic Place will also sell the finished product. But, primarily, it is a place where people can learn about ceramics and take home a piece that they made.

"I think people really like the idea of taking home something they can use, like mugs and plates," said Debbie.

If there is a greenware item the Kimbles do not have, they will order it.

In addition, all paintings by Marion Kimble are on sale at The Ceramic Place. Marion, who lives near Ironton, took up painting while living in the Upper Peninsula. Her paintings depict the Upper Peninsula's colorful outdoor scenery. Marion is Dave's mother.

Area youngsters learn about art

"When I grow up, I want to be an artist!" But just how does an artist make a living? What kinds of work can an artist do?

School children across Emmet and Charlevoix counties have been gaining insight to the world of art and its creators through a unique artists-in-the-schools program made possible by The Crooked Tree Arts Council with the aid of a grant from Michigan Council for the Arts, a state funding source.

Recently, children from The Headstart program visited the country studio of potter Laurie Lesser Murray on Pinckerry Road in Bayshore, and found out that if you're an artist you can make whimsical animals and useful items magically appear from lumps of clay.

In fact, the children found out they could do it themselves with the right tools and a little direction.

Much to their delight, they were allowed to experiment with the clay and make animals, fish, trains and cars to take home.

Part of the goal of the arts council program is to provide artistic enrichment for children who don't otherwise have access to art classes, museums, or other creative outlets.

This fits in well with The Headstart program, whose aim is to provide educational enrichment to children whose families meet an income requirement.

Both Boyne City and Petoskey have Headstart classes for children that encompass a wide variety of learning experiences. Nancy Joneson, Petoskey Headstart director, has more information at 347-5431 about Headstart openings for pre-schoolers.

The Crooked Tree Arts Council, meanwhile, is winding up its successful artists-in-the-schools series after bringing into classrooms, from across the two county area, a number of local working artists to demonstrate jewelry, pottery, painting, and commercial art techniques.

Artists also talked to the students about art careers, opportunities, and the hardships and rewards that come from a career relying on your own creativity.

The Crooked Tree Arts Council collaborated on the arts-in-education grant with The Char-Em School District to also produce four filmstrips of the work of local artists to use in area school districts as well as across the state.

Artists featured in the filmstrips will be Todd Warner, Charlevoix potter; Linda and Jerry Beers Aydlott, jewelry and metalsmithing from East Jordan; Sue and Russell Bolt, Charlevoix potters and printmakers; and Doug Melvin, painter and instructor at Nurth Central Michigan College, Petoskey.

The films will be on file at Char-Em and will be accompanied by a finished work of art produced by each artist for classroom display.

Open house at Interlochen

INTERLOCHEN -- Interested students and their parents are invited to attend an open house at Interlochen Arts Academy, Saturday, March 10.

Visitors will be able to sit in on drama and creative writing classes, since Academy students attend classes on a Tuesday through Saturday schedule, said Doug Fair, Academy admissions coordinator.

Activities scheduled during the open house include a workshop in acting, stagecraft class, open class in acting and a play-writing class. Creative writing faculty members will be available to talk with students about their writing and an assortment of literature courses will be open to visitors, Fair said.

A free lunch will be served and visitors will be able to attend a performance of Christopher Fry's comedy "The Lady's Not for Burning," at no charge. The play will be at 8 p.m. in Grunow Theatre on the Interlochen campus.

8th graders beat St. Ignatius

Charlevoix's eighth grade basketball team won its opening game in the Cheboygan Junior High Tournament last week.

The Rayders licked Rogers City St. Ignatius, 66-44. Jon Supernaw had 13 points, Fred Mieike 12 and Craig Klooster 11 for Charlevoix. The Rayders play Cheboygan Catholic on Wednesday.

Earlier in the week, Charlevoix beat Central Lake, 41-31. Klooster scored 16 points to pace the attack.

The seventh graders are also participating in the Cheboygan tournament. The Rayders lost to Rogers City St. Ignatius, 30-20.

Confectioner's delight

Patent No. 174,162, issued Feb. 29, 1676, was a confectioner's delight. It was a stickpin which used a sugary heart as decoration. When the wearer was finished with the clothes accessory, the stickpin should be eaten, although it might be a bit dirty. No examples are known to exist of the sticky stick-pin, but a stroll through the Decorative Arts Galleries of Henry Ford Museum, Dearborn, Mich., offers visitors a chance to peruse a wealth of early decorative jewelry, made out of everything from garnets to human hair.

Petoskey

Board seeks new middle school

The Petoskey Board of Education will seek public approval to build a new middle school on property adjacent to the high school.

The board is expected to put a bond question to the public in the spring. It is expected to cost $5.45 million.

A task force had recommended to the board that it either build a new middle school or convert Sheridan Elementary into a middle school.

The present middle school is 65-years-old and, according to an architect's study, it would cost $4.3 million to renovate the deteriorating building.

Earlier, a petition bearing 621 signatures was presented to the board asking that the board investigate putting sixth graders into the elementary schools and putting seventh and eighth graders together in an existing school.

Area realtors attend conference

Four members of the Antrim-Charlevoix Board of Realtors attended the Sixth Annual Legislative Conference and Reception sponsored by the Michigan Association of Realtors.

The event took place Feb. 13 at Long's Banquet and Conference Center in Lansing.

About 400 realtors and realtor-associates participated in seminars having to do with political action, legislative and political affairs committees.

Highlights of the conference was the evening reception at which nearly 100 state legislators were in attendance. 103rd District Representative Ralph Ostling (pictured above) and 106th District Representative Steve Andrews were two area legislators attending. The Michigan Association of Realtors numbers some 25,000 members and comprises the third largest political action committee in the state. Basic credos of realtors are the right of private property ownership and the preservation of the free enterprise system.

Pellston

Bricker, Croff survive recall

Mayor Randolph Bricker and Cousciliman Richard Croff Sr. survived a recall election Monday.

Fifty-six percent of the registered voters in the village turned out for the election, the second highest turnout in Pellston's history.

Bricker won support by a 104-74 margin while Croff's margin of victory was 94-82.

The recall election was initiated when the two officials were accused of misappropriating furniture donated during a charitable drive for the Lena Wabinimkee family, whose home was destroyed by fire in June.

The two officials plead "no contest" to reduced charges of larceny under $100 in November.

Paul Smarks dies

Boyne City

TOM offers $16,000 reward

The Board of Directors and management of Top O' Michigan Rural Electric Company are concerned over the rampant vandalism perpetrated against the company during the past several months.

The intensity of the vandalism increased last week as 18 separate pieces of electrical apparatus were riddled with bullets. During the past two months there have been 42 separate incidents of known vandalism which have resulted in damage to equipment valued at over $100,000. Previously the company had experienced only an occasional problem. In fact, company records show no incidents of vandalism during the two-year period prior to December, 1978.

The cost of vandalism is borne by the Top O' Michigan members and while this is of a major concern the threat to the safety and well-being of those members is even more paramount, officials say.

The Board of Directors and management have pledged to contribute an additional $6000 of their own money to the $10,000 reward already being offered. They appeal to those people who have knowledge regarding these violent acts to come foward and assist law enforcement personnel who are working to solve this matter. Anyone who has information of this type will be allowed to remain anonymous.

The Top O' Michigan Rural Elegtric Company, its Board of Directors and management will pay up to $10,000 reward to anyone furnishing information leading to the arrest and conviction on a felony charge of anyone tampering with, vandalizing, or destroying company property or the property of persons working for the company. If more than one person is involved in the claim for the reward the company reserves the right to determine the amount given to each claimant.

Anyone having such information should call collect to Detective Sergeant Don Chappel, Michigan State Police District Headquarters in Traverse City, Michigan at 616-946-0550.

1978-79 winter cold and snowy

Wednesday, Jan. 3- Students were to return to school today following holiday recess, but 10 inches of snow fell and school was cancelled.

Saturday, Feb. 17- Motorists were in for a surprise this morning when cars failed to start as the temperature dropped to 36 degrees below zero.

Charlevoix has not escaped the cold and snowy clutches of Old Man Winter. Take, the months of January and February, for example.

January was snowy. It snowed 28 out of 31 days. Over 63 inches of snow fell.

February was cold. The mercury dropped to zero or below 20 out of 28 days. On a typical February day, the temperature ranged from a high of 20 to a low of -6.

As of March 1, Charlevoix has received 139 inches of snow, the most since records have been kept at the Charlevoix Sewage Disposal Plant. The previous record of 138.5 inches was set just two winter's ago. Last winter Charlevoix received a mere 88.5 inches - and over 15 inches of that total fell in one day.

The 10 inch flurry on Jan. 3 is the most Charlevoix has received in one day this winter. Twice, six inches has fallen in a 24 hour period - Feb. 4 and Feb. 7.

The 36 degrees below zero, registered on Feb. 16 and Feb. 17, rates as the coldest days of the winter. On Feb. 8 and Feb. 9, the temperature dropped to -24.

Charlevoix Township Board to consider Medusa request

The Charlevoix Township Board will meet Monday night to consider a request from Medusa to rezone approximately 230 acres of land from scenic - reserve and agricultural to industrial.

The Charlevoix Township Zoning Board and the Charlevoix County Planning Commission have recommended to the board that it be approved.

Medusa offieials have indicated that if rezoning is granted tests will be taken to determine how much limestone and shale is on the land. If company offieials believe there is sufficient limestone and shale on the land, Medusa could apply for a use permit and quarry it.

The land is bordered by state, (Bells Bay Park) private and more Medusa property.

Elbert Kaiser, former plant manager, said the company does not intend to use the property for plant expansion.

"Any expansion of the plant will be on the point adjacent to the plant now," he said. It would not be economically feasible (to expand on the land up for rezoning)."

"We do know the land (up for rezoning) has some limestone and shale in it," said John Campbell, site planner for Medusa, "but we don't know the quantity or quality of it."

According to Dorothy Lewand, of the township zoning board, the land is not suitable for agriculture, its present zoning. She said the land should be put to its best use, and since "the land is adjacent to industrial property and is owned by an industrial plant" it should be rezoned.

There is opposition to the proposed rezoning. Some residents who live near the property say they oppose having the land quarried. The 230 acres the company is seeking to get rezoned also borders Norwood Township, where the company owns more land. Some residents believe that if this land is rezoned that Medusa will seek to get its property in Norwood Township rezoned.

Kaiser, however, said the company has no intent at this time to rezone its property in Norwood Township.

The land that is being considered for rezoning is connected to Medusa's present operating site by a stretch of land that was obtained about five years ago from the state. In return for the approximate 20 acres, Medusa gave the state a triangular piece of property (about 30 acres) that is now part of Bells Bay Park.

Council schedules public hearing for budget on March 19

The Charlevoix City Council has scheduled a public hearing for March 19 to review the proposed 1979-80 operating budget.

Council scheduled the hearing at its meeting Monday night.

The proposed budget shows total income for all funds at $2,877,003 with expense for all funds also $2,983,775.

City Manager Norman Gaffney and Comptroller Jim Brinker prepared the budget, which has already been discussed with council.

Gaffney explained that in preparing the budget the following steps were taken:

Each department head prepared his or her own budget and took an active part in it's administrative review.

Brinker reviewed and evaluated the departmental budget requests and then met with Gaffney and each department head for further review.

Brinker and Gaffney then met to trim requests to priority needs and attempt to balance the projected expenses with the available revenue.

Gaffney highlighted items in the proposed budget.

Cemetery - "A study will be made to see if burial rates are too low for the cost of service provided."

Community Promotion - $5,700 has been set aside for the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce for public relations services.

City Hall - $10,000 has been budgeted for capital improvements. Gaffney said the council chamber may be moved to the first floor.

Mt. McSauba - "The ski project at Mt. McSauba is a grand improvment, but it was expensive. To date, costs are estimated at over $35,000 and receipts at $4,000." To complete the project (snow gun and pump, groomer and miscellaneous items) Gaffney said it would cost about $15,000.

Golf Course - "Increse is very little. Carpeting, refurbishing and other repairs were accomplished at season's end. Nine hole rate increase will bring in approximately $3,200 more."

Marina - "We have various federal and state agencies assisting us in procuring grants and we have been assured of assistance (for improving docks and enlarging wharf facilities). However, we are attempting to find financial assistance also on our 50 percent contribution to the project. I am of the opinion our planning grant will be paid to 90 percent."

Local Streets - $28,000 has been budgeted for resurfacing, a "minimum amount needed to save and maintain residential streets."

Electrical Plant - "We have attempted to budget here only on real needs (roof repairs, insulation for the office, tools)."

Customer Account and Administration - "We are taking a real hard look at the possibility of the generation of power for peak hours which could save thousands of dollars. Adjacent cities have just finished a rate study and it is likely increased rates are necessary. We are awaiting a rate review by our consultants as the electric division is not producing the revenues over expense as in the past."

Sewer Lines - "We will shortly be reviewing tap-in fees, charges, etc., as this department is in deficit trouble."

Water Department - "Several (about 25) fire hydrants should be replaced. We feel it is urgent to purchase 12 this year (estimated cost $6,000). The revenue is alo low in this department and we will continue to find methods to increase our income."

Gaffney told council he did not think the city could operate on its present 10 mills. The state equalized value for the city this year is $38 million. Ten mills nets the city $380,000. Gaffney said an increase to 12 mills would bring in $456,000.

"As the city does not have the luxury of a large surplus fund as in other years it does not appear possible to operate the city on the present millage," he said. "Although transfers from the Electric Fund have been used for years to bolster the General Fund - that is not possible today.

"Therefore, it appears the question for council is: 1) Should the city keep the millage at 10 mills and presume to cut programs , services and capital budgets? 2) Should the millage be at 12 mills to maintain present services and plan for future improvements?

Need housing at festival?

"Unless you have already arranged for housing, I have been advised very little is available even now. There are families of band members who have indicated they might be interested in going to Holland to see the festival in which the band will be marching. If you will call me at 547-3882 I might be able to help you," Stutzman said in making the announcement.

The key advantage in buying land, of course, is the relatively high return that can be achieved over the long term on any sound investment in real estate. Also, by investing in real estate and making a profit on land, it is possible to get levioible tax treatments when the land is sold, since land profits are usually treated as capital gains. "Leverage" is also a benefit, for it is possible to borrow between 60 and 75 per cent of the cost of the property and thus tie up only a small amount of the investor's capital.

An experienced real estate agent is an important asset to the seller as well as the landlord. At THOMAS REAL ESTATE, 100 Pine River Lane, 547-4494 we use our knowledge and experience to get full market value for your property. Beatty fears spring gill net tussle

By PEG OHLE

Charlevoix County Prosecutor Scott Beatty is trying to do something about gill-netting by Northern Michigan Indian groups before the spring fishing season opens.

Last week he met with representatives from the Bureau of Indian Affairs, local DNR officials, and the attorney for the Bay Mills Indians in a three-fold effort, which he explained as follows:

"I wanted to tell my concerns, as a prosecutor, about possible confrontations between the Indians and other fishermen. I wanted to make known local concerns about the depletion of fish resources. I wanted to learn what Indians would be Federally recognized and what controls would be placed on them."

In short, Beatty said he was trying to get ready for what he fears will come in the spring, and what he learned at the meeting did not allay those fears.

He added that the Bureau of Indian Affairs will probably issue fishing licenses to members of the Ottawa Association in addition to the Bay Mills Indians and the Sault Band of Chippewas. Another was that the governor's agreement with the Indians had been abrogated by the Indians. The agreement had called for no gill-netting in Little Traverse Bay south of Good Hart. The reason given for the abrogation was prosecution in Antrim and Grand Traverse counties instead of leaving the problem up to tribal enforcement as called for in the governor's agreement.

Beatty added, "I wanted to find out what tools I could get from the federal officials. I didn't get any."

In the meantime, officials are hoping that a decision on Indian rights to fish with gill nets will be forthcoming soon from Judge Noel Fox in Grand Rapids. Several Indian groups are suing the DNR, claiming they have the right to fish with gill nets as set forth in treaties dating back to the 1800's.

Attending last week's meeting with Beatty were Mike Fairbanks, superintendent of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Elmer Nitzchke, solicitor general for the Bureau, Myrl Keller and Victor Patrick of the local DNR offices, and Katherine Tierney, attorney for the Bay Mills Indians.

Couples Communication Workshop to teach specific skills

CHIP Counseling Center's Couples Communication Workshop, beginning March 15, is based on a program in which more than 35,000 couples across the nation have participated.

Developed in 1968 in Minneapolis by three researchers from the University of Minnesota, Couples Communication Workshops have been recognized by several national counscling organizations for effectiveness in teaching couples skills to enrich their marriages.

Oren Schroeder, Director-Counselor at CHIP, has participated in training workshops in Minncapolis and is skilled in leading Couples Communication Workshops.

Schroeder explained that these workshops are open to any couples who wish to join.

"These workshops are far enrichment," he said. "The focus is not on personal problems, but on learning specific skills which help people to communicate."

Schroeder added, "Communication, the way two people relate to each other, is critical to a healthy marriage."

The workshops were developed to help couples cope with the constantly changing nature of their relationships, the authors of one of the books which will be used wrote.

Schroeder outlined the content of the workshops.

There will be four sessions, he said, each having specific exercises and topics for discussion. There will be texts and workbooks, as well.

The first of the workshops will focus on self-awareness.

Participants will learn that they can define themselves in terms of thought, sensations, actions, intentions and feelings. They will learn the importance of communicating their own self awareness so their partners will not make false assumptions.

Participants will practice definite ways of communicating, in non-personal settings, in each session.

The second session will focus on how to help each other express his or her own selfawareness. Four techniques for creating better understanding will be taught.

In this session participants will be moving from self-awareness to increasing awareness of others as well.

In the third session couples will examine styles of communication and how different styles effect listeners.

Different styles of speaking are used on different occasions, Schroeder observed. One style keeps communication on an impersonal level – "Nice shoes you've got", another is most frequently used to force change – "Don't talk to me like that;" another is used to analyze and explore – "I wonder why you're so quiet;" and yet another is used to demonstrate a real commitment to effective communication – "When you seriously consider what I want, I think you care a lot about me and I feel happy."

The last style, often unfamiliar, couples will learn, is one that counselors think can help two people to truly communicate with each other. The final session will focus on building and maintaining each other's self-esteem.

Self-esteem, how one feels about oneself, is conveyed through communication styles. And your self-esteem influences how another perceives and responds to you, Schroeder observed.

Schroeder said that couples will practice styles of communicating which indicate the speaker's self-esteem and his esteem for the other partner: I count, you don't; I don't count, you count; I don't count, you don't count; and I count, you count.

"When two people discount each other the result is an escalating argument," Schroeder explained.

Reflecting on the four sessions, Schroeder said, "Having gone through this will not guarantee an ideal relationship; but you will at least have the tools for better communication."

The first session will be March 15, followed by March 22, 29 and April 5. All session begin at 7:30 p.m. and close at 10:30. They will be held at the First State Bank of Charlevoix.

A fee of $55 per couple (less than $2.50 per person per hour) will cover all costs, including books and other materials.

Deadline for registration is Friday March 9. To register call CHIP Center in Charlevoix, 547-6551.

The more than 550 students in the Charlevoix Elementary school will present their annual program under the direction of Mrs. Marina LaBlance. Entitled "Kids" the program will feature all the little girls as Shirley Temples and the boys as members of the Little Rascals. Using the little rascals' clubhouse as a backdrop and the gang's dog as a prop, Mrs. LaBlance (far right) is pictured here rehearsing some of the students in Miss Helvig's class for the program to be presented at the Charlevoix High School gymnasium with a dress rehearsal at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday and the program at 7:30 p.m. Thursday...The youngsters are: front row: (left to right) Kristi Pearsall, Marlia Burke, Karen Arnold; second row: David Loder, Marci Wynkoop, Corkey Richardson, Laura Wilmot, John O'Brien, Jason Ray, Mike Knight, Mathew Figard, Katie Bourdon, student teacher, is assisting with the production. All but kindergarten students will be appearing in the program.

Parenting Workshop has openings

The Parenting Workshop to be conducted by the CHIP Counseling Center of Charlevoix on March 13 and 20 has a few openings for participants.

The two sessions will be conducted by Counselor Terry Smith, at the First State Bank of Charlevoix, from 7:00 to 10:00 p.m. on the two evenings.

Smith said that one focus of the workshop will be communication between parent and child, "a key to successful parenting."

The two sessions will approach many issues of concern to parents, including authority, discipline, how to encourage children, how to handle the emotional responsibilities of parenting, how to set limits for both parents and children, peer pressure, the relationship with multiple children, and consistancy in parenting.

"We will try to establish a different way of seeing our children," Smith observed. "We will examine whether our relationship with our children is a relationship or an autocracy."

Smith said that these and other issues will be considered on a non-personal level. Participants will practice parenting skills through role playing, and discuss different techniques with each other.

Deadline for registering for the two session workshop is Friday March 9th. A fee of $15 per person or $25 per couple will cover costs. To register call CHIP Center at 547-6551.

School to review immunization records of all pupils

Gordon Van Wieren Superintendent of Schools for the Charlevoix School District announced today that the records of all students in the Charlevoix schools will be reviewed to determine the immunization status of all pupils.

"The review of the immunization records of our students is part of a state-wide cainpaign to insure that all students attending public and non-public schools in our state have had the full series of inoculations to prevent such diseases as measles, mumps, diphtheria and polio," Van Wieren said.

"The Michigan Department of Public Health reports that nearly one-third of all measles cases in the United States last year occurred in Michigan.

"Out of a total of 26,000 cases of measles in the U.S. last year, 8,000 occurred in Michigan. This means Michigan children had a risk of disease five times greater than the national average and that many children have not been fully immunized against this childhood disease."

Van Wieren said the review of the immunization status of all students will be conducted in cooperation with the Charlevoixz County Health Department. A special clinic will be held for children who need additional vaccine doses to protect them against childhood disease.

Van Wieren said all major educational and health organizations in the state are cooperating in the program which has been initiated by the Michigan Department of Public Health and the Michigan Department of Education. State law requires all children attending public and non-public schools to be fully immunized.

Breakey elected to commission

Thomas Breakey, Sr. is the newest member of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

Breakey was elected by the Commissioners to fill the vacancy in District 8 (East Jordan) caused by the resignation of Richard McKinnon, Jr.

The new Commissioner calls himself "almost a life time resident" of East Jordsn, having lived there from 1922 to 1925, and again from 1934 to the present. He is a retired rural mail carrier and has never before held public office.

Breakey says he has no political affiliations, a fact which caused some consternation among County Board members when his named was presented to to them for ratification.

"Everything seems to be Republican or Democrat these days," Breakey told the Courier. There's not much room for Independents. I suppose I'll have to join up one of these days. I'll probably toss a coin."

Mr. and Mrs. Breakey have four children: son Tom, Jr., son Bill, daughter Patricia Lambert of Charlevoix, and daughter Debbie who "just turned 14".

Committee endorses application for region-wide jail study

Ten county commissioners, representing the 10 counties of the northwest Michigan region, were invited by the Northwest Michigan Regional Planning Commission to meet as a steering committee to review and endorse the planning commission's proposed application for federal funds to conduct a region-wide study of jail facilities and programs.

Planning commission Chairman Roy Howes of Manistee called the meeting to ensure that there are no problems with the proposal, which is scheduled for formal approval by the commission at its regular meeting on Friday.

At the conclusion of its two-hour discussion of the proposal the group voted unanimously to support the application and recommend the regional planning commission forward it to the state.

Once the commission's application is approved for funding by the Michigan Office of Criminal Justice in Lansing, a consultant will be retained to study existing deficiencies in county jails and to explore various solutions to those problems. Because all the counties are examining this situation at the same time, the consultant will be instructed to give special attention to the potential economies of two or more counties cooperating in shared facilities, programs, and personnel.

A recent federal court decision and the impending revision of the Michigan Rules for Jails and Lockups sparked the need for a re-evaluation of the county detention systems. Grand Traverse County originally proposed a feasibility study for a five-county jail. When the regional planning commission (which reviews all applications for federal assistance which originate in this region) declined to endorse the application, it was withdrawn with the understanding that the regional planning commission would act as the lead agency in applying for a 10-county study.

According to Robert Morris, the planning commission's executive director, "It is the commission's intention and expectation that this study will give each of our counties the information it needs to decide the most economical and advantageous way to bring its jail facilities into full compliance with all applieable rules".

A spring ground-breaking?

Ground-breaking for the 30-bed addition to the Grandvue Medical Care Facility will begin this spring if all goes as planned.

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners last week approved plans for the addition and authorized architect S. T. Gerganoff to advertise for bids. It is anticipated that completion will be within 12 to 16 months.

The addition will consist of rooms for 30 beds, bath facilities, a dining room, nurses' station, nourishment station, and storage facilities. It will be used as an infirmary, housing patients who need less than skilled care.

The addition will cost approximately $650,000 and remodeling of the present building will amount to an additional $71,000. The work is being financed by one mill of taxes voted in 1976 for the years 1977, 1978, and 1979.

The present Grandvue building contains 73 beds and is used entirely for skilled care patients. It is occupied to capacity and there is a long waiting list for aimissions.

Residents must protect resources at Bells Bay

Editor:

I attended the little publicized meeting of the Charlevoix Township Zoning Board on Wednesday, February 28, out of curiosity over the rezoning of some property belonging to Medusa Cement Company. I was amazed to find that the land Medusa wants rezoned is in the middle of Fisherman's Island State Park (Bells Bay).

During the meeting I found that Medusa had an open and shut case with the zoning Board in their pocket concerning the granting of a zoning change from scenic reserve and agriculture to industrial. The board showed little interest in the opinions of the people at the meeting that opposed the rezoning and appeared to have made up their minds before they came to the meeting. Within 45 minutes from the start of the meeting a vote was called and the zoning change was approved 3-0. The power of the Medusa Corporation had won an easy case and had taken the first step toward blasting a 200-plus acre quarry in the middle of Bells Bay woods.

One of the questions that I have is why do we have zoning boards? The answer is easy, but in Charlevoix Township a zoning board is a farce. Big business can do as they please. The zoning board and township board are in their pocket. When the small land owner tries to protect his property the zoning board of Charlevoix Township overrules him.

A large portion of Charlevoix Township taxes come from Medusa, but the people who make the zoning decisions live in the northern portion of Charlevoix Township. They don't have to be by the pit, noise and dust and can spend Medusa tax dollars in their northern section.

Medusa has hundreds of acres of additional property that adjoins this rezoned land to the south in Norwood Township that will undoubtedly in the future be asked to be rezoned also. If this happens the south part of Charlevoix might as well be signed over to Medusa.

Another point discovered at the meeting was there was a little publicized land swap by the Department of Natural Resources in 1975 with Medusa. An agreement that as far as I know had no public input from this community. The swap was for around 30 acres of state forest land on Bells Bay Road to Medusa for another 30 or so acres on the back portion of Medusa property in Bells Bay woods. The property which Medusa acquired borders on Bells Bay Road by the sharp 90° turn located close to the Balch residence. Before Medusa made this land swap with the DNR the property that they are now trying to get rezoned was virtually land locked and worthless to them because they had no way to get to it. At least it had nowhere the value it does now with access on Bells Bay Road. If this land swap had never been made by the D.N.R., Charlevoix wouldn't have had to put up with the potential of another 200-plus acre quarry in its neighborhood.

Several people at the meeting voiced strong approval of Medusa being permitted to rezone the property to industrial. Their reasoning being that before Medusa located in Charlevoix it was a dying town where a person couldn't make a decent living. This may be true to some extent but if Medusa is allowed to go unchallenged in its next step before the township board and is granted permission to rezone, in my opinion it will be a big step in the deterioration of what we now know as "Charlevoix the Beautiful". Fisherman's Island State Park (Bells Bay) is an area where many future generations will be able to enjoy its natural beauty if it is left the way it is now.

I also have my own selfish reasons for being against Medusa's rezoning. My property will be within one quarter mile of this rezoned land. I will not be looking forward to deteriorating property value, noise, pollution and who knows what else this rezoning may bring to my family and myself. I knew when I purchased my property and built my residence that Medusa was located where it is; but I never figured on Medusa pulling some political strings and doing a land swap with the D.N.R. which would allow them to industrialize in my back yard. The potential exists here for what I have personally seen happen in other communities where a corporation or utility is allowed to expand opposed only by the few nearby residences and are allowed to keep developing until they completely surround these residences. The people are eventually forced to sell at the price the corporation feels is just value.

The only hope that Charlevoix area people have of protecting their natural resources in Bells Bay is to voice their opinion to the Charlevoix Township Board and show up at the township meeting where the final vote will be cast in a week or so. If Medusa is allowed to start this hole, another hole cannot be far behind.

Sincerely,
Jerry L. Pahl

Pinball at the Middle School

I received a letter from Middle School Principal Vince Chew the other day – via Jennifer, my personal ambassador to the Middle School – saying that two pinball machines, a TV screen electronic game for four players and a juke box have been installed in the student lounge.

Which is OK by me. If Vince feels the kids deserve a juke box and assorted games in the student lounge, fine. That's his business, not mine; and I think he knows his business.

However, school board members already have received flak from irate parents who feel the Middle School is no place for such frivolous gimcracks. And Vince is getting a little concerned that a large bloc of parents may be against the new equipment.

But I don't think he has anything to worry about. Anyone who is past his teens will remember that the Middle School years are among the most difficult in the many stages of becoming an adult. Those are the days of wine and roses – when everything can be perfectly beautiful one minute and perfectly horrible the next. Those are the days when emotions run from the ridiculous to the sublime, between classes.

I spent nine months in Miss Blue's Sixth Grade room and only heard her say six words: "I'm going to call your mother." And she did, over and over again. My mother spent so much time at the school they made her buy a hot lunch ticket.

Seventh grade wasn't much better. The only thing I learned is that blonde girls don't like to have their pig-tails dipped in the ink wells. They also have very quick tempers when they catch you.

Things improved in Eighth Grade. The girls were suddenly very pretty, and it was fun to talk with them and joke with them. By the time I left Eighth Grade, I felt as though I had been on a three-year trip and it was nice to be home again.

That is why I say let the good times roll at the Middle School student lounge. If music and pin ball can lend a little enjoyment to those otherwise chaotic years, fine.

Vince says the machines won't cost the school any money; in fact, they'll make a little to help pay for school programs and purchase playground equipment. Great Lakes Sales Co. owns the machines and will split proceeds with the school 60-40.

The student lounge is located in the basement and is open only during the noon recess, with adult supervision. In addition to the new machines the room has ping-pong tables and such sit-down games as checkers and chess.

"All this has given the students an enjoyable break in the middle of their day and has greatly reduced the tencency for students to run downtown and purchase candy, gum, soda pop, etc., during their lunch period," Vince writes.

And I'm sure many downtown merchants will confirms that they have had problems with hordes of Middle School students running downtown in the middle of the day.

I am particularly happy that the Middle School administration realizes how important it is for kids to like their school environment and feel at home in it. If the juke box and pinball machines make kids enjoy school one little bit more, then it was worth the trouble of having it installed.

As a former teacher and a parent with kids in all three Charlevoix schools, I am constantly bedazzled by the high quality of education offered in the Charlevoix schools. If Vince Chew feels the new recreational equipment in the Middle School lounge will help make these difficult "growing up years" more enjoyable for his students, more power to him.

A marriage license application

It's coming and no one can stop it.

I'm talking about the pairing up of people who share common attributes. The division of smokers vs. non-smokers, joggers vs. non-joggers, drinkers against teetotalers, those with exact change and those without.

Now it's a college in Maine which, in the hopes of cutting fuel bills, is asking students whether they're normally cold-blooded or hot-blooded. Once the division is made, all the cold-blooded students will be placed in the heated dormitories and the hot-blooded ones can sit by an open window and perspire.

Forgive my optimism, but I think this is definitely a breakthrough in the War of Differences. The reason why we have had so much trouble with human relationships in this country is we try to force mismated people into understanding one another.

In the future, I'd like to see an application for a marriage license (circle the response that fits best) that spells it all out.

Your Opinion

Selling the area down the river

Editor:

I attended the Charlevoix Township Board meeting on February 28th and watched the while the Board members voted to change the zoning in the Bells Bay area from scenic and agricultural to industrial to suit the Crescent Stone Company's needs. The Board members had just about everyone's approval in their decision because the meeting was attended mainly by Medusa employees. There were four or five objections, but mostly everyone agreed with one North Point resident who has lived here all his life and is behind the Crescent Stone Company one hundred percent because of all the good this eompany has done for the Charlevoix area.

I, too, have lived in Charlevoix most of my life. I was very fortunate to grow up in this town. As a young girl I used to bicycle and hike through the Boulder Park area and Two-Mile Point – savoring the magnificent unblemished scenery. Back then most Charlevoixians (contrary to what many would like you to believe) enjoyed a good life and were able to afford most necessities. True, many could not have some of the luxuries, but life was good in our little village. Now that Medusa is here our economy is much better, thus enabling us to have many of the extras. As the man from North point so aptly pointed out, he can now afford three or four convertibles. My husband and I can't afford so many lovely cars (as my mud-spattered '64 Ford will attest) and he is employed by Medusa. I might add that he very much enjoys his work and is happy to be part of the Medusa family.

When we built our house in the Bells Bay area, we were well aware of the fact that the cement company was located approximately two miles away. We didn't object to them being our neighbor or my husband and I wouldn't have toiled with building our home there. I know that for many years Medusa has owned the land un which their plant exists, and I do not dispute their right to use their property to its fullest potential. The area which was rezoned, however, was just purchased in the early 70's. I never dreamed that they would obtain this land behind us with the idea of establishing a future quarry. When we built our home, the land all around us was either privately owned or State Land. Medusa bought some of the privately owned and then conveniently swapped a parcel with the State so they would have access to it from the Bells Bay Road.

We like it out here because of the spaciousness and the wild life. I am sure that all the residents along the highway also enjoy viewing many wild animals from their own windows. Everyone has always been free to wander the State land next to our house picking morels in the spring and just enjoying nature. Yes, much is being lost to our residents and visitors all in the name of progress and the almighty dollar. In my opinion, people like the man and his convertibles and the Charlevoix Township Supervisor have dollar signs for eyeballs.

Undoubtedly there will soon be a State Park at Bells Bay where you'll have to pay to view the sunset and wander the lakeshore. Next door to the State Park there will be a huge limestone quarry and dynamite blastings. Perhaps I'm just one of those people who wants to have their cake and eat it too. I like the comforts of civilization but appreciate the serenity of the woodlands and lakeshore. This has always been the beauty of our area. I imagine much of this will be lost now. Mrs. Lewand (one of the Board members) realizes that the land out here wouldn't be good for farming and feels the only other alternative is that it be zoned industrial. With a big quarry at hand and their habitat disrupted, the animals and birds will be pushed and crowded somewhere else. Perhaps this lady Board member has it in mind that the Township can provide a deer park along with the industrialized area, and everyone can go observe the animals in pens and cages.

I may be chastised for trying to talk back to "Big Business" and some will call me a naive housewife who is biting the hand that feeds her. Maybe so – but to me there is very much wrong with laws that permit unscrupulous politicians and their boards to sell our area down the river. Matters such as this (as well as proposed State Parks) should be brought to the vote of the people. Every person in Charlevoix who cares enough to keep it "The Beautiful" should be allowed to voice their opinion on what's going on in our town. Decisions of this magnitude should not be left up to panels and boards.

Sincerely,
Kaye Balch

Resident lauds Big Rock plant

Editor:

Perhaps this letter to you will let the management and employees of the Big Rock Plant know that there are people who still support nuclear power and the fine job they are doing at the facility. As an employee of the Medusa Portland Cement Co. and member of the United Cement Lime and Gypsum Workers International Union Local 480, I am well aware of how local criticism from the eltizens of the area can cause them to feel. The taxes they have participated in have made a positive contribution to the surrounding community.

If nuclear generated electricity is so harmful to Ms. Maria perhaps she should consider moving to a local where such supplied electricity is not available.

Sincere thanks,
Dennis Spence

Rezoning case should be brought to vote

Charlevoix, where were you? Medusa was there in force! The meeting was held at the Charlevoix township hall on Wednesday, Feb. 28th at the corner of Norwood & Carpenter Avenues, and I feel it was a very important one. It concerned the rezoning of 250 acres that's right, 250 acres of land adjacent to Bells Bay State Park for the purpose of industrial use - mining.

This amount of land increases Medusa's size by approximately one-third. In addition to this, Medusa also owns considerably more land adjacent to Bells Bay along the Lake Michigan shoreline. Medusa, no doubt in the future, will want to develop this land also for the purpose of mining. This involves a substantial amount of land! In the future it means more stripped land, quaries, dust in addition to employment.

What I want you people of Charlevoix to be concerned about is this: This is our town. I love it and I care very much what happens to it. What do you think about this use of our most precious possession, our land?

The Charlevoix Township Zoning Board voted to have it rezoned from scenic reserve and agricultural to industrial. Most people there were from Medusa and obviously for the rezoning. Is it better to use this land for mining, or would the land better be used for increasing the size of Bells Bay for recreational use?

No matter what your opinion is, I ask you to please attend the next Charlevoix Township meeting on Monday, March 12th at 7:30 p.m. at the township hall and let the township board know how you feel about this matter. this concerns hundreds of acres of land, it concerns all of us – so please come. Your presence does make a difference!

A new hit by Heart

"Dog and Butterfly"

Dog and Butterfly
There I was with the old man stranded again– so off I'd ran young world crashing around me no possibilities of getting what I need
he looked at me and smiled and said "no, no, no, no child
Sec the dog and butterfly
Up in the air he like to fly
Dog and butterfly
below she loug to try
She roll back down
to the warm soft ground laughing– she don't know why– she don't know why
Dog and butterfly."
I stumbled upon your secret place safe in the trees with tears on your face wrestling with your desires– frozen strangers stealing your fires the message hit my mind
Only words that I could find
See the dog and butterfly up in the air he like to fly
Dog and butterfly
below she has to try
She roll back down
to the warm soft ground
laughing up to the sky up to the sky – Dog and butterfly
We're getting older - the world's getting colder for the life of me t don't know the reason why
Maybe it's living makes us give in hearts rolling ip taken back on the tide
We're balanced together like ocean upon the sky
Another night in this strange town moonlight holds me– light as down voice of confusion inside of me begging to go back to whcre I'm free feelings like I'm through
I know the old man's words are true
Dog and Butterfly
up in the air he like to fly
Dog and butterfly
below she has to try
She roll back down
to the warm soft ground
a little tear in her eye–
she had to try
Dog and butterfly.

A few years ago, a group I had barely heard of was appearing at a small theater in Soo, Canada. We had just traveled to Royal Oak for a Jesse Collin Young concert, and passed at the prospect of another trip so soon. Last summer the same group appeared at Castle Farms and we paid the price of humanity. The group was Heart: Ann and Nancy Wilson and four male backup instrumentalists. To have experienced Ann Wilson's dynamics as lead vocalist, in a sit-down-front performance, would have been a musical experience. Even from a distance, her projection was unbelievably strong. Ann can really belt it out (for want of a more descriptive word), one number after another, a bundle of ceaseless energy prancing up and down stage like an untamed filly, and never missing a beat. Her sister, Nancy, at acoustic guitar also provides the harmonies for many of the songs.

Heart has a new album which was released last year, and a promising single which bears the same title: "Dog and Butterfly." The theme running through the album is like a subtle thread or a water color on rice paper. Some of the cuts are as poetic as a Japanese haiku. They all capitalize on Ann's ability to flaunt her amazing vocal range – and the effect is always dramatic. Yet the cuts are basically gentle in nature, of dogs and butterflies, of lighter touches and mistral winds. "Dog and Butterfly" is the best. It is a modern day parable of sorts. Behold the dog who wishes to fly after the butterfly, he can only try. He will never, like the grasshopper, be able to crawl into his cocoon and be metamorphosized into the freedom of flight. Neither will most of us.

"Dog and Butterfly" is a beautiful, simple song. Listen for it as it climbs the charts.

Courthouse-steps justice

He's a 19-year-old freshman at Michigan State University. Call him Richard. He was the victim of what I call courthouse-steps justice. That's when a lawyer begins preparing his (or her) case just before the trial begins, on the way up the courthouse steps.

Last September 18, new on campus Richard went shopping with 2 acquaintances in the MSU Book Store. The 2 young men with Richard shoplifted $4 worth of pencils and such. A security officer caught them with the goods in their pockets. All 3 students were arrested.

Richard was astounded. He claimed he had no idea his companions were shoplifting. No stolen property was found in his possession. His two acquaintances backed him up 100 percent, admitting their own guilt but telling authorities Richard was completely innocent. He was assured the charges against him would certainly be dropped.

But they weren't. The 2 guilty teenagers were sentenced to a probation program in which they're required to work 60 hours in social services. Richard was advised to accept the same light sentence, but he refused. He said he wouldn't plead guilty of something he hadn't done.

The only alternative was a trial on the misdemeanor charge. Richard had to hire a lawyer. He comes from a large family, with both parents employed. He works summers to help pay his school bills. Because of the legal costs, he abandoned plans to pledge a fraternity.

According to his mother, Richard felt humiliated and hassled by the need to go to court. His studies suffered while he worried about the impending trial, which was finally set for Jan. 22 in East Lansing District Court.

Richard, his lawyer and his parents appeared in court at the time specified - and waited 2 hours. Then the case was dismissed, before the trial started, at the request of the prosecution. Why?

Ingham County Assistant Prosecutor Debra Freidell later explained to me that she decided she didn't have a good case against Richard. She reached this decision after talking to employees of the MSU Book Store who were scheduled to be witnesses against Richard. she didn't talk to the witnesses until she met them for the first time in the courthouse, a few minutes before the trial was to begin.

Richard was arrested Sept. 18 and the trial was to be Jan. 22. That's a gap of over 4 months, which seems like enough time to convene the United Nations, let alone arrange a meeting of a few people who work in the same town.

The Prosecutor's Office is a short drive from the MSU Book Store. The last time I was in East Lansing, the phones were working fine. Why didn't the assistant prosecutor talk to her witnesses before the day of the trial!?

Why not talk to them within a few days after the arrest? Why not find out as soon as possible if there was any evidence that Richard and his 2 companions were lying when they said he knew nothing about the shoplifting? Why not find out at the pre-trial hearing, which was Nov. 13? Why wait over 4 months to decide that witnesses can supply no proof Richard was guilty?

Because of a heavy case load, such a drawn-out procedure is a "common thing" for misdemeanors, assistant Prosecutor Freidell said.

And she objected when I said her request for a dismissel proved what Richard had claimed all along – he is innocent. She said the dismissal was requested because she couldn't prove guilt, but she still isn't sure Richard is innocent. So much for that old chestnut about everyone being presumed innocent until proven guilty.

Finally, aside from all the trauma and inconvenience suffered by Richard and his family, what was the cash cost? His lawyer charged $1,070 for preparing for the trial that was never held.

That's over a thousand bucks for $4 worth of pencils that someone else swiped. Isn't courthouse-steps justice marvelous?

Real estate clinic set for Thursday

A real estate clinic will be held Thursday from 7:30 p.m. until 9:30 p.m. at Ski & Shore on the corner of Park and Bridge streets.

The clinic is being held so area residents can ask questions and get answers on real estate.

A panel consisting of an attorney, a certified public accountant, a banker and a real estate broker will be present.

The panel is expected to discuss such topics as: -How lending institutions qualify their mortgage applications.

-How property taxes are supposed to be treated when buying or selling real estate.

-Which type of property provides the best tax shelter.

-What closing costs are incurred when buying and selling property.

US-31 to be resurfaced

Bids will be taken March 7 in Lansing on resurfacing 8.4 miles of US-31 in the city of Charlevoix and in Hayes Township.

The resurfacing would start near Mercer Road and would follow the highway east and north to the county line at Bay Shore.

Besides resurfacing, eight foot bituminous shoulders will be added. The entire project is expected to cost about $960,000. State officials are hoping it will be completed in August.

Rayders primed for tourney

More than 700 high school basketball teams in the State of Michigan start their quest for a state championship this week.

Districts will be played at 124 sites throughout the state.

Charlevoix will participate in the Class C district tournament at Onaway. The Rayders will play the host Cardinals on Monday with the winner to meet East Jordan on Wednesday.

Charlevoix should be the team to beat in the Onaway district. The Rayders scored impressive victories over Onaway and Rogers City - another entrant - in regular season play last week. Rogers City plays Michigan-Huron Shores Conference rival Boyne City on Tuesday. The winner advances to the final.

The Rayders will start district play with a 13-7 record. The 13th win was against Onaway. And the Rayders made it look easy.

Led by the hot hand of Pat Schmidt, Charlevoix bolted out to a 25-8 lead in the first quarter. It wasn't much of a contest after that as the Rayders rolled to a 87-52 win.

Schmidt, who has been scorching the nets as of late, tallied 23 points - 19 in the first half when Charlevoix put the Cardinals away. No other Rayder scored in double figures, but all 13 players who saw action scored.

Schmidt had another hot game on Tuesday when he canned 34 points in Charlevoix's 77-64 triumph over Rogers City.

The Rayders outscored the Hurons 23-7 at the end of the third quarter and start of the fourth quarter to pull away and claim the win.

The score was deadlocked at 43-all with 2:50 remaining in the third quarter when Charlevoix took control.

Schmidt and Kevin Kratt were instrumental in the surge. Schmidt scored 10 of the 23 points while Kratt added seven. Schmidt also had a nifty assist when he stole a pass and fed Kratt for a layup.

Even with Charlevoix up by 16 points, 66-50, midway through the fourth quarter, Rogers City refused to fold. The Hurons seored 10 unanswered points to cut the gap to six, 66-60. Charlevoix regrouped, however, and rattled off 10 conseeutive points to win going away.

Kratt ended the game with 16 points - all but one in the second half - and center Ken Otmanowski chipped in with 10.

Dave Idalski and John Blair were the big gunners for Rogers City as each tallied 20 points.

If Charlevoix beats Onaway on Monday and East Jordan on Wednesday, it's likely the Rayders would face the Hurons for the district title on Friday. Rogers City beat Boyne City twice during the regular season.

The winner of the Onaway district will take part in the regional at Roscommon. District winners from Houghton Lake, Traverse City St. Francis and Coleman complete the Class C tournament field.

At present, Lincoln-Alcona, Traverse City St. Francis and Sanford-Meridan are the favorites in the other three districts.

Volleyball team wins district

The Charlevoix Rayder girls' volleyball team, coached by Mary Gengle, captured the Class C district title at Interlochen Saturday by defeating St. Ignace 2-0 in the finals.

Charlevoix had lost twice to St. Ignace earlier in the season, once in league play and again in the Michigan-Huron Shores playoff when the Saints captured the loop title.

Coach Gengle said her team coasted through the tournament without losing a single game.

The team will now advance to the Class C regional tournament to be held at Saturday, March 10.

In the finals against the favored Saints, Charlevoix won by scores of 15-12 and 16-14.

In the semi-finals Charlevoix had defeated Elk Rapids 15-12 and 15-5. The Rayders had opened the tournament at 10 a.m. with 15-9 and 15-5 wins over East Jordan. The Rayders had won over Rogers City 2-0 in a pre-district playoff ganne at Rogers City last Wednesday.

Elk Rapids had gone into the semi-finals after eliminating Traverse City St. Francis 15-10 and 15-2. The Traverse City squad had defeated Kalkaska 2-1 in the pre-district playoff to get into the tournament. East Jordan and Elk Rapids had drawn pre-district byes.

St. Ignace, in the lower braeket, had won over the Interlochen Arts Academy 15-10 and 15-13 in the semi-finals; over Benzonia 15-0 and 15-3 in the quarterfinals and over Newberry 15-1 and 15-10 in the pre-district playoff. Interlochen had reached the semi finals after defeating Mancelona 15-2 and 15-4 and Boyne City 2-1. Mancelona and Benzonia had drawn pre-district byes.

As Coach Gengle takes her team into the Class C regionals she will be without one of her regulars, Mel Kerridge, who injured her knee in the final game against St. Ignace. "Actually, she re-injured the knee which had been giving her trouble earlier" Coach Gengle said.

Also missing from the line-up are two players who are out with non-sports related injuries. Melinda Klooster injured an ankle while coming down the bleachers following a basketball game where she was a spectator. Another player, Debbie Reseh, is out of action with a back injury suffered in a car accident Friday night.

While the latter two are not regulars they give the team depth, Gengle said. At this time she has not named anyone to replace Kerridge in the starting lineup for the regional tournament. "I'll work on that during the week" she said Sunday.

Other starters in the district tournament were Karen Lamereaux and Chris Lehman, seniors; Carolyn Loper and Marie Buday, juniors and Teresa Noirot, a sophomore.

Kerridge is also a sophomore. Coach Gengle said she will be lost for the remainder of this season.

Other members of her squad who play regularly are Kris Fiedler and Sherrie Selissen, seniors; Aimee Elzinga, Kimi Mitchell and Mary Wimmer, juniors, and Amy Kroll, a sophomore.

Lehman and Loper are co-captains of the 1979 Rayder squad. The team's record was 8-2 for the season for a second place behind St. Ignace in the M-H.S.C. standings.

East Jordan woman stars for MSU field hockey team

Theresa Morris, a recent graduate of Michigan State University has left more than just her books behind. She's left a surrogate family, the MSU field hockey team.

Since her sophomore year, Terri had partiepated in MSU women's athletics, specifically the sport of field hockey. She tried out for the team never having played the game before and picked up the game with relative east. She then became an integral part of the team – one of 11 players on the field helping one another to win.

This past fall, her final season, Terri was a major factor in the most successful season the field hockey team has ever enjoyed. The women finished first in the state tournament and fourth in the region. Terri contributed from the goalie position.

Throughout the course of the season Terri was the starting goalie, but against the University of Toledo Terri was given the opportunity to play on the forward line at the left inner position. She utilized her one chance and scored a goal for the Spartans, contributing to the 3-0 Spartan victory.

"Terri is a quick and alert goalie," Coach Sam Kajornsin stated. "She's always aware of the flow of the game and that's important."

"Tigger," as she'd been nicknamed, and her teammates began their season by living together in the dorm, where they began to establish their cohesiveness and the family atmosphere. This was the key to success as MSU finished the season with a 13-3-3 record.

Along with her credits on the field, Terri was also the first president of the now three-year-old women's Varsity Club.

Terri Morris is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morris of Rt. 2, East Jordan. Morris graduated from Michigan State with a bachelor of science degree in business.

Masons trim lead to 120

The Masons have come back to trim the Odd Fellows' lead in the annual cribbage tournament to 120 points with one night of play remaining A.D. Cunningham, acting secretary, reports.

The Masons had 948 points for the night.

Dewey Hosler had 956 points for the Odd Fellows. Bob Heise chalked up 955 points for the Masons.

Seven and a half tables were in play.

Though the last night of play will be Thursday at the Masonic Tempie, the dinner to be hosted at the lose of the tournament by the losing team will not be held until March 22.

Can Ellsworth win 2nd straight district?

The Ellsworth Lancers will be the team to beat in the Class D district at Ellsworth.

The Lancers, guided by Coach Hugh Campbell, sport an impressive 18-2 record. Fresh off a Northern Lakes Conference championship, the Lancers will open tournament play on Monday against Central Lake. It was Central Lake who snapped the Lancers 16 game winning streak just a couple weeks ago.

Two big men pace the Ellsworth attack - center Jeff Lowen 6'6 and forward Tex Drenth 6'3. Lowen, who carries 208 pounds on his frame, averages nearly 20 points per game. He is also grabbing 13 rebounds per contest. Drenth compliments him well. A junior, Drenth is pulling down 12 rebounds and scoring 14 points per outing.

This is an experienced Ellsworth team. Most played last year when the Lancers went 13-10 and won a district championship. Nonetheless, Campbell was as surprised as anyone when his team won its first 16 games of the season.

"Our goal was to win the league, which we did," he said. "But to start the season at 16-0! No, I didn't think we could do it."

Although Lowen and Drenth make for a dependable inside game, Campbell has been pleased with the outside shooting of his guards - Brian Howes, Keith Stewart and Frank Hersha.

Campbell is completing his eighth season as coach at Ellsworth. Recordwise, this has been his best.

And it has taken the town by storm.

"I've been very pleased with our attendance, especially when we play on the road," he said. "And considering the kind of winter we've had and the cost of transportation, I think that's fantastic."

If Ellsworth should defeat Central Lake, they would play Bellaire on Wednesday. The winner would play the Boyne Falls-Alba winner in the final.

The district winner at Ellsworth will play in the regional at Grayling. If all goes according to plan, that regioanl could include Mio and its high scoring star Jay Smith. Last year Mio made it to the semi-finals before being eliminated by the eventual champion, Orchard Lake St. Mary.

Even if Ellsworth gets bumped off early in tournament play, Campbell should not feel too depressed. The JV team went 11-1 this year. Two players off that team, Chuck VanPelt and Steven Anderson, have been promoted to the varsity for the tournament.

"I think we'll be heard from again next year," Campbell says matter-of-factly.

Dennis Whitley

Whitley, Golovich capture state medals

Dave Golovich

For the first time ever, Charlevoix had two wrestlers win medals in the Class C state championships.

Senior co-captains Dennis Whitley and Dave Golovich placed fifth and sixth, respectively, in the state finals held Saturday at Lansing Eastern.

Whitley, competing at 191 pounds, beat Joe VanHaitsma of Byron Center, 7-1, lost to Kevin Harris of Olivet, 8-4, beat Harris, 10-8, beat Dave Wegener of Haslett, 6-3, and beat Gary Crabill of Bronson, 4-2.

In the rematch with Harris, Whitley used what is known as the "Whitley Special" to register three takedowns. The move is named after his brother, Pat, who was at matside.

Whitley finished his wrestling career with a 79-53-2 record. This season he was 25-14-1.

Golovich, wrestling at 132 pounds, became the first Rayder to record a pin in a state final. Golovich pinned Alonze Gomez of Olivet at 3:31.

The Rayder senior co-captain also beat last year's state medalist, Tim Bloss of Edwardsburg, in overtime. He later lost to Tony Campagna of Shelby, 14-7, and to Stuart Lewis nf DeWitt, 14-3.

Golovich ended up with a 95-31 record in his wrestling career at Charlevoix. This season he finished at 35-12.

Coach Norm Probert had nothing but praise for his two seniors, whose efforts enabled Charlevoix to take 22nd place. Flint Rentley won the Class C title with Mason County Central coming in second and Shelby third. Both Mason County Central and Shelby were in the Charlevoix district.

"We undoubtedly had one of the strongest wrestling districts in the State of Michigan," Probert said.

JV's close with big wins

The Charlevoix Rayder JV basketball team ended its season in style last week with wins over Rogers City and Onaway.

The Rayders humbled Rogers City, 88-36.

Charlevoix jumped out to a 33-2 first quarter advantage and the game was never in doubt. It was 54-10 at halftime.

For Charlevoix, Jeff Drury scored 18 points - 15 in the first quarter - Dave Buday added 17, Gary Drury 11 and Frank Hoffman 10.

The Onaway contest was not quite so easy. The Rayders had to battle for a 65-59 win.

Mike Loper was high point man for Charlevoix with 19 points while Jeff Drury added 14 and Jim Beaudoin had 13.

Charlevoix led by a scant 14-13 score after the first quarter, but then gradually opened the game up. It was 29-23 at halftime and 51-37 after three quarters.

Senior Mark Lignell finished eighth in the state in the boys giant slalom. The state meet was held at Pine Mountain near Iron Mountain in the Upper Peninsula.

Rec tourney continues, showdown nears in B League

In the 51-49 game, it took a last second shot by Jim Olenziak to give Fishback & Natkin the victory. Olenziak had 27 points for the winners while teammate Storm added 17. For Charlevoix County State Bank, Don Ward scored 26 points, Steve Martinus 13 and Calvin Johnachek 11.

Kit Carson beat John Deere in two straight games by scores of 71-52 and 53-46. In the 71-52 game, Dale Boss and Butch Klooster scored 28 and 25 points for Kit Carson while Paul Collins canned 28 points for John Deere. In the 53-46 contest, Klooster had 20 points, Boss and Mike Crain had 12. For John Deere, Collins had 16 points and Terry Blissett 12.

In the A League tourney, Townhouse beat Depot Restaurant, 79-70. Rick Leslie had 21 points, Ike Boss 16, Steve Dunkelberg 15 and Dan McKenzie 12. For the Depot Restaurant, Al Looze had 15 points, Tom Elzinga and Chuck Stanek 14 apiece and Jeff Belford 10.

Site Planning beat F.B. Taylor, 100-68. Tim Carey and Jerry Skippergosh tallied 24 points each for the winners while Mark Long added 22 and Kevin Griffen 16. Jim Danbert's 27 points led F.B. Taylor. Jack Danbert added 15 and Brian Taylor 13.

In a third contest, Century 21 won be forfeit over Swanson's.

In the Jimmy Bogart Tournament, Hoskins beat Alray Cottages, 71-51. Randy Holecheck popped in 46 points and Beano Archey 16 for the winners. Jim Marsh and Scott Blanchard with 14 points and Jim Withers with 12 paced Alray.

Medusa knocked off the Coast Guard, 48-28. Doug Winnell had 17 points, Dick Putman and Jerome Whitley 12 for Medusa while Rich Forbis was high point man for the Coast Guard with 13 points.

Sophomores launch magazine drive

The sophomore class of Charlevoix High School launched a magazine subscription drive Tuesday in an effort to earn funds for their class treasury.

A spokesman for the class said the class has a goal of $2500.

The subscription drive will continue through March 20 under the management of QSP, a subsidiary of Reader's Digest with the QSP field manager, Art T. Bartnick, guiding the students under the direct supervision of Charles Bentley and Barry Anderson, faculty advisors.

More than 160 students will be involved in the subscription campaign.

Meet Charlevoix

...Fred Welch

Fred Welch began his duties as engineer-manager of the Charlevoix County Road Commission on Dec. 15. This week the Courier talks with him about his job.

COURIER: We had a heavy snow on Jan. 3, shortly after you started to work. Had you encountered this kind of problem before?

WELCH: Oh, yes. I came from Osceola County (Reed City), and we had a 24-inch blizzard last year on January 26, the same time you had a blizzard here. I keep a daily diary of weather conditions. It's all right here in the book.

COURIER: What hours do your men work?

WELCH: The road crews work from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The foremen are often on the road at 4 a.m. in bad weather to check weather conditions.

COURIER: How do you determine if overtime work is needed?

WELCH: The supervisor and I get together in the afternoon and decide what has to be done.

COURIER: Have you learned where the snow trouble spots are?

WELCH: I have most of them in mind – Island View, the Charlevoix Road near Young State Park and in front of the Blu Dot farm, U.S. 131 south of the county line, Wickersham Road, Rogers Road, Stolt Road, old U.S. 31, among others.

COURIER: Do you get many calls from the public about road conditions?

WELCH: Yes. We keep a log of calls. During the last icy period, we received 10 calls in one day for sanding. We try to get to people with particular problems. We've helped three pregnant women and two heart patients, and keep our eyes on a chemo-therapy patient who has to get out regularly.

COURIER: Do you get "thank you" letters as well as complaints?

WELCH: Yes, we do, and phone calls. We believe we're doing a good job. Our main function is to serve the public. If they can't get out to do what they have to do, that's not right. We're here to help them.

COURIER: When do you think the snow will end?

WELCH: I've lived in Michigan all my life – I'll feel home free on Easter Sunday. We can expect a couple more good storms.

COURIER: What will you be doing when you don't have to plow snow any more?

WELCH: We'll be cutting dead elms, working on drainage areas, coldpatching black top, and doing odds and ends of housekeeping, things we didn't have time for in the winter. We'll also be replacing the signs that were knocked down by the snow.

COURIER: How many employees does the Road commission have?

WELCH: Forty-two. Of these, 36 are hourly employees, including three mechanics, one stock man, and three CETA employees.

COURIER: How many miles of road are there in Charlevoix County?

WELCH: Altogether, 791 miles. Of these, 722 are county primary and local roads and 69 are state roads – highways 32, 66, 75, 31, and 131.

COURIER: How is the road commission financed?

WELCH: Mostly by funds from the Michigan Department of Transportation (taxes on gasoline and diesel fuel and weight tax or license plate collections). It is a complicated formula based on number of miles of road in each county, population, number of inches of snow, and other factors. For instance, one percent of the Department of Transportation revenue is set aside each year for snow removal. Based on last year's snowfall, we received $19,160.

COURIER: Don't you get some local funds?

WELCH: Yes, matching funds from the townships for construction or reconstruction of local roads. We can also receive money from the county General Fund.

COURIER: Will the higher voted gasoline and weight taxes make a difference in your budget.

WELCH: The matter is still in court. We have not budgeted any extra money. As far as the higher taxes are concerned, I look at it this way: The average driver drives 12,000 miles a year and gets 12 miles per gallon. This amounts to 1,000 gallons and he pays nine cents a gallon tax, so that's $90 a year. Then he pays $30 for a license plate, so it costs him $120 a year or $10 a month to drive on any road in Michigan. If he has to pay two cents a gallon more tax and the license plates go up to $40, then the cost is $150 a year, or $12.50 a month, which is only $2.50 a month more to use Michgian roads.

Fred Welch

COURIER: What was your budget last year?

WELCH: About $1.5 million.

COURIER: Who do you report to?

WELCH: To the county road commission. They, in turn, are appointed by the Charlevoix county Board of Commissioners.

COURIER: Who is serving on the road commission now?

WELCH: Robert Stowe, Don Graham, and John Kujawski.

COURIER: Where did you learn about road work?

WELCH: I started in 1955 working for the State Highway Department as an instrument man on bridge construction. In 1965 I went to work for the Muskegon County Road Commission. Later I was city manager for Montague and worked for a sewer and water contractor. But road commission work is my first love. I like it.

COURIER: Where did you grow up?

WELCH: Just outside of Mason. I went to school in Mason and studied engineering at MSU.

COURIER: Do you have any hobbies?

WELCH: Not really. I spend most of my time on the job. I'm always available to talk with anyone.

COURIER: You sound as if you like the job.

WELCH: My reception has been more than gratifying. I'm happy to be here.

German club meets

The German Conversation Group held a Fasching party on Friday, Feb. 23 in the Keller at Leutheuser's Restaurant in Charlevoix.

Heinz and Renee Leutheuser were hosts and an atmosphere of gemuetlichkeit and gaiety prevailed. First prize for the best costumes went to the John Deschermeier family of Petoskey, including the mother, father, son and daughter-in-law and daughter and son-in-law. John Sr. in particular, outfitted in authentic Chinese costume, will long be remembered as a good sport and a sight to behold.

Committee members included Art Saworski from Boyne Falls and Ethel Wiesinger and Christa-Maria from Charlevoix. German speaking persons were in attendance from Traverse City, Eastport, Central Lake, Charlevoix, Petoskey, Harbor Springs and Germany.

The group's next meeting will be held on Friday evening, March 16 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Christa-Maria and Jim Mills on M-66, approximately one mile south of Charlevoix, phone 547-2384. Kaffee und Kuchen will be served, and German spoken.

Any interested persons are cordially invited to attend these informal monthly gatherings. At the March 16 get-together, Christa-Marie will present a program on different ways of coloring and designing Easter eggs, using dyes and designs from nature. Dorothea Pientazek of Petoskey will present the April program, in German of course, on Spring Flowers. Date will be April 20, with the meeting place to be decided upon at the March meeting.

Auxiliary plans luncheon

The Ladies Auxiliary of V.F.W. Post No. 1153 made plans for a salad-casserole luncheon to be held at the post home in Mid-April at a recent meeting of the group held at the post home.

Mrs. Kenneth Staley and Mrs. Melvin Plum were named co-chairpersons of the event. They will appoint their committees.

Mrs. Albert Hazel reported that Michigan V.F.W. Auxiliary will spend an estimated $59,000 to meet the grants allocated to cancer-stricken members this year. The local auxiliary voted a sizable contribution to the fund. The auxiliary also collects pop tops from Coke, Tab, Sprite, Fresca and orange and green sales slips from Glen's Market to support the cancer fund. Anyone wishing to contribute any of these may call 547-2985 for a pick-up.

Mrs. James Whitley presented a safety report and asked members to check their homes for possible health and fire hazards.

The next family potluck for V.F.W. and Auxiliary members and their families and prospective members will be held at the post home at 6 p.m. Saturday, March 31. Members are asked to bring a dish to pass and their own table service.

Thirty-five members attend the February potluck. Mrs. Albert Russell was in charge.

The charter was draped in memory of Mrs. Myrtle Warner who died Feb. 17. Condolences were offered to the Warner family. A book in her memory will be placed in the Charlevoix Public Library.

Mrs. James Whitley and Mrs. Thomas Hodgkinson were hostesses for the refreshments which followed the business meeting.

A social meeting will be held at the post home March 16 and the next business meeting April 5. Members are urged to attend both meetings.

FAITH HONORS THE WISDOM AND EXPERIENCE OF AGE

In our current misguidad era where young is beautiful, the older segment of our population is largely relagatad to the background of our society. There are many factors to blame for this tragic situation, including its wide range of acceptance which prematurely condemns the physically and mentally sound along with the infirm, and thereby attaches the stigma of outworn usefulness to all. When this is combined with the natural self-importance of today's youth, little respect or companionship exists between children and their grandparents, to the detriment of both. Your Church will teach you to appreciate the wisdom of tha old, referred to throughout the Bible. Honor your grandparents and listen to them. You may even find them fascinating, if you give them a chanca.

"This is he, that was in the church in the wilderness." --Acts 7:38

Bands get second division ratings

Charlevoix's Middle School bands, entered in the Junior High band festival sponsored by District II Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association' returned home with second division ratings, according to their director, Gary Stutzman.

The seventh grade band, making its first appearance in festival competition, received one 1 and two II's in concert and a II in sight-reading. The band was entered in Class D.

The eighth grade band, entered in Class C, came out of the festival with three II's in concert and a 1 in sight-reading.

"Both bands performed well " Stutzman said. "They had worked hard in preparation for the festival. He added that the band playing in Class D was competing with bands composed of students from all junior high grades.

He went on to say that intonation and articulation were the things that cost them a higher rating. "You find this in young bands" he added.

"Both bands played well . . . they have grown a lot . . . in the short time I've had them" Stutzman said in conclusion.

Irwin wants halt on winter navigation

State Senator Mitch Irwin, D-Sault Ste. Marie, is cosponsoring legislation urging Congress to haft the Great Lakes winter navigation program until its environmental and economic effects are reviewed.

"It's time the State of Michigan took a serious look at this program, which particularly affects the residents of northern Michigan, to determine whether it fs economically and environmentally feasible to continue," said Irwin, chairman of the Senate Municipalities and Elections Committee. "It is particularly important to review the year-round Great Lakes shipping program with an eye toward its effects on residents of some of the islands and shoreline areas of northern Michigan who suffer from some of the side effects of winter navigation at this time of year.

"Frankly, it is necessary not only to determine whether Michigan residents are receiving benefits equal to the cost of the program, but also whether the program can be operated so that environmental damage, such as oil spills, is prevented," Irwin said.

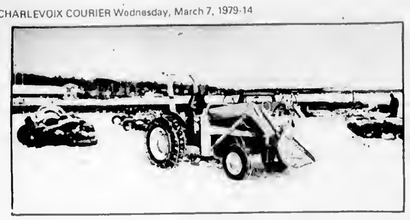
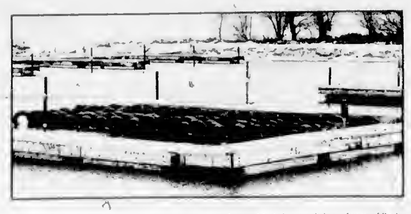
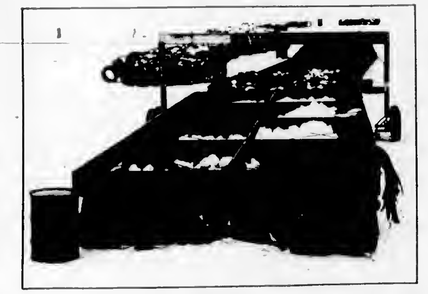
"Charlevoix the Beautiful"



Once Lake Charlevoix was frozen, the tires, now in modules, could be laid out, in the shape the dock and breakwater would take.



Assembled in modules, foam filled tires were checked for buoyancy last fall, before the lake froze.



Steel dock frames were lashed over the tops of the pier tire-modules. Eventually wooden deck walls will cover the steel frames.

The finger piers will form this summer's boat slips.

On the lake side of the docks, truck tires, in modules, form a breakwater. Without steel frames the all tire breakwater not only protects the marina from wind and waves, but has the added advantage of being something soft, should a boater miss a turn.

All tire marina attracts attention

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

Irish Boat Shop's new floating, all-tire marina, has attracted considerable national interest, because of its environmental plusses and the way it is being constructed.

Based on a concept developed by Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company and techniques developed at the University of Rhode Island, the Charlevoix marina is using discarded auto and truck tires to construct its new 62 slip marina, near its present Charlevoix facility.

What has interested observers is that the marina uses tires, a serious national waste disposal problem, in a positive manner. The fact that some 10,000 tires are being recycled in this project has caused favorable comment from the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Since Irish's project is the first of its kind on the Great Lakes, other marina operators and even such municipal governments as the city of Chicago are watching to see how they can apply the same concept.

Tires, filled with a closed cell urethane foam for buoyancy, have been assembled in modules of 18 tires each. The modules and the tires, within, are held together with conveyor belting. Steel frames were placed over the tire modules, once they were assembled in their positions on the lake, and wooden dock walks will be placed over the frames, later.

Irish crews have used this winter's ice to build the dock and breakwater in place. Divers will be setting danforth type anchors to hold the pier and breakwater stationary.

The outer edge of the piers will be protected by a truck-tire constructed breakwater, without the steel framework.

The fact that the marina will be floating, allowing water to circulate and providing shade for fish and other marine life is an added plus for the project, in the eyes of environmentalists.

Irish designers, working with researchers from the University of Rhode Island, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and New York State Sea Grant, made the detailed studies of wave action and breakwater size.

Cliff Biddick, Irish vice president, said recently that the tire breakwater has been constructed so that it exceeds what is considered minimum necessary size for effective protection.

Another aspect of tire piers and breakwaters which is attractive to builders is that it is less expensive than conventional construction and should not have to be removed and replaced every year with the ebb and flow of winter's ice.

Beth Stewart, crew boss of the Irish Boat Shop's floating dock project, filled the auto tires with a closed cell urethane foam.

FELLOW TAX PAYER AND CITIZEN OF CHARLEVOIX

I feel that it would be correct and timely for this office to explain what the valuation for the City of Charlevoix will be for the tax year, 1979 and what it will mean for each individual property owner.

There will be no increase of assessment for 1979 which means that there will not be notice of increase being sent out. However, the tentative factor for the City of Charlevoix is 1.17, which will be applied against all property. This is explained as follows:
As an example -- For each $1,000 Assessment, multiply by 117 (This is the tentative multiplier) or 1,000 x 117=1,170
Another example -- $10,000 Assessment x 117 = 11,700.
Each person may check their valuation by multiplying their assessment by 1.17 and that will be your assessment figure for 1979.

Sincerely

Township board postpones Medusa rezoning request

The Charlevoix Township Board has postponed its decision on whether or not to rezone 230 acres of Medusa owned land from agriculture and scenic reserve to industrial.

The board agreed by a 3-2 decision to consider the rezoning request at its next meeting, which will be the second Monday in April.

An earlier attempt to have the request postponed for 18 months was defeated by a 3-2 vote. In both cases, township Supervisor Oscar Stroud had the deciding vote.

Several area residents attended the meetug and each was given an opportunity to make a comment on the request. Of those who did comment, several asked the board to delay a decision and study the request further.

Medusa officials indicated at the meeting that if the land is rezoned it would be quarried - provided a special use permit is obtained and the state OK's such action. Medusa has conducted drillings on the land and, officials say, it is known that there is limestone and shale on it. However, officials add, a second drilling (called core drilling) is needed to determine the quantity and quality of the limestone and shale. Elbert Kaiser, former plant manager at Medusa in Charlevoix, said Monday night that the company would like to have the property rezoned before it spends additional money on drilling. Kaiser indicated that Medusa would like to start the core drillings in the summer. He said evaluating core drillings is a "slow process" and could take up to six months.

Asked whether or not the company deemed it necessary to have the land rezoned within two years, Kaiser responded:

"Yes, because there is mineable shale on the property."

Kaiser said it would be more "economically advantageous" for Medusa to quarry land adjacent to the plant than to truck the shale from Ellsworth, some 14 road miles away.

Approximately 210 of the 230 acres is presently zoned agrieulture. The remaining 20 acres, which was obtained in a swap with the state, is zoned scenic reserve. According to Dorothy Lewand, of the township zoning board, the land is not suitable for agrieulture. The Charlevoix Township Zoning Board and the Charlevoix County Planning Commission, incidentally, have both recommended the rezoning be approved.

One resident in attendance last night, Richard Aull, asked Medusa officials "why the rush?"

"This is the third public hearing on this in a week and a half," he said.

Aull, too, asked that the request be postponed for further consideration.

Although not strongly supporting or opposing the rezoning, Ivan Whitley asked that at least the northeast portion of the land be left alone because of the wetlands.

"I think wetlands are valuable," he said.

Some residents, who live near the plant, argued that if the land is rezoned and quarried it would add to the noise and dust problems, they say, they are presently experiencing.

Jerry Puhl, one of the nearby residents, said if the land is rezoned it will adversely affect the property value of his land.

"I knew when I purchased my property and built my residence that Medusa was located where it is," he said, "but I never figured on Medusa pulling some political strings and doing a land swap with the DNR which would allow them to industrialize in my backyard.

"The potential exists here for what I have personally seen happen in other communities where a corporation or utility is allowed to expand opposed only be a few residences and are allowed to keep developing until they completely surround these residences. The people are eventually forced to sell at the price the corporation feels is just value."

Medusa also owns acreage in Norwood Township and, Puhl said, "undoubtedly" they will ask for rezoning on that land in the future.

Medusa officials said two weeks ago they have no intent at this time to seek rezoning on property in Norwood Township.

Puhl also said he is experiencing problems with his well, but Medusa officials contend it is not due to their quarrying operation.

One resident, John Haggard, who is a member of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners, said that perhaps in return for the rezoning the board could get a security bond from Medusa "to make sure" the company follows through with its plans to develop the land once it becomes useless for cement making activity.

The company has a long range site plan for its property "when it's no longer producing cement."

According to John Campbell, site planner for Medusa, the present quarry would be converted into an inland lake. This would be done, he said, by connecting the quarry with Lake Michigan at the slip site, where the cement boat is loaded. To do this, he added, it would take approval from governmental agencies - including the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Campbell said the "water quality should be excellent for fish" because of the depth and the variation in the shoreline. He said there will be several areas for fish to spawn. He said this would also give the state park (Bells Bay) access to an inland lake.

Campbell said one of the immediate objectives is to start placing overburden along the proposed shoreline and to test it for solubility.

The site planner said it's the company's intent to convert the property into a recreational area.

Medusa has already started reclaiming areas on its property. Approximately 6,000 trees are expected to be planted on overburden piles this year. Also, nearly 12 acres is expected to be seeded.

"We're looking way into the future," Campbell said, "probably past my lifetime and yours.

"But we're trying to solve these things now before they become problems later. And that's the way it should be done. Afterall, this land is too valuable to throw away."

The best way to determine ability to pay is by a detailed analysis of assets and earning power. Individual analyses are obviously necessary, but there are some general principles that help every individual. The price which should be paid for a house rarely should exceed two and one half times annual family income. An outside limit of twice annual family income is still better, and if it is possible for even lower payments, analysis can also be made considering weekly disposable income in relation to monthly fixed payments. It is to his advantage to do so.

Park stage committee plans fund-raising campaign in spring to complete project started in '52

A drive to raise funds for completion of the stage in East Park is expected to get underway in the spring.

According to C.A. "Odie" Odmark, of the park stage committee, it will cost roughly $75,000 to complete the stage. Although, he adds, "the cost estimate is nebulous because costs are going up every day."

Plans call for an enlargement of the present stage. The proposed stage would accommodate about 90 players with an orchestra pit (where the fountain is) for $0.

The committee is hoping city officials can obtain a grant to help pay for the costs.

City Manager Norman Gaffney has been in contact with officials from the Northwest Michigan Regional Planning Commission. He recently received a letter from William Bechtel, of the commission, stating the park stage is eligible for funds through the Land and Water Conservation program. He added a pre-application should be submitted to the Department of Natural Resources by March 15. Bechtel also said if the "band shell (park stage) has historic significance" funds might be available through the History Division, Michigan Department of State.

Odmark is hoping sufficient funds can be raised so construction could begin in spring of 1981.

Odmark said the proposed stage is large enough so it can be used for Christmas displays, slide film shows, folk dancing, dramatic productions and, of course, musical concerts. The stage would be covered.

The committee has been getting advice on accoustics from Dr. Harold Geerdes of Calvin College. A personal friend of Odmark's, Geerdes was an accoustical consultant in the construction of the Calvin College auditorium, which, Odmark says, "is one of the finest auditoriums for accoustics in the state."

The present stage was constructed in 1952. It was not completed at that time because "we ran out of money," Odmark explained.

"It cost us nearly $8,000 to build our present stage," he said. "And $8,000 was a lot of money then."

The park stage project has been picking up support. Two local service clubs - the Lions and Kiwanians - are both "firmly behind it." Also, several residents have helped out. Hans Wiemer, for instance, has designed the stage. And Alvin Ranger has done engineering work.

"I haven't heard of any real opposition to it," Odmark said.

Odmark said a fund raising drive has been on the "backburner" because of the recent hospital fund drive.

"But I do feel we are now getting off the ground," he said. "This is a beautiful site and it's a natural amphitheater."

The park stage committee is a non-profit corporation, Odmark said, so contributions are tax exempt.

Members of the committee include Odmark, Wiemer, Ranger, Gary Stutzman, Suzi Ries, Jeanine Wallace, Richard Krueger, Ray Wood, June Cross and Jacquie Merta.

Ellsworth student eager to start college

ELLSWORTH – Mary Muha was sitting in a school desk in an empty classroom gazing out the window at the falling snow.

"Maybe school will be cancelled tomorrow," she said in a half-serious, half-joking tone.

"I thought you liked school?" she was asked.

"I do, but I wouldn't mind a day off."

Days off come few and far between for the energetic Ellsworth High School student.

Mary is in the process of finishing a four year high school curriculum in three years. While most students take five classes a year, Mary takes seven. In addition, she has independent studies in algebra and accounting.

The Ellsworth Board of Education has already agreed to let her graduate one year early so she can attend Oberlin College (Ohio) in the fall.

"A lot of my friends say, 'Why in the world would you want to miss your senior year? That's when you have the most fun.' I don't look at it that way. I'm here to learn. I've set goals for myself and one goal is to attend college."

Mary has two brothers, Mike and Jeff, who attend Oberlin. It was while visiting her brothers that Mary decided Oberlin was the college for her.

"I've been there several times and I really like it," she said.

In fact Oberlin was the only school Mary applied to, although she considered two east coast schools, too. Oberlin accepted her in January.

Mary, the daughter of Bill and Jean Muha, plans on studying language and computers. She passed up a one year trip to Germany-Youth for Understanding exchange program-so she could enroll at Oberlin in the fall. Hopefully, she said, she'll be able to travel abroad in a language program at Oberlin.

And if anyone thinks Mary is just a bookworm, they can think again. Mary happend to be the class president, a cheerleader and a member of the girls basketball, ski, track and softball teams. She also works as a cook at the Rowe Inn. Someday, she said, she would like to be a professional chef.

When does she find time for everything?

"It's not easy. It uses up all my spare time, but at least I always have something to do."

Jurors now picked differently

Charlevoix County District Court is initiating a new method of selecting jurors.

There will be a "Jury Selection Day" each month, during which a panel of six or seven jurors will be selected for each scheduled jury trial.

In this way, only those jurors will report on the day of the trial, instead of the whole complement of 25 as is now the case.

Lawyers in each case will also be on hand on "Jury Selection Day" so that all challenges may be made in advance.

Magistrate Marilyn Blaunan points out that selecting jurors this way should save money on jurors' fees.

"Only six or seven will be paid for appearing in court, not 25 as is now the case," she says.

Currently, jurors are paid $15 a day for a full day of service or $7.50 for a half day, plus 10 cents a mile for the round-trip from home to courthouse.

Board adopts fee schedule

The Board of Health for District Health Department No. 3 (Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego Counties) adopted the following property evaluation fee schedule at their February 20 meeting. This fee schedule became effective on March 1, 1979.

Property evaluations for single family residential home sites will be $35. One parcel with intended development of more than one home site will cost $35 plus $15 for each additional site.

Commercial and Multiple Dwelling developments will have a fee of $50 per site.

Pre-Preliminary Plat evaluations will cost $100.

Applications for residential on site sewage disposal systems will remain at $15.

Individual questions about property evaluations should be directed to the environmental health section of District Health Department No. 3.

Legion celebrates anniversary

The American Legion will observe its 60th anniversary March 15-17.

The Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226, which was chartered one year after the parent organization was formed in Paris in 1919, will celebrate this significant milestone at a special meeting at the post home at 8 p.m. Tuesday, March 20 Paul H. Stephan, Post Commander, has announced.

Jim Willis and Fritz Allard have been named to plan the meeting which will feature Joseph Seidl, Major, U.S. Army (Ret), as the speaker. He will speak on present world events and our need for Civil Defense. A social hour will follow the business meeting.

The Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226, named for the first serviceman from Charlevoix to lose his life in World War I, was chartered on Aug. 1, 1920, with 16 members.

Though not a charter member, E. J. Edward did join the organization in 1920 and today is the oldest living post commander. He was post commander in 1924, the post's second tap officer. He is now a life member. The first was the late Rollie L. Lewis.

Today the post boasts a membership of 196 veterans of all this country's major wars in this century, World War I, World War II, the Korean Conflict and the War in Vietnam.

Paul Stephan and E.J. Edward

The local post's observance will be a part of a gigantic birthday party which will span the globe as nearly 16,000 American Legion posts thoughout the United States and in several foreign countries and overseas territories join the celebration.

As part of its preparation for the 60th birthday, Post No. 226 is winding up its 1979 membership drive.

"The year of 1978 was a great year for the American Legion with significant accomplishment in the community, throughout the state and over the nation" Stephan said. "More and more eligible war veterans are recognizing that the Legion is an organization that "Dares to Care". Membership in the American Legion gives the veteran an opportunity to be involved in meeting the needs of his own community as well as the state and nation through the Legion's many and varied programs" Stephan continued.

Membership workers are conducting an intensive program of personal contact to invite eligible veterans to become a part of the post's local programs.

"Other early members are Jerry Haggerty, Dan King and Carl Korth.

Charlevoix House worthy of praise

Editor:

What a super artical on the Charlevoix House! It's su nice to see how well the residents of Charlevoix have accepted the Charlevoix House and its residents!

I was born and raised in Charlevoix and have worked for and with the mentally handicapped.

It all started, well, who knows when! f guess the first work f did was helping at the Special Olympics when it was in Charlevoix, about six years ago. After that, f was "hooked"!

I then worked as an aid at the Ironton Trainable School, then, when needed, I worked at the East Jordan School. I went to the Special Olympics in Traverse city as a chaperone, where we had the time of our lives!

I have seen some of the institutions and am just so thankful for a place like "The Charlevoix House."

These people are super to work with and just to be with. And they don't deserve the institutions.

My husband and f were transfered from Charlevoix to Portsmouth, Va. 1½ years ago. f have been unable to find work with the mentally handicapped. But we will be moving to New York in April where f hope to find the kind of work I want.

I could go on and on about the great times I've had working with these people, but won't take up any more space. I just want to say to 'The Charlevoix House', "you people are super and keep up the great work!!!"

Fascination of name leads to discovery

f recently had a letter from an old geologist friend of mine with whom f had not been in touch since I came to live in Charlevoix in 1972. He expressed interest in the fact that I live on Antrim Street and associated the name with well-known geological features of Antrim County in Northern freeland, specifically the basalt lava rocks which form the Giant's Causeway. This prompted me to consult my reliable text "Principles of Physical Geology" by the British geologist, Arthur Holmes. Illustrated are the Giant's Causeway and other spectacular scenic features of Antrim County in the northeast portinn of Northern Ireland.

It is pointed out that the Giant's Causeway was formed by the weather and the sea from a lava of columnar basalt. The name is derived from old legends of Ireland which tell us that giants were responsible for many natural phenomena. The Giant's Causeway was "explained" as the work of the giant, Fian MacCoul. This defiant stone-mason began to construct a causeway across the Irish Sea the better to attack his hated rival, Finegal, who had built himself a stronghold of similar construction on the Isle of Staffa, Famous also in Antrim County are the many falls of Glenariff as the river descends step by step through the layers of basalic rocks. The plunge pools below waterfalls often form spectacular pot holes.

Our Michigan Antrim County was, prior to 1843, called Meegisee County, an Indian name. At that time the nome was changed by act of the State Legislature to Antrim County. It is not known what prompted the change - perhaps the presence of a number of legislators of Irish extraction. As the settlement of northern Michigan proceeded, Antrim City a few miles south of Norwood had a brief existence. Antrim Street in Charlevoix was recorded on the first village plat in 1866. The State Geological Survey named a Devonian shale formation the Antrim shale for its type locality in Antrim County. The Antrim Furnace near Mancelona was one of the last operating charcoal iron furnaces in Michigan.

Physicnlly our Antrim County and its Irish counterpart bear some resemblence. Both are bordered by large bodies of water, Grand Traverse Hay and the North Channel of the Irish Sea. However, bed rock conditions are quite different. The Antrim shale and limestone in Michigan contrast with the Irish basalt lava and sandstones which are more like the rocks which crop out on the Lake Superior shore of the Keweenaw Peninsula and on Isle Royale. Climatically the frish Antrim County is more temperate. Although situated 10 degrees north of our latitude, the oceanic influence moderates average winter temperatures which are about 20 degrees fahrenheit higher than in our Antrim County.

This little footnote to history shows that a fascination with names may lead to a bit of speculation and discovery on a winter's evening.

Refreshing course on French Revolution

f have spent several evenings reeently in the company of Fr. Gabriel Richard, Michigan's frontier priest, thanks to a biography by Frank B. Woodford and Albert Hyma published in 1968 by the Wayne State University Press.

It had been a good refresher course in the history of the French Revolution, as well as the early days of Detroit, Mackinac Island and Cruss Village.

I never realized before that the revolution in France was not unly an uprising against royalty and the upper crust, but against the Catholic Church as well. If it hadn't been for the revolution, Fr. Richard, who was studying for the priesthood at the time, probably would have never found his way to Michigan.

As it happened, Fr. Richard was ordained secretly and slipped out of France on the Q.T., leaving his family to bear the penalty of having a cleric in the fandy. The revolutionaries seized property owned by Richard's mother and another relative was forced to pay one-fourth of the value of her property in taxes.

Pretty high-handed stuff. Needless to say, the revolutionists in time did make their peace with the Catholic Church, although they are still on the outs with the royal family at this writing.

Because of the revolution, Fr. Richard found himself in 1792 sailing to the United States, a country which had only recently thrown off its own shackles. Strange to say, Fr. Richard was swept up in the spirit of liberation which was spreading across America.

His first plan was to stay in the United States a few years and then, when the heat was nff, return to France and teuch.

But it didn't happen that way. The longer Fr. Richard remained on American soil, the better he liked it. His first assignments as a missionary were in Mississippi River settlements where French was still the predominant language. However, he realized that he would have to learn English if he stayed very long in the United States, so he began writing his letters in English and practicing the spoken language whenever he had an opportunity.

He carried his French accent to the grave with him in 1832, but he became a master of the English lunguage in writing.

In 1798, Fr. Richard was transferred to Detroit at the request of his good friend, Fr. Levadoux, whom he had known in France and with whom he had worked in the Mississippi Valley settlements. At that time Detroit was part of the Diocese of Baltimore and the Detroit priests were in charge of missions as far north as Mackinac Island and Sault Ste. Marie. The trip by boat took several days, even in good weather.

Shortly after his arrival in Detroit, Fr. Richard was sent to Mackinac Island. Here is an excerpt of a letter he wrote to Bishop Carroll in Baltimnre.

"On the 29th of the same month (June) I did meet there in that place with great many people." (Remember his English was still imperfect) "I may be said that near a thousand men come there in the Summer time. It is the grand Rendevous of several traders of Lac Michigan, Mississippi, and Lac Superior, etc. There are about 50 houses; I found a great number of Children. f supplied the Ceremonies of Baptism to 30 and better who were above seven years. However it is very sorrowful to see so many poor creatures quite abandoned with instructions. Several of them Know scarcely to do the sing (sign) nf the cross."

During the same visit, Fr. Richard visited an settlement on the Lake Miehigan shore occupied by 1,200 Ottawa Indians, only one of whom had been baptized. According to the authors, the site was marked by a large cross on a 300-foot bluff and could only have been the location of present-day Cross Village.

Fr. Riehard was interested in bringing the community back into the fold of the Catholic Church, but was unable to make much headway. Later he lamented:

"To tell you the truth they are so much abandoned to drink spirit, that they do not care much about religion."

After the Detroit fire of 1805, Fr. Richard decided to cast his lot with Michigan for good. He helped in the rebuilding of the city and was jailed temporarily by the British during the war of 1812. He was freed at the insistence of Chief Tecumseh.

Fr. Richard published une of Michigan's earliest newspapers, promoted education, operated local welfare services and in general held Detroit and much of Michigan together during those early, turbulent years. He was quite a guy.

'Cry, The Beloved Country' modern classic

I tend to be a very provincial person. It takes a trip to some new place, a visit from some new face or maybe just a bit out of a new book to shake me free from the shaekles of a too-comfortable existence. In this case the new book was an old one, written more than 30 years ago by Alan Paton, native born son of white South Africa. His book, Cry, The Beloved Country, is a modern day classic. It is, as described in an introduction to the text, "passionutely African...a story...a prophecy...a psalm.

The story bears the theme of the black population's changing position in South African society; of social deterioration as white urbanization gradually destroys the ancient tribal structure of the blacks. It is a story of fathers and sons, of tradition versus innovation. In the character of Steven Kumolo, black umfundisi (parson), there is a reminder of the influence of Dutch and English Christianity as it became assimilated with tribal superstition and solidarity. In the character of his son, there is a glimpse of a new generation, a new breed who sought a better life in Johannesburg, the city which stood as the symbolic golden idol, luring youthful aspirants to prosperity. It was this idyllic city which doled out instead significant portions of crime, slums, low wages and a general breakdown of morale and morality.

On the other side of the racial coin, is James Jarvis, white Afrikaner, agricultural tycoon who comes fo guin sensitivity to the cause for which his son has devoted his adult life: injustices dealt the blacks in the wake of white anarchy.

The plot is a lonely journey of one father in search of his son. In the finding is the losing of innocence. It is also the birth of enlightenment for the other father.

From the vantage point of prophecy, the author paints a picture of two cultures which are victims of time and place and association in the region known as South Africa. ff there were three major historical influenees: the Dutch explorers and colonists, the English "invaders", and the discovery of gold in the interior, there is also a warning that what has been realized as previous error ought, in fact, to be altered in order to amend and progress. Yet, as is the case with most prophecy, it seems to have been largely disregarded over the years, so that even today, survival and separation appear to be continuing factors in the incompatibility of the two cultures.

As for the psalm, Cry the Beloved Country is, like the songs of David, written in child-like simplicity. It captures the spirit of both black and white South Africa. It is a lament and supplication of sorts. Because it is the story of a lost boy, a senseless murder, retribution and continuance, there might be much cause for bitterness. But vengeance is never sought. There is merely a prevading sorrow and the realization of the limitations of civilization to fulfill all the needs of its people and the inability nf provincialism to remain intact.

New welfare plan begins

A plan to further reduce Michigan's welfare payments made in error will begin this week in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb Counties, three counties which have more than half of the state's population and 52 percent of its Aid to Dependent Children cases.

Since 1974 statistics indicate that Michigan has cut the cost of welfare errors almost in half. Funds misspent on ineligible or overpaid cases were estimated at almost 15 percent of the welfare total in 1974. In 1978 that figure had dropped to eight percent, marking a savings of $50 million last year alone.

The new plan consists of several specific steps aimed at reducing overpayments or payments to ineligible recipients. fn addition to using computer reports to identify possible errors or potential error-prone situations, local Department of Social Services (DSS) workers will be increasing their field verificatiun efforts. Under the new plan DSS workers in the three metropolitan Detroit counties will make home calls and contact clients every three months instead of every six months.

Certain procedures will also be streamlined to assure that when the department obtains information which has a bearing on the eligibility of a case, that information gets to the proper worker.

DSS officials report that more than half the errors involving misspent funds in ADC cases were found in three areas – earned income, continued absence of one parent from the home and shelter expenses.

Approximately two-thirds of the funds misspent due to earned income errors are attributable to an error by the client. Of these client errors, 85 percent were believed to involve deliberate misrepresentation of the facts.

Several other new procedures will also be used to more effectively deal with the misspending of welfare funds in Michigan.

Education not pinball important in school

Editor:

I would like to comment on Bob Clock's article of March 7th concerning pinball at the Middle School. Mr. Clock attempted to make his article amusing but I was far from amused.

When I first heard that these machines had already been installed I couldn't believe it. I had no idea that schools now had to sink so low to keep its students on the premises. Only 14 years ago when I was in high school no one was allowed off the school grounds during lunch hour, or any other time, except by written permission from the parents. We were allowed 30 minutes for lunch and another 30 minutes for going to the library, study hall, or visiting with friends in the activity area of each grade wing. We all knew the rules and obeyed them because we knew they were strictly enforced. The downtown businesses would be thrilled if such a policy was enforced, here.

Since the equipment is available only during noon recess there must be o long line of students waiting to use the two pinball machines & t TV electronic game for four players. I'm sure some students must be passing up eating lunch in order to get a good place in line.

I agree with Mr. Clock that the Middle School years are "among the most difficult in the many stages of becoming an adult." But I don't think it's necessary to entertain students to "make kids enjoy school one little bit more." Seems to me that we're always worrying about how to make school easier for kids and are concentrating less and less on giving them a solid basic education.

Mr. Clock is "constantly bedazzled by the high quality of education offered in the Charlevoix schools." I know of three children who have recently moved from the area who were all behind in the grade schools they transferred into. Their parents either had to put them back into a lower grade or hire tutors to help them catch up. My husband and I anticipate a transfer this year too and t'm very concerned that our daughter is going to be behind in her new school in Jackson.

I know that there are many excellent teachers in this school system, but it's way past time to get the school administration to realize that what students need is a solid education, not pinball machines.

Mr. Clock says thnt if Mr. Chew "feels kids deserve a juke box and assorted games"..."that's his business not mine." Well f want to make it my business because it is my kids that are affected by these policies. I'm sending them to school to be educated, not entertained.

How effective are we in improving the quality of life? Resident responds

Editor:

Reading in "FOCUS" (the newspaper for Michigan Association for Retarded Citizens) of their coming conference topic, "Improving the Quality of Life: How Effective Are We?", I respond with best thought and letter. Believing in my light source and not wishing to hide it under a bushel basket, f thought the persons in our communities might enjoy and benefit from it.

It appears that your inquiry and ARC will, in due time, lead us more and more into the awareness and realization of spiritual life, and of the spiritual ways of living which is the higher quality of the two. I "see", in our quest, that "mentally retarded persons" play a most important and, perhaps to some, surprising role.

Through countless federal, state, and local associations, the plight uf "mentally retarded persons" has become rather well known. "Their" handicap recognized, the associations more alert members strive to serve their needs. Having had rather limited but most rewarding experiences working shoulder to shoulder with "mentally retarded persons", I have through the years come to see and know them as more "remarkable" than "retarded".

Seeing more clearly, partly because of them, myself and others like me as handicapped ERC persons, the idea of a marriage of needs appeared to have rather unique and hopeful possibilities.

Unlike ARC persons whose inherited handicap and gift combine to make them humble, meek, and friendly, ERC persons because of "their" inherited handicap and gift tend to become and be "somelhing else".

Startling relatistically, with the nature of things, it can be seen that we humans are made tur love and happiness, and that "something else" uf our ERC selves and spirit has to do with our rather strange loving hearts and wills. However we may believe and want to love impartially all others as ourselves, and live in friendly constructive and sharing relations, we cannot. The self evident and self confirming truth being that fallen ERC loves above all other persons and things to be and be seen "up front". ERC loves, senselessly, to rule others and not be ruled himself. Insofar as his talents and ambitious spirit allows, ERC wants to be number one!

Looking then into our inner-most parts, it can be seen that ERC's heart, like ARC's mind is somehow "caught" and unable to function and love properly (as it would). In all fairness, then, and to balonce the scales, it must be recognized and said that we ERCs are Emotionally Retarded Citizens. Hell bent, as we shall see, to reach and occupy the highest places.

The earthy quaster-idea being our hearts first love and our wills greatest delight. ERC's "quick" mind and understanding, according to the nature of things, are servant to them. "Feeling" being the bottom and determining line, good and right becomes, for him, all the persons and things that serve his ambitions. As can be seen, bad-will reigning peace on earth is impossible.

Being then highly endowed, with ERC spirit and being mentally quick, he proceeds to do his thing and show his stuff. Using his gifts to manipulate, control, exploit and dominate other less gifted and spirited persons. Looking through his master's lense he sees the world as his stamping grounds and rug. And, leaves in his path countless, spiritually bruised, crushed and beaten little ERCs to prove it.

Gifted with "smarts" he sees perfectly clear that laws and commandments are really needed to protect his interests from "others". And, that there is always a more good and right reason for his own violation of them. Using then his smarts and bag of tricks, sometimes like a well placed knee, he rises like cream quickly to the top and up front. Before beaten and envious little ERCs who stand and kneel in admiration and awe.

This brings us to the middle class ERCs, those who are not so highly elassed and gifted. Picking up the standard set, because they're not so dumb, they proceed to love with a passion the persons who might help them up the ladder. And to climb all over squeeze and squash all those standing in their way. Pyramids smaller, they struggle and endure terrilile self degrodation and saerifices to get to the top, for a fleeting moment, 'til, like playing king and the eestle, another smart ERC knocks them off.

Which brings us to the least gifted and ambitious poor little ERCs who struggle for survival. Caught in their "shorts", they are outclassed and beaten however which way they try and, having to take their personal hurt and frustrations out on someone, they push and punish their little wives, beat up the kids, or maybe just klek the dog and hit the bottle.

Having skipped rather lightly over ERC's ego and his spiritual world of pain and delight (the feeling depending on wether you're squasher or squashee), so much for "if it feels good do it."

Hopefully, by all of this and before our marriage proposal, we might see more clearly not only the nature of things, but with it the shining hope of things. That our inherited handicaps, being in truth loving wisdom with glorious purpose, is at birth only an inclination. A spark in our heart of hearts, which, when fanned with temptation, hope, success and reward grows into and becomes an unquenehable self-consuming fire of love. Fortunately, the hope of believers is knowing that another master's spark and fire works the same way. That life's highest quality (purpose and meaning on earth) is to come through faith to see, and love our soul selves as more beautiful than all worldly possessions. And from there, through Grace and its joy, to see most clearly all "others" as equally beautiful and deserving of all our love.

Living then in the good USA, the land of freedom and opportunity, which is all that any ERC could possibly ask for, life passes quickly. It would not only be a shame to blow and waste it, but worse, not to even see its noble meaning.

All of this together not only makes the world go around, ERCs going "bananas" makes it go faster and faster. If then, you were an observer standing still in outer space, you would often hear, coming from our quickly spinning planet, the loud cry and trailing voice uf an ERC made dizzy: Stop, stop I wanna get off....

Well friends, as you probably guessed, being a retired ERC-aholic under promising treatment nyself, I needed to show and admit it in order to affect and propose marriage and eure. But most importantly, I wanted to ocknowledge and thank, in a meaningful way some very special and "remarkable" people who have been a Grace ond blessing to me.

I shall not forget, for one exampie, the "remarkable" and thirsty elderly gentleman. Wouldn't have paid him unusual attention even though, in the course of my work day at Bergmann Center (Charlevoix the Beautiful), he walked by me six or eight times, nn the half hour, to get a drink of water. What "caught" and held my attention and heart, was that after downing each tall glass of woter he said aloud, and kindly, "thank you".

The ERC association, and ERC to ARC marriage envisioned are internal and spiritual matters. If it were otherwise, I would recommend "remarkable" persons be ERC's teachers and paid staff. Their kind of slowness and special gifts being rather unchangeable and for real is so extremely rare and precious, we could hardly afford to pay them. Just being in their midst and open to receive their presence – their kind of goodness and loving spirit – is enough to melt a lot of pedestals and heal many ills. And perhaps, maybe, that's what God had in mind?

So, how effective are we, we don't know. But, if it weren't for "your" ARC efforts, this letter could not have been written. Trusting that there is something of constructive truths and hope in the letter, persons associated with ARC, and in touch with its "remarkable" people, will be the first hear and benefit from them. While, for natural reasons also, persons occupying (in spirit) the highest places will be the last! Thank you (at least six or eight times).

Respectfully,
Anthony Barone

Marlene Caszatt

When you get 'bad deal' speak up

Consumer Speak Up! Did you ever wonder why some people get results when they complain about goods or service and others get no satisfaction no matter how long they try? The answer may have to do with "how" the complaint was made and "to whom."

When you receive a "bad deal" it takes more than ranting and raving to get action. You have to "rant" and "rave" effectively. The first rule is to be brief and state your complaint clearly at the beginning or the end of an oral or written statement. Don't buy the conplaint in pages and pages of nonessential words. Keep in mind that the person you contact considers himself fair, helpful and reputable so a friendly, nonthreatening approach will get you further than a threatening accusing manner. Be diplomatic and concede your own possible mistakes and make some positive comments about the listeners product, company, business, etc. Be straightforward and honest. Be sure and identify yourself and possibly your role, such as, "I'm a mother of four teenagers" or "I'm a teacher".

Complaints need to be directed to the right person or ogency. The Cooperative Extension Service office has a Federal and State Consumer Offices Directory you can request. The directory has the names and addresses of places to write with specific complaints and concerns.

The Federal Food and Drug Administration protects consumers against abuses in the sale of food and drugs. The Better Business Bureau keeps a file of complaints of local businesses and you can contact the Prosecuting Attorney's office for help dealing with local fraud.

Rayders beat Hurons, advance to regionals

The Charlevoix Rayders broke a jinx Friday night.

Charlevoix upended Rogers City, 65-52, to claim its first district basketball title in seven years.

"We've been in the finals four years in a row, but this is the first one we've won," Coach Dave Moyer said afterwards.

The Rayders celebrated by cutting down the nets and picking up their coach and carrying him off the floor to the locker room.

Charlevoix, 16-7, now advances to regional competition at Roscommon. The Rayders will play Sanford-Meridian tonight (Wednesday) at 7 p.m.

Sanford-Meridian, 20-2, has been ranked in the polls throughout the year. Moyer scouted Sanford-Meridian Saturday and, despite the impressive record, thinks his team matches up well with them.

Sanford-Meridian is expected to start a lineup consisting of Mark Patrick (6'4), Scott Clark (6'), Ron Fillmore (6'2), Don Fillmore (6'1) and Matt McGinnety (5'11). Ron Fillmore is just a freshman.

Moyer was extremely pleased with his team's play Friday.

"The kids are showing more patience," he said. "And they're learning patience pays off."

At times it looked like Moyer might lose his patience. He was repeatedly off the bench talking with players and officials.

"When we got that lead there was no way I wanted to lose it," he said.

Charlevoix bolted out to a 14-2 lead and it appeared the Rayders were going to make quick work of the Hurons. But Rogers City bounced back and cut the margin to two points, 15-13. The Rayders tehn took command again and led the rest of the way - although the lead was never comfortable until the waning minutes.

The one-two punch of Bob Plumm and Pat Schmidt KO'd the Hurons. Plumm scored 22 points and pulled down 15 rebounds to pace the Rayders in both catagories while Schmidt contributed 20 points.

Schmidt enjoyed a fine district. He scored 16 points in Charlevoix's 89-46 win over Onaway and he came back with 20 points to lead the Rayders past East Jordan, 60-56.

Masons rally to win cribbage tourney

After trailing for the first nine weeks of the annual Mason-Odd Fellows cribbage tournament, the Masons came from behind to defeat the defending champions by 493 points according to A.D. Cunningham, acting secretary.

With seven tables in play the Masons piled up a total of 613 points to erase the Odd Fellows slim lead and take the 16-week tournament which was first played in 1931.

Ron Geer had 965 points for the Masons. Bill Bergmann was high for the Odd Fellows with 965 points.

The loser traditionally hosts a dinner honoring the winner. This year the Odd Fellows will entertain the Masons at the American Legion post home, their meeting place, at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, March 22. At that time the various awards will be announced and presented.

Softball meeting set for Saturday

Though there's three feet of snow on the softball field and the temperature was down to five above zero Sunday, Jim Willis, City Softball Commissioner, is looking ahead to the 1979 softball season.

In preparation for the season, he has called a meeting of all interested parties including team managers, players and prospective players at 10 a.m. Saturday, March 17, at the community room of the Charlevoix City Hall.

In speaking of the meeting, Willis said there were a lot of plans to be made prior to the opening of the season. He cited such things as a new electric scoreboard, nomination of officials, schedules, teams and tournaments.

"There are a lot of decisions to be made so I hope we can have a good turnout and get things rolling. This snow isn't going to last forever and we have to be ready to move when it goes" Willis said in emphasizing the importance of the meeting.

Willis said he and City recreation director, Dwight Boss, had conferred and discussed many of the issues that will be brought up at Saturday's meeting.

8th graders win Cheboygan tourney

Charlevoix's eighth grade basketball team won the Cheboygan Junior High invitational Tournament by beating Sault Ste. Marie 52-35.

Charlevoix won three straight games to win the title. It's the second year in a row the Rayders have won it.

The Rayders led 16-9 after the first quarter, increased to 24-14 at halftime and yo 44-19 after three quarters. Fred Mielke had 16 points and Craig Klooster 10 for Charlevoix.

Rosa Nettleton recalls some 'firsts' in Charlevoix

EDITOR'S NOTE: In 1879, Charlevoix became a chartered village. To commemorate the 100 year anniversary, the Courier is publishing a synopsis of Charlevoix history, written by long-time resident Rosa Nettleton in 1944. In this, the third and final installment, Mrs. Nettleton tells about some of the "firsts" in Charlevoix.

In 1871, a Grist Mill was started by Geo. W. Esterly of Whitewater, Wisc. Mr. Esterly was father-in-law of John Nicholls, who later located here to look after Mr. Esterly's interest in the lumber mill which he had bought from Reddington & Nelson.

The first school was held in a small log building which stood not far from where the Belvedere Hotel now (no longer) stands. Mrs. Lottie Stockman was the first teacher, receiving $1.00 per week as compensation. Later, her sister Celia Moses, who beeame Mrs. Archibald Buttars taught, also E. H. Green and Fred W. Mayne.

The first bridge across the Pine River was a foot bridge about four feet wide and some two feet above the water, constructed by driving small piles by hand, placing stringers thereon, and planking over, leaving a few planks loose for the passage of small boats. In 1870, A.M. Ross had the contract to construct a new bridge across Pine River.

In 1869, the mails were brought to Charlevoix twice a week carried by a crippled Indian by a strap over his forehead. In 1872, the postoffice was moved from the Fountain City House to the Sentinel office, where the editor did not find the mail so heavy as to interfere with his editorial duties. E. H. Green was the first postmaster.

In 1872, the village boasted 450 inhabitants, a number of new homes, several stores, and a wagon shop.

During the early 70's, the chief project which seemed to occupy the minds of the people was the making of a harbor so that large boats could come through the river into the harbor of Round Lake. This projectwas agitated continually by the Sentinel and taken up enthusiastically by the residents. "Bees" were formed and some money subscribed for the purpose. There were many workers, able and willing to help, and as time went on, Government appropriations were secured and eventually, in July of 1882, the propeller Fountain City, Master Capt. Gibson, entered Charlevoix Harbor and was moored alongside the dock of Upright, Emrey & Co.

This was a proud moment for Charlevoix and large crowds of people gathered near the bridge to clear and welcome this forerunner of the fine steamboats which later came in Charlevoix Harbor.

These shipmasters were well known early Charlevoix residents, and some of our local Captains were known and well loved by their fellows: Among them was Capt. Tim Smith, "Tip" Miller, Capt. Geiken, Capt. P.D. Campbell and Capt. O. R. Vilour, and many others.

In 1865, a township office paid $25 per annum and county office $100.

Stockman's Hardware Store, later purchased by H. Lee Iddings, was said to be at the corner of Bridge Street and "Hoop Skirt Alley".

In 1872, there were so many pigeons in the neighborhood of Charlevoix that the sky was darkened as a cloud by them.

When the first copy of the Sentinel was published (1869), Charlevoix was in Emmet County. An act creating Charlevoix County took effect that same year, shortly after the first Sentinel came off the press.

The Police Department received 16 complaints during the month and closed four. There were three felony arrests and one misdemeanor arrest. In addition, the Department checked two open doors, gave 16 general assists, made 14 liquor inspections, and answered 193 telephone calls.

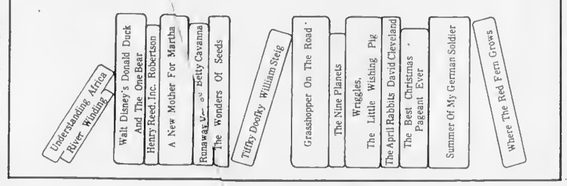
New children's books at the Charlevoix Library



First parenting seminar a success so CHIP Center to do it again

The success of the "It Should be Fun to be a Parent" evening in Charlevoix on February 22, has generated a sequel.

On April 17, from 7 to 9 p.m., parents of children of all ages, may join the second "It Should Be Fun to be a Parent" session at the Charlevoix Elementary School. This session will focus on the subject "Peer Pressure."

The enthusiasm of participants in the first evening and their requests for more such opportunities to get together and discuss being parents in a positive atmosphere spawned the April 17 evening, organizers report.

The format will be similar to that of the first evening: short provocative films will be used to stimulate discussions to follow. The discussion groups, and the films, will be devoted to peer pressure and its role in a child's growing up.

Approximately 60 people attended the first evening. Three short films were followed by small group discussions led by trained counselors from such area mental health and social agencies as CHIP Counseling Center, District Health Department No. 3, Charlevoix Public Schools, Char-Em Intermediate Offices, and the Womens Resource Center.

Prior to thescreening of the films parents gathered in the elementary school library where area book stores had displays of yard cover und poper back books on parenting – covering every subject from teething to sexuality.

The three short films dealt with different aspects parent-child relationships: the generation gap; parent-child communication problems; and adolescent crises.

The discussion groups, therefore, spent a short time taking about the different issues raised by each film.

A questionnaire-survey taken at the close of the discussions showed that participating parents felt the evening was successful and worth repeating.

The questionnaire also showed that parents would like future sessions to deal with specific subjects. Peer pressure was chosen most frequently. Discipline and sibling relationships were close seconds.

Parents also said they would like to attend similar evenings on a regular basis, ranging from once a month to semi-annually.

Oren Schroeder, CHIP Center director, said about the April 17 evening that, "Peer pressure is rightly a concern for parents.

"Parents are very much aware that as their children grow in years the impact and influence parents have lessens and the relationships with friends increase.

"There is nothing wrong with that," Schroeder continued, "but there is a fear. This involves loosing control, taking risks."

Schroeder observed that the "role of parents is to be able to equip children to move towards independence.

"We don't want to keep them under our wings," he stated.

CHIP Center counselors have been instrumental in organizing the "It Should be Fu to be A Parent" sessions, inspired by Connie Pointner of the Charlevoix School Board, and assisted by the Parent Advisory Council and the other groups who helped with the first evening.

Huybrechts to give recital Sunday

The Crooked Tree Arts Council is sponsoring a recital by Paul Huybrechts on Sunday, March 18, at 3 p.m. in the parlor of the Presbyterian Church in Petoskey.

Huybrechts, a baritone, is presently a junior studying voice performance at Grand Valley State College in Allendale.

The recital is the first of a number of local recitals that the Arts Council will be sponsoring in the area.

In 1976, Huybrechts won the Michigan State Vocal Association State Competition, naming him the most outstanding high school vocalist in the state. He also was a member of the Young Americans Summer Musical Theatre Company for two years.

While attending school in Petoskey, Huybrechts appeared in several musicals and concerts with the high school, as well as the Little Traverse Civic Theatre and the Bay View Conservatory. Since then he has studied voice with Waldie Anderson of the Interlochen Arts Academy, and is presently studying with William Beidler at Grand Valley.

His father, Prof. August Huybrechts, will accompany him at the recital.

There will be no admission charge at the door, but donations will be accepted.

Fershee named to rules committee

Judge David W. Fershee, district judge for Charlevoix and Emmet counties, has been appointed to the Rules and Forms Committee and reappointed to the Legislative Committee of the Michigan District Judges' Association. The announcement was made by the president of the association who makes appointments to the committees annually.

The Rules and Forms Committee has the task of developing rules of procedure for guiding cases through the district court in an orderly and just manner and developing forms for use by the public which are readable and easily understood. The committee also hopes to simplify the rules and reduce the number of forms in use in the district court. The Judge encourages anyone who has experienced difficulty with district court rules or forms to contact his office with suggestions.

The Legislative Committee is concerned with introducing and promoting new legislation to create a more efficient, uniform and less costly system for serving the public in the district court. The committee most recently worked on the newly passed laws which de-criminalize most minor traffic violations. The judge indicated that he will be explaining the impact of this new legislation to the county commissioners in his annual report due in March.

... Terry Salmonson

Terry Salmonson is a Charlevoix business man, an artist, and an individual who is keenly interested in young people. This week the Courier talks with him about some of his activities.

COURIER: You call your photography studio the "Aartvark Studio." Why the name?

SALMONSON: It was suggested to me so that we would be at the top of the list in the phone book.

COURIER: How long have you been in Charlevoix, and where did you come from?

SALMONSON: We came here in 1973. I was born and raised in the Detroit area and graduated from Thurston High School in Redford Township. I studied pre-med at Western Michigan and Wayne State and finished the course, but then I met the girl who was to become my wife. My interest turned from the study of medical anatomy to her anatomy, so I changed to the study of fine arts and got my degree in goldsmithing and ceramics.

COURIER: Then what did you do?

SALMONSON: My number came up, so I joined the Air Force. I spent five years in the service, flying F-4 Phantom Fighters. They fly at 1,700 miles an hour.

COURIER: How did you get into photography?

SALMONSON: I bought a camera in 1968 while I was in service, mostly to take pictures of our young son. Then I set up a darkroom and it became a big hobby. I enjoyed it tremendously and people wanted to buy my pictures, so I started to sell. I took a lot of pictures of local scenes and churches.

COURIER: How did you get into professional photography?

SALMONSON: When we got out of service, I went back to Wayne State and got a master's degree in photography. While we were at our last station, in Germany, we dreamed of coming north to set up a business. We did, and for the first year I sold real estate.

COURIER: What kind of photography do you do?

SALMONSON: Pictures of high school seniors, portraits, weddings, commercial/industrial photography, and snneething that is unique - scenic photographs of the area. I rather consider myself a present day Bob Miles, recording local history. Some of the buildings that I have taken pictures of are already gone.

COURIER: What does it take to be a good photographer?

SALMONSON: A background in urt. A photograph is the same as any other art form. It has to be done well technically by a good craftsman.

COURIER: Is there still room in the market for good photographers?

SALMONSON: Yes, for hard workers with expertise. It's like baking a cake - all the ingredients have to be put together properly. They should study in school to get the technical ability and hone it as fine as they can. They will never be finished because there is always something new to learn.

COURIER: You do picture framing, too, don't you?

SALMONSON: Yes, we got into that at the suggestion of Caroline Snizik, who pointed out that there was no picture framing place in town. It has been a tremendous asset to us. We do all kinds of custom framing, including that of my own scenic pictures.

COURIER: What kind of photography do you enjoy most?

SALMONSON: My favorite is probably scenic pictures, a sunset, a stormy day, but I also enjoy factories and machines. They're a challenge.

COURIER: How do you get children to relax for pictures?

SALMONSON: For one thing, I get down on the floor with them. I enjoy kids, and unless they are very timid, I can get them to warm up.

COURIER: Are wedding pictures more elaborate than they once were?

SALMONSON: In many ways, yes. Today's brides are not happy with just a record of the day. They want to capture the mood of the day, I take more candid pictures to show the excitement. I'm always amazed that the nervousness shows in the bride's pictures. It's very precious. I normally shoot 125 to 150 pictures at a wedding. The bride selects from the proofs - 24 eight by ten pictures, and if she wants she can also buy the proof book. I usually spend four to six hours at a wedding, an hour before the service and almost to the end of the reception. I particularly enjoy taking pictures during the service. I shoot from the back of the church with time exposures. I don't use flash bulbs.

COURIER: Do you do your own printing?

SALMONSON: Yes, it's essential to have that control. I also make prints from negatives people bring in. We have a new machine that can print larger phtotgraphs I've done one that's six feet square.

COURIER: Do you still keep up with flying?

SALMONSON: Yes, I belong to the Charlevoix Flying Club. I have a commercial pilot's license and 1,000 hours flying time.

COURIER: What else do you do outside of working hours?

SALMONSON: I'm Cubmaster of Pack 11. Right now we're getting ready for the Pinewood Derby. I helped build the track for it. Scouting has always meant a lot to me and I'm looking forward to starting an Explorer Post when my boys are older. I'm also chairman of the board of council ministries, a lay minister; and high school Sunday School teacher at the Methodist Church. In addition, I'm a certified scuba diver and take underwater pictures.

COURIER: How many children do you have?

SALMONSON: We have two boys. Timmy is 11 and David is 8.

COURIER: Are you glad you moved to Charlevoix?

SALMONSON: We love being here. I feel like I've died and gone to heaven. I love what I'm doing, even though I'll probably never be rich.

THE Pinewood Derby will be held Saturday at the Charlevoix Elementary School from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. The track to be used for the derby was built by Terry Salmonson (right) and Nick DeYoung. The material was donated by Kit Carson. The track is 32 feet in length (racing section is 28 feet) and is equipped with an electronic judge, which determines the order of finish. The derby is double elimination. The pinewood cars (maximum weight of 5 ounces) will get to speeds of 15 to 20 mph on the track. The Pinewood Derby is the Cub Scouts only money making venture of the year. Refreshments and food will be available. The public is invited. The northern Michigan district races will also be held in Charlevoix on April 7.

Demonstration set for Wednesday

A demonstration of punch card voting will be held Wednesday, March 21, at 7:30 p.m. in the Charlevoix V.F.W. Hall.

County Clerk Clarence F. Rabach has called the meeting, saying "This is a big step to take toward improving the election process." He hopes that reaction from those attending the meeting will determine public acceptance.

City, village and township clerks have been asked to notify members of the governing bodies, as well as election inspectors and other interested persons, with the thought that every unit of government should be represented.

Rabach further states that, "school boards and administrators should be interested in a simpler way to conduct un election, maybe more people would come out to vote."

Rick Wylie of Computer Election Systems will demonstrate the equipment and answer questions.

County may use punch cards for elections

At some time in the not-so-distant future, voters in Charlevoix County may be using punch cards to vote for candidates in elections.

Clarence Rabach, Charlevoix County clerk, says that he and other county officials have been in contact with a company that sells and sets-up systems for electronic voting and it is expected that the chairman of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners will soon set-up a committee to study the matter further.

Punch card vnting is not new in Michigan, Rabach points out, saying that the system has been used in Midland County for over 20 years.

It is a simple technique. Voters simply use a stylus to punch out numbered holes. The numbers represent names of candidates which appear on the ballot. To count the votes for each candidate, the voting cards are inserted into a "counting machine."

Each voting precinct may have its own counting machine, or there may be a central counting machine for use by the entire county. Single precinct counters cost about $1,800, and the larger central units cost about $9,000, Rabach says.

It is Rabach's hope that if and when the county goes to the punch card voting system, it will elect to use the central machine. The advantages of the punch card voting machine are mainly two-fold, Rabach says. First, results can be obtained faster and, secondly, money and time can be saved in the printing and counting of ballots. And punch cards are 100 percent accurate, Rabach points out, which will also cutdown on time spent by the Board of Canvassers.

Though punch card voting may be autonation at its finest, there is one thing the counting machine can't do - it can't write-in votes. That job must be left up to humans.

"Freedom of the press is not an end in itself but a means to the end of a free society." –Felix Frankfurter

FAITH SHOWS THE FALSE PREMISE OF THE "NEW MORALITY"

The so-called "new morality" we hear so much about these days is neither new nor moral, because its activities have been practiced and condemned since the dawn of history; and yet it appears to be gaining an increasing acceptance among the very people who would have been outraged at the idea only a few years ago. Nevertheless, under the guise of personal liberty these destructive habits bind us instead with the chains of a self-imposed slavery and demonstrate a total lack of respect for our minds and bodies by subjecting them to proven health hazards. It is not too late to learn that those rules of conduct set forth in the Bible were pretty good ones after all, and that those who follow them and go to Church regularly are always ahead in the long run.

Charlevoix Church Directory

"And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." —Ephesians 5:11

Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
As to be hated needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.
—Alexander Pope

Public not aware of the detailed and exact medical records kept at Charlevoix Area Hospital

Donna White, Assistant Medical Records technician, retrieves a patient's records for Marguerite Ikens, director of Medical Records at Charlevoix Area Hospital. All but the most recent records are being microfilmed for the record library.

The keeping of medical records dates back as far as Stone Age murals found in caves of Spain in 25,000 B.C., according to archaeologists.

Marguerite Ikens' Department of Medical Records at Charlevoix Area Hospital reflects the 26,979 intervening years of refinement.

Mrs. Ikens, department director, however, suspects that public understanding of the importance of medical records has not progressed at the same rate. The general public has scant knowledge of the importance of keeping detailed and exact medical records, she surmises.

Recently she took time to discuss the subject.

Before beginning, however, she stressed that medical records of patients are not made available nor shown to other physicians, outside agencies or any persons without the signed authorization of the patient. The confidentiality of a person's medical records is carefully maintained.

Holding a thick folder she said, "Every patient who comes into the hospital must have a record, whether an in-patient, out-patient ar emergency room patient."

"We have records here that date back to 1919. We are in the process of microfilming all but the most current records," she said.

Showing sample records, Mrs. Ikens explained that an individual's record must contain every fact relevant to his/her health, from age and address to lab tests, medications, Xrays and detailed notes on his/her progress while hospitalized.

"Medical records are a way for the professionals who care for a patient ta communicate with each other," she said.

She explained that everyone who works to help the patient is responsible for filing complete notes, so that the next person – doctor, nurse, lab technicians – knows exactly what has been done and what should be done next.

Patients, Mrs. Ikens observed, most often come in direct contact with their records when they need help with their insurance, or when transferring between doctors; but, she said, medical records serve many more purposes.

To illustrate, she displayed a typical packet of records. Each folder contains a patient's history, a record of lab and Xray procedures, ductor's daily progress nutes, doctors orders for medicines and special treatments such as physical therapy, a chart showing the patient's daily temperature, blood pressure, and weight, a tabulation of fluids the patient has consumed and eliminated, nurses notes and discharge report.

She continued explaining the records give a doctor an overview of the course of an illness, which helps the doctor make decisions about continued treatment.

The personalized aspect of records, which focus on each patient's course of treatment and its progress is a far cry from the early wall paintings in caves. As Mrs. Ikens pointed out, the records are not overburdened with unnecessary paper. They are cuncise and tu the point.

A direct descendant of the cave paintings is the use of medical records to advance the quality of medical practice.

From ancient Egyptian papyrus records in 1600 B.C. to the present, medical professionals have been recording their diagnuses, treatment and results, learning from other's recorded experiences.

At Charlevoix Area Hospital, reviews known as "audits" of particular diagnoses are conducted on a regular basis. These reviews focus on one type of medical problem and study how it was treated of the course of several years. The statistics and data necessary for such studies come from the medical records of every patient. The studies do not focus on individuals but on problems, how they were treated and how they can be better treated.

As an example, Mrs. Ikens told of a study conducted several years ago on all myocardial infractions ("heart attacks").

Using records for data the medical staff made recommendations that all such nutients receive continuuus oxygen and heart monitoring.

Soon thereafter the new Coronary Care Unit was opened and the staff recommendation instituted.

A second audit of the same problem was conducted recently. One uf the facts learned from the records was that 100 percent of the patients received continuous oxygen and heart monitorng. The records showed this had a significant impact on the recovery rate.

In similar manner, data collected from records of hospitals all over the north central region, including several states, is studied by the Commission on Professional Hospital Activities in Ann Arbor. This group provides the hospitals with recommendations about the length of stay for each diagnosis and other important medical information on a regional basis.

The work of a records department requires careful attention to detail. Mrs. Ikens and her staff have the final responsibility to see that records are complete. Her department must collect the data, file the records and be able to instantaneously provide answers to questions posed by the hospital staff, insurance companies or other health agencies.

Thus, a patient's records not only provide vital information to help during the course of his her illness, but they are used to help improve the quality of medical care to the community as a whole.

Wieland nominated for MMPA director

Tom Wieland is one of five men who has been nominated for a director-at-large seat on the Michigan Milk Producers Association. Delegates will select a director at its annual meeting in East Lansing on March 17.

Wieland, 48, farms about 1,500 acres in partnership with a brother and two nephews and milks about 200 cows.

Wieland is chairman of the Charlevoix County Planning Commission and of the county ASCS. He is a member of the Charlevoix Parks and Recreation Commission and is on the Ellsworth Farmers Exchange.

Drive set for uniform house numbers

A drive tn develop a uniform house numbering system in Charlevoix County is underway by a group of township and city officials.

A township spokeswoman told the Courier that such a system is necessary so that emergency ambulance and fire equipment can easily find the houses to which they are called.

"We had an accident in our township," she said, "and it took unnecessarily long for the ambulance to locate the house. The person died. If we had had a numbering system this may not have happened."

A township clerk pointed out that such a numbering system would simplify voter registration as well as other nfficial duties.

A preliminary study of numbering systems was undertaken by the Charlevoix Cuunty Planning Department about two years ago and the results presented to the county board of commissioners. No action was taken at that time, presumably because of the expense involved.

At least two local utilities, Michigan Bell and Consumers Power, have grid systems of numbering which might be used as the basis for a complete county system.

Persons interested in the development of a unifarm numbering system throughout the county are urged to contact their representative on the county board of commissioners. The next meeting of that group is March 14.

Top of the State Alumni Club receives charter

With spectacular decorations, including green-tipped white carnations in large bouquets, a large green and white Michigan State flag, green and white napkins, and with bus boys wearing M.S.U. T-Shirts, all provided by the staff of the Holiday Inn, Petoskey, the newly organized Top of the State Alumni Club of Michigan State University received its charter recently.

With 125 alumni and former students in attendance, the buffet dinner was followed by a welcome from Rich Bartrem, Charlevoix, president of the club. He reviewed the activities leading to the formation of the club and introduced Jack Kinney, executive director of the Michigan State Alumni Association.

Kinney officially welcomed the new club inta the national alumni associatian, now an organizatian nearing 50,000 with clubs throughout the world. He presented Bartrem with the club charter. He then introduced Dr. John Hannah, president emeritus of the university, former administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development, and for the past 5 years executive director of the United Nations World Food Council. Since retiring from that post recently, Dr. Hannah has accepted the chairmanship of a drive to raise 17 million for the purpose of constructing a much needed performing arts center in East Lansing.

His wide ranging talk covered the need for university trustees and regents with educational orientation rather than political. He reviewed recent events at Michigan State and highly praised Dr. Ed Hardin, current president, for his good work in "turning the University around" after its period of NCAA probation. Dr. Hardin is serving temporarily while a search is made for a permanent president to replace Dr. Clifford Wharton, who recently resigned.

Dr. Hannah, who now calls a large farm near Good Hart his home, said he would be pleased to be known as a member of the newly formed club and would look forward to attending future meetings.

Bartrem announced that a meeting will be held in May at which permanent board members will be elected.

Myrlen Stocking named 'Shriner of the Year'

The February meeting of the Northwest Shrine Club held at the Grey Gables Supper Club in Charlevaix, was an outstanding evening of good food, awards, and honors.

President Bill OeWitt announced the appointment of Lloyd Ammeseger as Chief of the Guard to the Mosque of Saladin Shrine in Grand Rapids. He announced, also, that the group who attended the district council of Shrine Clubs at Holland, Michigan, were very happy to learn that their club had been selected as "The Shrine Club of the Year," and to be the recipient of a trophy with their name inscribed on it, which will be held by the club until next years winner is chosen. A large trophy will be placed in the Mosque with "Northwest Shrine Club" inscribed on it as first winner. A plaque was presented to Myrlen Stocking of Boyne City for being the "Shriner of the Year" for the Northwest Shrine Club.

Still further honors were received when John Borton of Charlevoix was elected to be Secretary of the District Council.

These awards and honors set the pace for a pleasant evening sparked by Keith Annears hilarious presentation to Ray Wood for membership inlo the 100 Million Dollar Club, which was given to Ray by his wife, Nancy.

A very sobering announcement was made by Noble Angus Hines concerning a little girl of Sault Ste. Marie, who was burned over 95 percent of her body. The Shriners are assuming the financial problems involved in her recovery.

Assisting the crippled and burned children in the goal of Shriners, and the Shriners are so thankful to the merchants and individuals who help them in their projects, such as the Shrine Band Concert.

Is there anything more rewarding and pleasant to see-than a happy healthy group of playful children?

The next meeting of the Shrine Club will be at the Brownwood Farm an March 22, 1979.

Energy program going strong in Northwest

Having been praised as one of the best directed and operated programs in the State of Michigan, the Energy Weatherization Program of Northwest Michigan Human Services is going strong. Youth crews, under the supervision of a carpenter, are working in each of the 10 counties served by NMHSA (Antrim, Benzie, Charlevoix, Emmet, Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Leelanau, Missaukee, Roscommon, and Wexford).

The purpose of the program is to winterize owner-occupied homes of low-income residents of these counties. Priority is given to the elderly and handi-capped, however, all families and individuals who meet the Federal guidelines are urged to obtain an application.

Through installation of insulation, storm windows and doors, repair or replacement of broken windows, and caulking of air infiltration areas, the programs' objective is to make homes warmer and reduce fuel casts.

An added feature of the program is that it is combined with an agency operated Youth Employment Program which trains and employs low-income youth for the weatherization program. In this manner, employable skills are being taught and used to enable these youth to seek private sector employment.

To find out if your family meets the federal guidelines and to obtain an application for weatherization, contact the Northwest Michigan Human Services Agency office in Cadillac, Petoskey, or Traverse City.

New veterans program does not require immediate decision

The new veteran's pensian program which took effect on Jan. 1 of this year does not require a decision by the veteran until Dct. 1, 1979, according to Ronald G. Geer, Charlevoix County veterans' counselor.

The new program is offering substantial increases to the neediest veterans and a choice of remaining under the old program for those who are better off financially.

VA Chief Max Cleland, in discussing the program, said that "while the new program basically provides the greatest benefits for those most in need, all VA pensioners should take a careful look at all the facets of the program before making up their minds."

"If they chose the new program, payments will be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1979, but the choice is irrevocable" he said.

Pensions are based on income and go to eligible wartime veterans with other than dishonorable discharges who are permanently and totally disabled service. VA considers veterans 65 years and older to be disabled for pension purposes.

VA pensions are also paid to certain need survivors of wartime veterans. Currently, about 2.7 million veterans are receiving pension.

A veteran with one dependent and no other income now receives a maximum pension of $2,544 that will increase to $4,651 under the new program Cleland said.

Other annual pension rates under the new program will be: veteran with no dependents, but in need of regular aid and attendance, $5,680; veteran with one dependent but in need of regular aid and attendance, $6,781; veteran permanently housebound with dependents, $4,340; veteran permanently housebound with one dependent, $5,441; surviving spouse with one dependent child, $3,116; surviving spouse in need of regular aid and attendance without dependent child, $3,806; surviving spouse in need of regular aid and attendance, with one dependent child, $4,543; surviving spouse permanently housebound, without dependent chidren, $2,908; surviving spouse permanently housebound, with one dependent child, $3,645.

The new pension program also includes an $800 increase in the annual rate paid to elderly veterans of wartime periods for when education and loan guaranty benefits had not been available. The language of the bill limits this increase to veterans of World War II and earlier wartime period.

Additionally, Congress approved an automatic increase for pensioners each time there is a cost-of-living increase in social security benefits.

Kathy McFarland, a 17-year-old senior at Alanson, is the recipient of this year's Elk scholarship award.

Kathy plans on attending Western Michigan to study accounting or English.

She will now compete with other winners around the state for additional scholarships.

Pellston

Hiring provokes petition drive

The Pellston Board of Education has named L.J. Ford as principal of the elementary school. But, apparently, some Pellston residents would prefer someone else.

A petition drive has been started in the community asking that "L.J. Ford withdraw and not accept the position of the elementary principal" and that the board "go outside the system and accept applicants."

Jeanne Mallory, who is supporting the petition drive, said Ford is not qualified. She said he also does not have the support of the elementary teaching staff. Reportedly, 14 of the 16 teachers in the school have signed the petition.

Ford has been a government and social studies teacher at the high school.

East Jordan

Dr. Hergt resigns

Dr. Klaus Hergt, physician at the East Jordan Family Health Center, has resigned.

Hergt said the health center position requires a doctor versed in obstetrics, pediatrics, cardiac and chronic care, geriatrics and counseling.

"It is impossible for one man to apply himself to those fields and to continue his surgical education as well," he said.

Hergt has accepted a position at the Community Memorial Hospital in Cheboygan.

He starts his new job June 1.

Petoskey

Ma Bell making changes

Michigan Bell has announced that it will begin phasing out its Petoskey operator service operations this spring as part of a continuing program to give customers greater cost and efficiency benefits from new telecommunications technology.

E.W. "Mike" Reid, Michigan Bell local manager, said the gradual phaseout here will begin in May and is scheduled to be completed in December.

The move, Reid said, will affect 50 regular operators and eight others who were aware of the limited nature of their employment when they were hired.

Reid added that all regular employees affected by the move will be offered other assignments in Petoskey or at other locations – as job openings permit.

Michigan Bell will make every effort to minimize the move's effect on local operator forces, Reid said, pointing out that the company had made its plans known far in advance so that affected employees would have ample time to consider the various options open to them.

He explained that in addition to transferring to other company jobs, affected operators can choose retirement if eligible, or termination with a lump-sum payment based on total years of service.

After the phaseout, Reid said, long distance calls from Petoskey, Cheboygan, East Jordan and Charlevoix will be routed to the company's electronic long distance centers in Saginaw, Lansing or Iron Mountain.

Skier remains critical

Chris Elcoate, a 15-year-old Petoskey High School student, remains in critical condition at Marquette General Hospital after sustaining head injuries in a skiing accident.

Elcoate, a member of the school's ski team, was practicing on a ski slope prior to a ski meet at Pine Mountain when another skier cut in front of him. Elcoate, trying to avoid the skier, crashed into a tree.

Although Elcoate is still in a coma, his eyes have opened and there is movement on his right side.

Fire destroys building

The Petoskey School District's administratinn building was destroyed by fire late Wednesday night.

The school's budget, general ledger, payroll records, checks and other valuables – all kept inside a safe – were salvaged.

The 78-year-old structure, located un Howard Street, was once the home of North Central Michigan College.

The school admunistration staff will temporarily set-up offices at the Resort School.

Consumers pays taxes

Consumers Power Company paid property taxes for 1978 in Charlevoix County amounting to $560,866.94 and Emmet County amounting to $127,545.90 according to R. Dahlquist, the company's Cheboygan Area Manager.

Dahlquist said the payment represents the taxes the utility paid on its building, land, poles, electricity lines, gas pipelines and other property and equipment in the county.

"I never dreamed I'd live to be 95," said Lillian Moore, who turned 95 on Wednesday. Born in Sheboygan, Wis. in 1884, Lillian moved to the Charlevoix area at the age of three. She married Joseph Moore, who died in 1950. The Moores for several years operated the Shell gas station on Bridge Street. Family and friends helped Lillian celebrate her 95th birthday.

Council accepts Gaffney's resignation

The Charlevoix City Council Monday night accepted the resignation of City Manager Norman Gaffney.

Council asked Gaffney to resign last week. Mayor Sam Supernaw said there was "no one particular thing" that led to Gaffney's dismissal. He said council had just become "disenchanted" with his work. Council unanimously accepted the resignation.

Although the dismissal came as a surprise to some, sources at City Hall said it was not totally unexpected.

Gaffney, in his letter of resignation, hinted that personnel problems at City Hall may have caused his ouster.

"Although a short time ago the city passed a new charter adopting the city manager form of government, it is quite obvious that it is difficult for some to withdraw from the old concepts of the strong-mayor council practiced in Charlevoix for several years.

"The city charter (section 2.16 paragraph c) reads as follows, 'The council and its members shall deal solely through the city manager with officials and employees subject to the direction and supervision of the city manager. Neither the city council nor its members, individually, shall give orders to such officials or employees, either publicly or privately.'

"I have received complaints from our city comptroller and others of conferences and meetings going on between councilmen and city employees. It is clearly set forth that the council shall deal solely through the city manager on personnel problems. This has not been done. Section 2.16 (paragraph b, last sentence) reads, 'The council may offer its opinions and freely discuss with the city manager anything pertaining to the appointment, suspension, renoval or disciplining of any such officials or employees.'

"At no time has any member of the council ever to come to me and discussed any personnel problem of any kind.

"There is no question that the change to the city manager form of government institutes many changes. The new charter also replaces the position of treasurer to a comptroller-treasurer position. The elimination of this employee as of April 1, 1979 was concluded before my arrival here.

"The present city clerk did not seek office and her position is to be filled now by appointment. Therefore, it was not my decision. These two factors have demanded changes in duties and functions throughout our staff. It appears the attitude of some of the employees is not good and it is easy to understand 'people just do not like changes'.

"I feel we have made much progress in our tenure here and the city is in a much improved fiscal position and operating as a modern corporation today.

"It is with much regret that I tender my resignation as city manager effective April 1."

Council has 30 days to appoint an acting city manager. It is expected council will act on the matter at its April 2 meeting. It is also expected that comptroller Jim Brinker will be named acting city manager.

Supernaw said he does not know when council plans to fill the position permanently. But, he did add, that council may consider hiring a young city manager - much like Boyne City and Harbor Springs.

Gaffney came to Charlevoix from Ionia last summer. His salary here was $23,000.

In other action, council:

Appointed Joe Morris and Toni Duke to three-year terms on the Charlevoix Planning Commission.

Appointed Mrs. Dinwiddie to a five-year term on the Charlevoix Housing Commission.

Recommended to the Liquor Control Commission that an entertainment license for the Grey Gables be approved. The vote was 4-2. Councilmen George Plumm and Dr. Jeff Purter voted against the recommendation. Plumm stated Grey Gables was a non-conforming use (business in residential district) and that approval of entertainment license would create parking problems on Belvedere Avenue. Owner Dave Phillips said he plans on three dinner-theater programs a week for eight weeks during July and August. He said a maximum of 55 people will be able to attend a dinner-theater.

Denied a variance request on State Street for Rodrick Slone.

Denied a lot split and variance on Dixon Avenue for Robert Brown.

Tabled a lot split and variance in the industrial park for Don Dunkleberg.

Approved the revenue sharing budget with approximately $67,000 to be put in the street fund.

Approved a tax exemption for Charlevoix Products.

School board seeks $700,000 for addition

By FRAN MARTIN

The voters of the Charlevoix School District will go to the polls on April 30 to vote on a $700,000 bond issue to pay for an addition of the Charlevoix High School as the result of action taken by the Charlevoix Board of Education Monday night.

The board approved an election resolution that will add approximately 13,000 square feet to the existing high school as recommended by a Task Force headed by Thomas LaBlance.

The addition, to be constructed in the area between the two buildings, will close the existing breezeway, will enlarge the library, cafeteria and drafting areas now housed in the existing buildings and add a science laboratory and three other classrooms. Plans are on file at the school's business office.

The expansion is recommended to take care of the high school's student population which is now at 610 housed in a building constructed for 475 students.

In adopting the resolution, it was explained that the $700,000 bond issue would require an estimated tax levy of .75 mill on the school district's new equalization figure which would amount to from $10 to $20 per year for the average homeowner.

In other action, the appointment of Clement J. Wagner, a former mem ber of the board, to fill the unexpired term of James J. Haggard was approved. Haggard whos resigned because he has moved from the school district. Wagner will fill the vacancy until it can be filled in the June 11 school election. Nominating petitions for prospective candidates may be obtained at the school business office at 208 Clinton Street or at the office of the county clerk.

Hal Evans was named head track coach for the 1979 track season. He succeeds Plas Presnell who is on leave from the faculty while attending Central Michigan University.

A request for a girls' softball program in the high school was referred to Dale Burge, athletic director, Vane H. Smith, high school principal, and Vincent Olach, business manager, after a delegation attended the meeting to urge the initiation of the program. The committee will make its recommendation at the April 2 meeting of the board.

With CETA funds scheduled to be discontinued by Sept. 30, the board voted to fund three custodial positions from the general fund. The school district presently has eight CETA positions.

The board also voted to accept bids on School Bus No. 12 which is 10 years old, has approximately 108,000 miles on it and is no lunger reunbursable under the transportation program. Information regarding bids may be obtained at the business office.

Supt. Gordon VanWieren and his appointees were given the responsibilities for conducting school elections to be held during 1979.

The split of the former Browe lot on May Street as the site for future building trade homes was discussed. It will now be referred to the proper boards for decision.

Charlevoix County Road Commission loses 53 cents per car on Ironton Ferry

By PEG OHLE

Last year, every time a car crossed the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix on the Ironton Ferry, the Charlevoix County Road Commission lost 53 cents.

This disturbing financial fact was brought to light last week when Fred Welch, engineer-manager of the road commission, appeared before the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

He told the commissioners that the total loss to the road commission in 1978 was approximately $12,000.

"The road commission receives only so much money for roads," Welch said, "and we just can't afford it."

Last year, the ferry operated only 139 days because it was taken out of water for a five-year checkup and installation of a new engine, a procedure which took much longer than anticipated.

During those 139 days, the ferry carried 22,730 vehicles and took in $15,700.50 in fares, or 69 cents per vehicle. During the same period, expenditures amounted to $27,657.33, or $1.22 per vehicle.

While the single ticket one-way fare on the ferry is 75 cents, books of 20 tickets are sold for $10, which brings the average fare down to 69 cents.

The Ironton Ferry has been operating at a deficit for several years. In 1977 it lost $13,000 operating 207 days, and in 1976 it lost over $31,000 operating 241 days. The fare in 1976 was 50 cents per vehicle and $6 per 20-ride book.

The ferry is part of the road system that runs along the south shore of Lake Charlevoix from Charlevoix to Boyne City. When it is in operation it is heavily used by commuters who live in Charlevoix and work in Boyne City, and vice versa. the only other way to make the trip on that side of the lake is by way of East Jordan, which is several miles longer.

The ferry has also been considered a tourist attraction for the county, with visitors adding a "boat" trip to their automobile trip. Many years ago, Ripley of "Believe It Or Not" fame featured the ferry is one of his cartoons.

In practice, the county road commission operates the ferry for the county board of commissioners, who discussed the financial problem last week after Welch's report. There were some suggestions that the fare be raised, but the matter was tabled until March 28, the next meeting of the board of commissioners.

Phillips plans re-enactment of the Battle of Pine River

Dave Phillips, who came up with the idea to make the world's largest cherry pie, is at it again.

This time, to help celebrate the city's centennial, Phillips is planning a play in East Park. The play is to be a re-enactment of the Battle of Pine River, which occurred on July 14, 1853.

The script for the play has been completed. Phillips is now searching for people to play the roles.

To get the word out, Phillips had Swaneelee Alden design a proclamation saying:

"We the people of the City of Charlevoix, Michigan, do bereby proclaim the fourth Saturday in May 1979 as the official day of the re-enactment of the Battle of Pine River, or the historic confrontation of the citizens of Charlevoix and the followers of King Strang of Beaver Island.

"All are hereby invited and requested as well as encouraged to take part in the re-enactment and it's accompanying festivities. Those wishing to participate or contribute of talent, knowledge, or material ... contact David Phillips, Grey Gables Inn, Charlevoix.

"The celebration is in honor of Michigan Week and the Charlevoix Centennial."

Friday, Phillips, SwaneeLee and Sandy Pitcher – all dressed in early American garments – tacked a proclamation on the front door at City Hall as Mayor Sam Supernaw observed.

The play will be held on Saturday, May 26.

April 9 deadline for petitions

Monday, April 9, will be the deadline for filing nominating petitions for the two vacancies on the Charlevoix Board of Education.

The term of Charles Elzinga will expire this year. The second vacancy will be the unexpired term of James J. Haggard who has resigned after serving less than a year. Clement J. Wagner has been named to serve until the vacancy is filled in the June 11 election.

Elzinga said Saturday that he had not made a decision about his condidacy for re-election.

Nominating petitions may be obtained at the school business office at 208 Clinton St. or the office of the county clerk.

COMMENDS WATER DEPARTMENT

I wold like to commend the city for the employees they have in the Water Department, namely, Mike Reinhart, Scott Blanchard and Ed Whitley.

During a spell of our freezing weather I got home from work at 5:10 P.M. and found I had no water. It was reported to the water department via tue gentleman who answers the phone at the police department.

Later on in the evening three gentlemen from the Water Department arrived and worked until about 8:30 getting my water thawed.

I'm sure they were cold and tired and possibly hungry, but tney were so pleasant as if they were just starting out the day and seemed as happy about getting the job done as I was happy to have the water.

Sincerely,
Helen Phillips

Consider not only the initial cost of a house, but also the carrying charges, the cost of owning e house after you've bought it. The purchase price of a house is incurred only once, but taxes, repairs, interest, insurance, and other items recur annually. Many of these expenses vary directly with the size and cost of the house. The ability to make a large down payment or to pay all cash does not reduce any carrying charges except interest and principal payments and often is not a wise decision because of tax and other considerations. Check annual heating and other utility costs, property tax and zoning trends, school system capacities with respect to the age of the community, children, etc. We pride ourselves on our expertise in these areas and can advise you.

In addition, when you want integrity, reliability and fantastic service, call THOMAS REAL ESTATE, 100 Pine River Lane, 547-4494. NOW is a good time to buy a home, as land values are increasing and a home purchased today still makes one of the best investments against inflation. We invite you to come in and visit with our friendly sales staff, who will be happy to answer any questions you have about real estate, whether or not you are presently in the market. Hospital gets approval from health department

Charlevoix Area Hospital has now received full Health Department approval for its expansion and renovation project, Richard Krueger, hospital administrator announced today.

Maurice Reizen, M.D., director of the State Department of Public Health announced his department's approval in a letter to Krueger late last week.

The hospital has now received full approval of its certificate of need application as required by state and federal Law.

Details of blue prints and construction specifications will be submitted to such appropriate state agencies as the State Department of Public Health and Fire Marshals office as those stages of planning are reached.

Ground breaking for Charlevoix Area Hospital's expansion and renovation project is slated for July.

The hospital project involves the renovation of some 9,600 square feet in the present facility and 16,000 square feet of new construction.

A new two-story wing will accommodate patient beds and administrative offices moved from their present locations within the main building.

The space provided by these moves will allow over crowded departments such as Xray, laboratory, emergency room, physical and respiratory therapy to expand.

Charlevoix Area Hospital embarked on the expansion and renovation project to better serve the growing out-patient load at the hospital. No new beds are to be added.

In the past several years Charlevoix Area Hospital has experienced dramatic increases in the use of such key departments as Xray, laboratory and emergency room.

Lake Charlevoix setting for rescue tests

By TOM DAMMANN

An Antarctic camp appeared last Sunday morning on Icy Lake Charlevoix, as a group of men set up tents in a bitter cold northwest wind.

The group was comprised of 10 sheriff's deputies and an ambulance driver from Leelanau, Wexford, Osceola and Mecosta counties.

They were performing day and night simulated under water search and rescue missions under the direction of David Capron, a Leelanau deputy, one of four Michiganders bearing a Master Divers Instruction Certificate, issued by the national professional association of diving instructors.

He was assisted by two other deputies with instructor's permits, who were in direct supervision of the divers.

Chilling experience

Ten sheriff's deputies plus an ambulance driver from four nearby counties spent Sunday morning practicing search and rescue missions in Lake Charlevoix. The object of the dive was to find a diver lost somewhere in the wreckage of the old gambling ship Kueka.

Object of the dive was to locate a diver lost somewhere in the wreckage of the old gambling ship Keuka that had been deliberately sunk off the west shore of Lake Charlevoix almost 50 years ago, Capron informed the curious reporter.

"Earlier this morning we, my assistants and I – also hid a small slides in the wreckage," Capron added. "These have diver's problems written on them."

A typical problem, he explained, was that if a diver had already made one dive of 30 minutes duration at a certain depth and had then surfaced for an hour, how long could he stay below without risking the bends – a painful physical disorder caused by a too rapid return from high pressure to atmuspheric pressure, which may be fatal if the diver is not decompressed.

"This is a risk for any dive deeper than 30 feet," Caprun said. "And so each student must learn how long he stays at these levels."

Divided into pairs the students made one set of dives in daylight and the other after nightfall.

Some of the divers wore wetsuits, others wore dry suits which permit lunger dives and can he worn over clothing.

The instruction program, which Capron has been conducting mostly in the northwest portion of the Lower Peninsula for the past several years, is designed strictly for law enforcement search and recovery he said.

It consists of two classes.

The first runs for six days, eight hours a day with time spent in a pool, lecture room and in open water each day.

The secund, or advanced class, teaches search and recovery techniques for such large objects as drowning victims, automobiles, safes, snowmobiles and for such small objects as knives, guns, tools and the like.

These advanced classes are conducted once a month for nine months, usually at different bodies of water each month.

Charlevoix Sheriff George Lasater said that his departnent has one deputy, Wayne Barnet, who is a certified scuba diver, and that the department hopes to participate in this program soon.

Why was Pine Lake changed to Lake Charlevoix? Ohle finds out

By PEG DHLE

Everyone who has read any history of the Charlevoix area knows that the Lake Charlevoix was once called "Pine Lake".

The "when" and "why" of the change in name has recently come to light as the result of some research done by local historian, William H. Ohle.

A headline in the June 30, 1926 issue of the Charlevoix Courier tops a story which reads in part:

"...at the Tuesday afternoon session (of the County Board of Supervisors), the chairman introduced Mr. John Buys of Grand Rapids, who addressed the board at length relative to resort development in Pine Lake and recommended that inasmuch as there were some 20 lakes within the state named Pine Lake as now used and suggested Lake Charlevoix or Lake Charleboyne."

The Board of Supervisors took his advice, and on that date (June 29, 1926) adopted a resolution asking that the United States War Department be requested to change the name of Pine Lake tu Lake Charlevoix.

The Supervisors state four reasuns for the change:

1. That the name "Pine Lake" fails tu properly identify this body of water, it not being located in a truly white pine country, but is a hardwood tumber country.

That the name "Pine Lake" has been given to a large number of lakes in the State of Michigan, and the result eauses confusion and inconvenience.

3. That the lake lies wholly within the County of Charlevoix, extending inland in two branches about 16 miles from Lake Michigan, and is distinctly a Charlevoix County Lake.

4. It is understood that the change of name is favored by the residents of the county, and by the Boards and Chambers of Commerce and various civic organizations of the several municipalities of the county.

It was several months before authorities in Washington took action on the name change request, but on October 20, 1926, another Courier headline brings the news, "Change of Name Now Authorized." "Resolution Adopted by Board of Supervisors Authorized by the Geographic Board."

The accompanying article tells the story:

At the June session of our County Board of Supervisors, a resolution was adopted whereby the name of Pine Lake was changed to that of Lake Charlevoix, and the county clerk was at that time directed to inform the War Department of this action.

They found upon investigation that some 25 lakes within the boundaries of Michigan were known as "Pine Lakes", and the name Pine Lake being used generally, it became confusing to tourists and other summer guests and hampered the development of resort properties along the lake shores. The word "Pine" is generally assumed to mean that the soil is sandy thereabouts and that the vegetation is limited almost entirely to pine trees, this not being true of Lake Charlevoix shores, as this lake is surrounded by a fine growth of maple, beech, white birch, evergreen, cedars, as well as pines.

A copy of the resolution adopted by our Board of Supervisors was fowarded to the War Department at Washington, and they, in turn, referred the matter to the U.S. Geographic Board, who did, on October 5, 1926, adopt the name of "Charlevoix", which replaces the name of "Pine Lake" in Charlevoix County."

The U.S. Geographic Board made the announcement through United States Senator James Couzens.

And so it was – the desire to establish the Charlevoix area as a distinctive resort community led to the changing of the name of Pine Lake to Lake Charlevoix.

Laura Johnson accepted in Animal Technology Program

By NANCY HAMILTON

EAST LANSING – An MSU freshman from Charlevoix, will be one of 35 students starting in the Animal Technology Program this year.

Laura Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dliver Johnson, Black Road, Charlevoix, will begin the two year program in June.

The Animal Technology Program trains people who have a general concern and welfare for animals coupled with a strong interest in medicine, Walter Collins, head of the Animal Technology Program, said.

Students are selected by faculty and staff in the MSU College of Veterinary Medicine on the basis of cumulative grade-point average, college entrance exam scores, work experience related to the field and familiarity with animal behavior and handling.

Miss Johnson applied to the Animal Technology Program last September. To help prepare herself, she worked at the Charlevoix Veterinary Hospital from May 1976 through September 1978, Miss Johnson said. She was a member of 4-H Clubs. She also showed rabbits in county fairs.

At the Charlevoix Veterinary Hospital she was a kennel manager. She also observed practices and surgery.

"It was a great experience and very helpful," Miss Johnson said.

She will get a lot more experience over the next two years in which she will spend four terms working in the MSU Veterinary Clinic, while at the same time taking classes.

"It's a unique program," Collins said. "Students get on the job training in the clinic."

The Animal Technology Program is part of the MSU Agriculture Technology institute. The program was started in 1969 and was accredited in 1973 by the American Veterinary Medical Association.

"Animal Technology is an exciting and fulfilling career," Collins said. "It's a new profession where graduates who pass the state board exam will be licensed and registered."

The program, which offers training in large and small animal practices, is rigorous.

"The classes sound tough," Miss Johnson said. "You have to keep a 2.0 average on the veterinary grading scale."

Miss Johnson will be home working at the Charlevoix Cooperative Company until the Animal Technology Program starts summer term.

Three big cheers

I would like to give three BIG cheers to Mrs. Gayle Papa, who said everything I felt, but could not put on paper. I could not agree with her more about the pinball machines, Mr. Clocks article, or the educational system here.

Time for Carter to fight inflation

Now that President Carter has things pretty well under control between Egypt and Israel, I wish he would knuckle down and come up with a solution to a problem that could be damaging to the country – and his presidency – than World War III.

Towit: Inflation.

Back in the days when the founding fathers were carving this nation out of the bedrock of political dissent, there was some small sentiment abroad in the land that would have made a king out of George Washington.

Cooler heads prevailed, however, and we denied our chiefs of state the title of monarch and, until recent years, most of the trappings of high office. Gradually, however, for the sake of both safety and appearances, the president and his family have come to live in splendid isolation from the real world.

This situation, of course, is tragic because the president is removed from the real problems of real people. Somewhere along the line President Carter has got the notion that it is more important for Anwar Sadat and Menachem Begin to be on friendly terms than it is for Bob Clock and his friends in Charlevoix to be able to afford hamburger.

Of course there is absolutely no comparison between the seriousness of the two problems. If Sadat and Begin don't get along the worst that can happen is another war in the Mideast. But if Bob Clock can no longer afford to buy hamburger, the economic structure of the free world is in danger.

Carter wouldn't let this happen, however, if he were forced – like an ordinary mortal – to do the week's shopping every Saturday morning with Rosalynn. And even Carter would realize that when hamburger jumps from less than $1 a pound to $1.68 a pound in less than six months there's big trouble afoot.

It goes without saying (but even administration officials are now saying it) that Carter's voluntary anti-inflation program announced last fall is a dismal failure. He predicted at the time that it wasn't a very workable plan, and, by George, he was right.

The president, you'll remember, asked us to hold wage and price increases to seven percent in an attempt to come to grips with inflation. Now seven percent may seem modest and even frugal in the vaulted atriums of big industry and big labor. But for millions of little businessmen and little wage earners across the country seven percent suddenly has become something for them to shoot for when they mark up merchandise and negotiate pay increases.

As a result, inflation has been getting worse every day.

As a one-time boy from Georgia, shouldn't Carter have known better than to dangle seven percent wage and price increases before the American people? Of course he should. If he had said two or three percent, folks would have tried to obbge and we might have ended up with an annual inflation rate of four or five percent. But when the president himself suggests seven percent, we are hell-bent for an inflation rate well into two-digit numbers before the year is over. And the economy can't stand it.

What Carter must do now, of course, is impose mandatory wage, price and profit limits immediately – and then pray like the devil that it's not too late. And he had better not set them at seven percent, which already has proved to be a catostrophic figure insofar as the economy is concerned.

Don't get me wrong. Rigid economic controls are clumsy to administer and brutal to live with. We wouldn't want to have put up with them for very long. But I am convinced that they are absolutely necessary until the economy cools, and until we begin to find answers to the problems posed by short and expensive energy supplies.

In the field of human rights, President Carter is a champ. But in the field of economics, he is racking up a long string of failing grades that are certain to kill him politically in the November elections next year.

House passes equalization bill

A Republican sponsored bill that would provide another safeguard against unfair property tax assessments passed the House easily last week, 71-26. The bill, sponsored by my Republican colleague Roy Smith of Saline, would require equalization of property by class. The six classes of property are industrial, timber cut-over, commercial, agricultural, residential and developmental. Here's how assessments are made:

The assessor from the local unit is sponsored to assess property at 50 percent of its true cash value. However, since different assessors assess differently, the county must come in an apply an equalization factor to bring all local unit assessments up to the same percentage of true cash value. The state then equalizes the assessments between counties to determine the state equalized value – the amount on which taxpayers actually pay property taxes. Representative Smith's bill would require an equalization factor to be applied in each of the six classes of property to bring them up to the 50 percent level.

Here's an example of how the new bill would alter assessments:

Let's say a local unit's residential property is assessed at 20 percent and it's industrial property is assessed at 30 percent by the local assessor. The average assessment for the two classes is 25 percent. When the county equalization board comes in to apply an equalization factor they assign a factor of two, bringing residential assessments up to 40 percent and industrial over the state's 50 percent limit to 60 percent. Under Representative Smith's plan, an equalization factor according to class would be applied to ensure that one class of property owners was not being over or under assessed. In this instance, a factor of 2.5 would be applied to the residential property and a 1.67 factor wuld be applied to the industrial class, bringing them both up to 50 percent of true cash value.

Supporters of the measure believe the new equalization level would help ensure property tax equity. They argue that a properly assessed class of property will not be penalized by an equalization factor greater than one, applied because the entire jurisdiction is under-assessed.

Neil Diamond has another hit - 'Forever in Blue Jeans'

Copyright, 1978, Stonebridge Music (ASCAP)

Forever In Blue Jeans

Money talks
but it don't sing and dance and it don't walk as long as I can have you here with me
I'd much rather be forever in blue jeans (Babe)
Honey's sweet
but it ain't nothin' next to Baby's treat and if you'll pardon me I'd like to say we'd do okay
forever in blue jeans (Babe)
Baby tonite, Baby tonite
by the fire all alone you and I nothing around but the sound of my heart and your sigh

Far be it from me to criticize commercialism, especially highly successful commercialism. If the Bee Gees and Neil Diamond have a handle on what kind of song sells, then they deserve to have hits whenever they open up their mouths in a studio. Can you imagine being able to pick up the phone and give someone like Barbra Streisand a buzz? "Hi, Baby, it's me, Neil. Listen I just got finished dashing off a little something with Alan and Marilyn (Bergman, of course) and I've got a hunch it was made for us. It's about flowers, how I don't bring 'em any more. You game?" Neil Diamond can do things like that. That's commercial success.

So I don't know why he should make me feel so uncomfortable. Every time I listen to one of his songs I feel like I'm swallowing a line – hook and sinker attached. It's that "being conned" feeling. Maybe it was watching that T.V. concert "Love At the Greek" as he made love to his microphone. I felt embarrassed, like I shouldn't be watching. The air was so electric that every girl and woman in the listening audience past puberty was weak in the knees. Neil Diamond can do that. It makes me nervous. It also makes me feel like I have dirty fingernails.

Another telephone call now. This one is to the Levi Strauss Co. or Wranglers if you prefer. "Yeah, it's me, Neil. Here's a little ditty you might be able to use for a fall promo." Of course, it would more than likely be his agent making this one. Neil would be involved in either buttoning or unbuttoning his silk shirt so as to expose just the right amount of chest hair. Maybe it's the song "Forever In Blue Jeans." It's not only timely, blue jeans being a rags to riches story for the clothing industry, but it's catchy as well. It has something to say about materialism. That is, unless you shop where jeans now come in satin or sell for exorbitant amounts a pair because of their cut.

I just read an article about Stephen Bishop, the man who wrote another highly popular song, "On and On" (Down in Jamaica, they got lots of pretty women etc.). He was offered $50,000 by a baby powder company who wanted rights to use his song on a T.V. commercial. He declined, claiming it would ruin his image and the feeling people got from the song. He also stated, during the course of the interview, that he refused to use the word "Baby" in any of his songs because it was just too obviously commercial. If "Forever In Blue Jeans" follows a label on a hip pocket across our T.V. screen in the near future, we'll know for sure that Neil Diamond has sold out. Basically "Forever In Blue Jeans" is a successful song because Neil Diamond sings it, and Neil Diamond has universal sex appeal.

All of this reminds me of a cartoon I saw not long ago. The scene is one of those bohemian "pads". The female co-habitant is about to take leave and shoots her ex-boyfriend one final remark as he lethargically lounges across the waterbed, unkept blue jeans-scraggly long hair, the works. "Frankly Phillip," she says, "I'm sick of you. And I'm sick of denim." Obviously the nation isn't sick of either Neil Diamond or denim – yet.

Transporting fireplace via airplane makes for hot issue

Henry Ford II has been accused of wasting Ford Motor Co. money by giving his girlfriend's fireplace a ride in a company airplane.

My wife is still angry because we left a fireplace behind when we moved out out a house and into an apartment. I told her there was no way to move a fireplace. Now Ford has apparently made a liar out of me.

In a court battle, dissident shareholders in the Ford Motor Co. have charged that Ford improperly spent corporate funds for a host of personal expenses. One of these alieged expenses was for the transportation of Kathleen DuRoss' fireplace through the sky.

The legal document describing the flight of the fireplace called Ms. DuRoss a "close friend" of Ford. Naturally, my wife questioned why Ford would do more for a mere friend than I would do for my wife.

A more important question of course, is why anyone would take a fireplace onto an airplane.

Perhaps it's impossible for Ms. DuRoss to go anywhere without her fireplace. It was just last year that Christina Ford, Ford's estranged wife, testified in court that she is emotionally attached to everything she owns. Maybe Ms. DuRoss has a similar problem.

It could be that Ford gave the fireplace to Ms. DuRoss and that she has become physically attached to it. This would be more serious than an emotional attachment. If Ms. DuRoss' elbow is permanently imbedded in the fireplace mantel, she can hardly go flying with Ford without taking her fireplace with her.

If this is the case, it's easy to see why Ford and Ms. DuRoss might use a company plane, rather than take a commercial flight. It would be awkward for them to go up to the TWA ticket counter and ask to buy a seat for a fireplace.

"Smoking or non-smoking?"

"Does the chimney give you a hint?"

But enough of this foolishness. We all know the only valid reason for a flying fireplace, don't we? It's romance.

If you fly often, you know the greatest risk isn't crashing, it's the person sitting beside you. The way people are seated in large airliners today, in theater-type rows, there is no security in traveling in twos. Both flanks must be protected, or a trip can be ruined by a drunk or a Goldwater supporter.

Given their druthers, most people would rather sit beside an open fire. This is a romantic tradition dating back to the days when people dwelled in caves. Early man and woman first discovered the delights of rubbing against each other while removing cinders from each other's eyes.

Most scientists think people are turned on when electric lights are turned off and there is only the flickering light from the fireplace to see by. Faces are obscured by mysterious shadows and, in the soft darkness, partners form attachments that would have been impossible if she had been able to see that his nose is a hood ornament.

So why not fly while sitting beside a blazing fireplace or lying beside it on a bear rug after seat belts are unbuckled? Coffee, tea or another log on the fire?

As I cleverly pointed out earlier, it's not practical to take a fireplace on a commercial airliner. To get the DuRoss fireplace aloft, it would be necessary for Ford to use a company plane. Those dissenting shareholders should understand this.

Mind you, I'm not pre-judging this case. Ford and Ms. DuRoss so far have made no public comment on the shareholder's charges. I'll wait for a judge or jury to decide whether the fireplace really flew.

Personally, I hope it never happened. Or I hope the fireplace exploded when a pigeon bumped the tail of the airplane. I'm tired of my wife telling me if a man really cares for a woman, he will move her fireplace.

Lately she has been hanging around our old house, trying to achieve a physical attachment. Will Blue Cross pay for grafting a mantel to an elbow?

For the seventh consecutive year, the Little Traverse Civic Players performed before students at the Charlevoix Elementary School. The theater group presented "Sleeping Beauty." Last week they performed before grade school students in Petoskey and Harbor Springs.

The Little Traverse Civic Players "brought live theater" to Charlevoix Wednesday morning. Director June Zoerhof explained that the theater group tours area grade schools to give children an opportunity that otherwise they would not have to see live theater. The 12 member cast performed "Sleeping Beauty" here.

Most of the cast members of the Little Traverse Civic Players are high school students at Petoskey. One member, though, is from Charlevoix. Angie Spieles. Angie played Belita in "Sleeping Beauty."

Probation Department supervises 196 people during 1978

The Probation Department of the Charlevoix District Court had 196 people under its supervision during 1978.

This information, along with other facts and figures, was presented to the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners last week by Jennifer L. Brindel, Chief Probation Officer.

In her report, Mrs. Brindel explained that the main function of the Probation Department is to supervise misdemeanor offenders who have been placed on probation or delayed or deferred sentencing by the District Judge.

A defendant is placed on probation for one of two reasons:

1. When it appears to the satisfaction of the court that the defendant needs direct supervision by the Probation Officer due to his previous record or past conduct, or

2. If, upon the satisfaction of the court, it appears that the defendant is not likely to engage in an offensive or criminal course of conduct, and that the public good does not require that the defendant be incarcerated in the county jail.

In addition to supervising probationers, the Probation Department has several other duties and responsibilities, Mrs. Brindel notes.

One of these is pre-sentencing investigations. One hundred and forty such investigations were made in Charlevoix County last year in order to obtain information that would be helpful to the District Judge in sentencing the defendant.

Another duty of the Probation Department is that of coordinating the "driving while under the influence of liquor" (DUIL) court referral program. This program enables the first offender an opportunity to plead to the lesser charge of "impaired driving" if he completes a series of alcohol education classes. Upon completion of the classes, offenders are returned to court and sentenced accerding to their prior driving record and cooperation with the referral program. There were 37 such referrals in Charlevoix County last year.

The Volunteer Work Program is also under the jurisdiction of the Probation Department. Defendants who have been found guilty of a non-violent crime such as larceny, alcohol-related offenses, or violation of the controlled substance act may be sentenced to work for the county or a non-profit organization without pay for a specified number of days. Last year, 16 Charlevoix County offenders spent 308 hours doing volunteer work.

Personal Insight Classes are offered as part of the deferred sentencing program for simple larceny offenders. Those who qualify for the program will have their conviction dismissed if they comply with all the conditions of deferred sentencing, including attending classes through The Counseling Place and paying a fee of $25. Four people from Charlevoix County attended these classes last year.

Drug Awareness Classes are provided by the District Health Department for controlled substance abusers. As part of an offender's probation, he must attend classes for six weeks and pay a fee of $25. Thirteen people were referred to Drug Awareness Classes last year by the Charlevoix District Court.

The Probation Department is also responsible for recommending, as part of sentencing, restitution from defendants who have had the services of a court-appointed attorney. Last year, $1,499.20 was collected for Charlevoix County to help pay for court-appointed attorneys.

Another type of restitution, that paid by the defendant to the injured party, may also be ordered by the District Judge. The Probation Officer determines the amount of restitution and has the responsibility of collecting it. In 1978, a total of $3,352.57 was collected from Charlevoix County.

In addition to the above referrals and follow-ups, the Charlevoix County Probation Department made 51 general counseling referrals and showed its DUIL slide presentation 27 times during 1978, Mrs. Brindel concluded

...Mike Davis

Mike Davis is Youth Activities Coordinator for Charlevoix and Emmet Counties. This week he explains his job and tells about some of the programs he has started and others planned for the future.

COURIER: What is the purpose of your program?

DAVIS: To prevent delinquency among kids eight to 15 years of age by giving them something to do – sports, arts and crafts, even jobs.

COURIER: Under whose jurisdiction do you work?

DAVIS: The Charlevoix County Department of Social Services, the Emmet County Department of Social Services, and the Probate Court.

COURIER: Where do your funds come from?

DAVIS: The Office of Juvenile Justice Program. It is a joint basic grant which we share with Big Brothers/Big Sisters. We get $17,000 and they get $13,000.

COURIER: What programs are you working on?

DAVIS: Nearby, one of the most important ones is trying to acquire some pubbc recreation land for Bay Shore. There is a unique situation in Bay Shore because the village houses an Air Force Tracking Station, resulting in a substantial number of young famibes but there is a lack of available space to hold organized, or even unorganized, recreational events. We have approached Hayes and Resort Township officials about this lack of recrestional public land and informed them of possible sources of funds with which to acquire and develop some pubbc land for playground programs, ball leagues, etc.

COURIER: What sports programs have you developed to date?

DAVIS: Last fall we had a soccer league with teams from Charlevoix, Boyne City, Petoskey, Harbor Springs, and East Jordan. We had a cross-country ski league in the same towns this winter, as well as cross-country ski clinics.

COURIER: What do you have planned for the future?

DAVIS: This summer we want to have all-sports camps in Charlevoix to kids who want to concentrate on basketball, softball, football, soccer, etc. This would be for kids who can't go away to camp but could get some sports training at home. We're talking about a park playground program in Norwood Township and a program on Beaver Island. We'll also be working with the Institute of Youth Sports in a program to train volunteer coaches how to deal with kids. We're going to apply to the WRC for funds. Tbis is a conservation program to provide jobs for kids who wouldn't participate in sports or arts and crafts. We are golng to try to start an amateur boxing program in Charlevoix and Boyne City. Right now we're waiting to hear from the AAU about that. Again we will have a day camp program at Whiting Park. All in all, we will be working with the recreational program directors in the cities. We'll plan and administer the programs but they will be implemented by the recreation directors. In short, we will have everything we had last year, and more.

COURIER: Will you have similar programs in Emmet County?

DAVIS: Yes, we're working on a youth center in Cross Village and will soon start a program in Mackinaw City, along with other activities throughout the county.

COURIER: Where dn you get ideas for your programs?

DAVIS: We have Youth Advisory Counells in both Charlevoix and Boyne City. They refer young people to us and propose programs. That's where the boxing idea came in. The councils are made up of school people, police officers, etc.

COURIER: Do you do any counseling?

DAVIS: We have what is called "The Juvenile Deterrent Program", which is a counseling program. Various law enforcement agencies refer troubled youths to us for counseling and placement in various programs, depending on their interests. Susan Hornbedt Keiswatter is the counselor.

COURIER: How long have you been working with the Youth Activity Program?

DAVIS: Since last October 9. I replaced Gary Hice, who took a new job.

COURIER: What kind of help do you need?

DAVIS: We need volunteers for all our sports programs, arts and crafts, music, anything that people want to share with our kids.

COURIER: Where is your office?

DAVIS: I share an office part time with two other people in the Charlevoix Social Services building. Mostly I work from my car.

COURIER: Where do you live?

DAVIS: My wife, Cathie, and I live in Walloon Lake. I grew up and went to high school in Boyne City.

COURIER: What hobbies do you have?

DAVIS: Saibing, cross-country skiing, soccer, reading, photography, and pipes.

Rayders bumped by Tawas Area in regional final, 63-54

It would not be inappropriate if the Tawas Area Braves adopted "Amazing Grace" as its new school fight song.

For the Braves have 6'5 center Kevin Grace to thank for their 53-54 triumph over Charlevoix in the Class C regional final at Roscommon Friday. Tawas Area now advances to quarter-final action Wednesday night against Iron Mountain.

Although amazing might be too strong a superlative to describe Grace's play Friday, the junior pivotman was certainly effective. When the Braves needed a basket it was usually Grace who would get it for them:

"He hurt us," Charlevoix Coach Dave Moyer said afterwards. "He definitely hurt us."

The Rayders, after falling behind 46-33, made their move at the start of the fourth quarter. With Pat Schmidt popping in six points, Charlevoix rattled off 11 unanswered points to trim the deficit to two points, 46-44. It looked for a moment like the Rayders might pull it out - much like Wednesday night against Sanford-Meridan.

But the momenteum suddenly swung back to the Braves.

Schmidt, the Rayders big offensive weapon, fouled out with 5:34 remaining and Charlevoix trailing by three, 47-44.

Then, with the score 55-52, Grace tallied twice in a 15 second span and for all practical purposes that was the ballgame.

"We just ran out of gas and out of timeouts," Moyer explained.

The Rayders opened the game with a flurry. Charlevoix jumped out to a 9-2 lead. But the Rayders could not hold it. Tawas Area tied it, 9-9, and finally went ahead early in the second quarter - never to look back. Charlevoix's last lead was 13-11.

It was Grace who sparked the Braves surge, scoring 12 of Tawas Area's first 15 points. For the game, he finished with 29 points.

Charlevoix was plagued by turnovers. The Braves played a 2-1-2 zone defense and the Rayders repeatedly turned the ball over after trying to force it inside.

"We couldn't utilize the middle," Moyer said. "And when we did we missed a lot of easy buckets."

Schmidt was the only Rayder to score in double figures. The senior forward ended a fine season with 18 points. Junior center Ken Otmanowski added nine points and 13 rebounds as Charlevoix outrebounded Tawas Area, 37-28.

The Rayders had advanced to the regional final after beating Sanford-Meridan, 74-71.

Charlevoix trailed in that contest, 71-68, with under a minute to play. But senior guard, Kevin Kratt, made two steals that resulted in layups to give Charlevoix the win.

The Mustangs led virtually the entire game. At one point in the third quarter the margin was nine points, 39-30. But with Schmidt, Kratt and Tim Hoffman providing the punch, Charlevoix fought back and won.

Hoffman gave the Rayders a big lift, scoring 14 of his 18 points in the second half. Schmidt was the game's top scorer with 23 points while Kratt added 12 and senior forward Bob Plumm 10.

The Rayders finished the season with a 17-8 record.

"I think we got a lot out of the kids this year," Moyer said. "We had some problems early in the season, but we bounced back and then went on to win the district.

"But I'm also a little disappointed because I think we should have won that game (Tawas Area)."

Townhouse, Kit Carson win in Jimmy Bogart tournament

Townhouse and Kit Carson emerged as winners in the Jimmy Bogart basketball tournament.

Townhouse won the A League tournament by nipping Depot Restaurant, 69-65, in overtime.

Townhouse raced out to a 15-6 first quarter lead and then increased it to 41-23 at half. But the Depot Restaurant came roaring back in the second half to outscore Townhouse 35-16 to force the game into overtime. The losers could have won the game in regulation play. They had a two point lead with just seconds remaining when Steve Dunkleberg of Townhouse hit a short jumper to knot the score at the horn, 57-57.

Dunkelberg led all scorers with 25 points while Rich Lesley added 16 for Townhouse. For Depot Restaurant, Ralph Bedford had 21 points, Chuck Stanek 14 and Al Looze 10.

To reach the finals, Townhouse had eliminated Site Planning while Depot Restaurant took care of F. B. Taylor and Swanson's.

KIT CARSON WINS

Kit Carson took Fishback & Natkin to win the B League tournament.

The winners jumped out to a 36-21 halftime lead and then held on to beat Fishback & Natkin, 62-56.

Dale Boss canned 24 points for the winners while Mike Crain and Mark Westenbrook added 12 each and Ed Holm 10. For the losers, Dave Storm had 18 points and Bob VanderMullen 11.

To reach the finals, Kit Carson had eliminated Boyne Machine and Charlevoix County State Bank.

Kit Carson beat County State Bank in the semi-finals on Wednesday, 59-43. Boss scored 21 points and Crain 19 while Don Ward and Larry Skippergosh had 19 and 12 points, respectively, for the County State Bank.

Earlier in the week, County State Bank beat Hoskins, 59-57. The game was tied, 37-37, after three quarters. Skippergosh and Steve Martinus had 13 points each and Calvin Johnachcek 10 for the winners while Randy Holecheck had 23 and Jeff Brodine 12 for the losers.

Fishback & Natkin had posted wins over Medusa, 73-37, and Wojan's, 52-47. Against Medusa, Dan Olenziak had 26 points, Jim Olenziak 18, Dave Jones 13 and VanderMullen 10. For Medusa, Doug Winnell scored 12 points. Against Wojan's, Jim Olenziak had 18, Storm 13 and Charlie Criswell 10 while Stan Martin had 17 and Topper Carey 14 for Wojan's.

Two points for Depot Restaurant

Perfect ice boating conditions were produced by the recent series of thaws and refreezes on Lake Charlevoix. Steve Johnson and cohorts from Irish Boat Shop's crew spent Friday's lunch hour testing wind and ice. Johnson reports he icesailed from Irish docks to Ironton and back in less than 20 minutes. Johnson compared sailing an ice boat to sailing a Hobie-Cat, except that flipping on the ice was a bit more painful than in the water. Johnson claimed, therefore, that he doesn't flip. FAITH SHOWS THE FALSE PREMISE OF THE "NEW MORALITY"
The so-called "new morality" we hear so much about these days is neither new nor moral, because its activities have been practiced and condemned since the dawn of history; and yet it appears to be gaining an increasing acceptance among the very people who would have been outraged at the idea only a few years ago. Nevertheless, under the guise of personal liberty these destructive habits bind us instead with the chains of a self-imposed slavery and demonstrate a total lack of respect for our minds and bodies by subjecting them to proven health hazards. It is not too late to learn that those rules of conduct set forth in the Bible were pretty good ones after all, and that those who follow them and go to Church regularly are always ahead in the long run.

"And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." —Ephesians 5:11

Vice is a monster of so frightful mien.
As to be hated needs but to be seen;
Yet seen to oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.
—Alexander Pope

VerWys named 'Officer of the Month'

James VerWys, a seven-year veteran with the Los Angeles Police Department, was recently chosen Officer of the Month by the Downtown Kiwanis Club of Los Angeles.

VerWys, 38, is the son of Mrs. Abe VerWys and the late Mr. VerWys and a graduate of the Charlevoix High School.

The saga that led to the citation by the Kiwanis Club started Dec. 3, 1976, when VerWys, who resides in Buena Park, Orange County, Calif., with his wife, Dorothy, was called for immediate duty in downtown Los Angeles. Riding his motorcycle, his favorite mode of transportation, he was about to enter the freeway when a speeding car collided with the motorcycle, knocking him unconscious to the pavement with a severely shattered leg.

He spent the next 243 days in the hospital where he was in constant pain during the numerous operations to rebuild the injured leg. During this time he received little encouragement from his doctors whose prognosis was bleak.

Still on crutches more than six months later, VerWys returned to the department to assist in any way he could. He was assigned as senior desk officer and coordinator of the public inebriate program for the downtown area.

On Oct. 22, 1978, 22 months after the accident and after still more surgery, VerWys was returned to full and unrestricted status with the Los Angeles Police Department.

Throughout his agonizing months, VerWys exhibited the highest degree of morale and physical courage in returning himself to the ranks of his fellow officers. For this achievement he has been commended by the Chief of Operation-Central Bureau, his commanding officers and won the respect and admiration of the men and women at Central Area

Davis introduces bill on fishing rights

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- Legislation aimed at alleviating Michigan's Indian fishing controversy was introduced in the U.S. Congress recently by northern Michigan Rep. Bob Davis.

The two-bill package includes a joint resolution allowing individual states to regulate Indian hunting and fishing both on and off reservation lands, and a bill abrogating those sections of treaties which have been, or may be, interpreted to give Michigan's Indians unlimited hunting and fishing rights.

The second bill also provides for the State of Michigan to establish hunting and fishing regulations, and to enforce those laws. The bill authorizes possible payment of a cash settlement to the Indian tribes to compensate them for the loss of these rights. However, it has been argued that these Indians were never given unlimited hunting and fishing rights. The bill includes a clause stipulating that there must be proof the rights existed before the compensation is made.

"Michigan has drawn up strict laws and regulations in order to protect and preserve our fish and game. We have learned that our natural resources must be managed in order to be maintained. The State should have the power to enforce these laws as they apply to every citizen of the state," Davis said.

Davis told his colleagues on the floor of the House that the courts have left no alternative but to take "swift and decisive action to seek a desperately needed solution before fish and game stocks are completely destroyed or the situation erupts into violence."

Davis said he has received the backing of the Michigan United Conservation Clubs.

Jazz festival on radio

MT. PLEASANT – National public radio will take listeners back to a hot summer day in June, 1978, when President Carter sang "Salt Peanuts" to the nation and put the presidential seal of approval on jazz.

The White House Jazz Festival will be broadcast on "Jazz Alive!" at 11:06 p.m. on March 25. It can be heard on Central Michigan University's public radio stations, WCMU-FM, Mt. Pleasant, and WCML-FM, Alpena.

JANE BOGART, bowling for Bogart's Roofing in the Gutter Gals League, rolled a 710 series recently, which ties her for the second highest series bowled at the Paul Bunyan Lanes in 18 years. Jane had games of 225, 211 and 274. The 274 game is the second highest ever bowled by a woman at Paul Bunyan. Previously, Jane's best efforts were a 610 series and a high game of 268.

Crane Corporation to acquire Medusa

Scott Rogers, president of Medusa, has announced that th Crane Company has made a "generous offer to Medusa shareholders and it appears there will be an early spring acquisition."

Rogers made the disclosure in the company's winter publication, Medusa Mirror.

The Crane Company is the fourth major corporation which has tried to acquire the Medusa Corporation in recent years. Earlier attempts by Moore McCormack Resources, Inc., Oglebay Norton Company and Kaiser Cement and Gypsum Corporation were unsuccessful.

The Crane Company is New York based that manufactures fluid and pollution controls, steel, building products and aerospace and aircraft products.

According to Elbert Kaiser, former plant manager at the Medusa plant in Charlevoix, the Crane Company has approximately 85 percent of the Medusa stock.

Medusa will become a subsidiary of the Crane Company with company headquarters to remain in Cleveland. Medusa will continue to have its own board of directors although changes are likely in the makeup of the board, Kaiser said.

Medusa has seven cement making plants, including Charlevoix's. The company has embarked on a $50 million expansion and conversion program at its Charlevoix plant. The project is expected to be completed by 1980 although theKiln conversion should be completed by fall.

The Petoskey Board of Education will ask voters for 18.95 mills to operate the schools for two years.

The board set the millage at a meeting Monday.

Store improvements discussed

A committee has been formed here to encourage local businesses to fix up their stores and to make the downtown area more attractive.

The committee will attempt to make businesses aware of their efforts and also give them information about tax credits.

A few years ago, a project of this type was discussed but nothing ever materialized because store owners were afraid of what it would do to their taxes.

Pellston

Smyth's contract to expire

Pellston Public School Superintendent Hugh Smyth apparently will not be back for the 1979-80 school year.

The Pellston Board of Education voted not to rehire Smyth at a meeting Thursday night. The vote was 4-3 with board President Gerry Mallory casting the deciding vote. Immediately afterwards, the three board members who voted to retain Smyth left the meeting.

Board member George Rose, who made the motion to let Smyth's contract expire in June, said Smyth "is not a good administrator." Smyth has been at Pellston for over two years. His contract expires on June 30.

Mancelona

School could lose $18,000

The Mancelona School System could lose up to $18,000 if Gov. William Milliken cuts state funding for education – as he is presently considering.

School Superintendent Michael Murch told the Antrim County News that a cut could be potentially serious since it would come late in the school year when most of the $1.6 million budget has been committed.

"We've stopped purchasing anything except absolutely essential items, until we know how we stand," Murch said.

Charlevoix

County won't subsidize Corps

The U.S. Corps of Engineers wants to deepen the Pine River Channel to accommodate larger boats, but the utility lines (electric, water and sewer) which are buried in the channel are causing a problem.

Some time ago, the City of Charlevoix advised the Corps that it did not have the $250,000 it would cost to move the lines, and last week the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners said the same thing.

Commissioner Lee Moerland recalled that when the channel was last dredged, the lines were set at a depth of 23 feet as requested by the Corps, and he could see no reason to pay for moving them now.

The deepening, to 27 feet, would permit larger ships to carry coal to the Northern Michigan Electric Cooperative at Advance and crushed stone to the gravel yard at Ironton.

The general sentiment of the county commissioners was voiced by commissioner Keith Annear when he said, "The county is not in a position to subsidize the Corps of Engineers or private enterprise."

Council approves $2.9 million budget for '79

The Charlevoix City Council Monday night approved an operating budget for the 1979 fiscal year.

The fiscal year starts April 1, 1979 and concludes March 31, 1980.

The budget shows total income at $2,822,503 and total expense at $2,945,775.

"It's a pretty tight budget," Comptroller Jim Brinker told council.

It is expected the city will collect $418,000 in taxes. The city will assess 11 mills this year, an increase of one mill over a year ago. The additional mill should bring in $38,895, Brinker said. Two mills will be assessed for the General Debt Service.

Despite approving the budget, council is in somewhat of a quandry concerning its financial future because of the Headlee Amendment.

According to Brinker, there is still a question about how the millage rollbacks will be handled. If the rollback is from the "actual rate levied" the city could lose nearly $58,000. If, however, the rollback is taken from the "maximum authorized" it would not greatly affect this year's budget.

In other action, council:

+Discussed extending the sewer line into Charlevoix Township along U.S.-31 South. Township officials said the township would pay for the installation of the extension.

City officials said they would like to meet with Oscar Stroud, the township supervisor, and go over details of the proposed extension.

Council indicated that if the sewer line was extended the rates would be doubled for those in the township who would tap-in to the extension.

There was objection to the proposed extension by Ivan Whitley and Ken Staley.

Staley said an extension would turn U.S.-31 into a "commercial strip" and the city's downtown would be a "forgotten area."

"It would be the beginning of the end (for the downtown district)," he said.

Staley said he would favor a package deal - an extension and annexation.

"That way everything would be on a equal basis and the city could control the kind of developments out there."

Mayor Sam Supernaw said the added income would "help the deficit" at the city's sewer plant. He said he did not think extending the sewer line would hurt an annexation move because township residents on the extension would be paying double.

+Named Brinker acting city manager, zoning administrator, city treasurer and street administrator.

+Named Deanne Balch city clerk.

+Appointed Bill Bellows to a one year term on the Charlevoix Planning Commission.

Held a hearing on the codification of the city ordinances.

+Delayed action on purchasing two police cars.

+Announced that May 7-11 will be Spring Clean-Up Week.

+Passed a resolution proclaiming April 15-21 as Private Property Week.

+Passed a resolution thanking Councilman George Plumm for his six years of service on the council. Plumm will be replaced by Shirley Roloff.

+Heard from Jo Anne Bier, who had several questions and conunents about the Big Rock Nuclear Power Plant in lieu of the radioactive leak at the Three Mile Island Nuclear Power Plant in Pennsylvania.

During the discussion, Whitley asked council if it intended to buy into a nuclear plant - as other cities are considering - to meet future energy needs.

Earl Muma told Whitley council is leaning towards investing in a coal firc plant.

Whitley said if council does elect to buy into a nuclear power plant it should be put on the ballot first so the people can voice their sentiments.

So far - No asbestos found

The Michigan State Public Health Department has found asbestos, a suspected cancer-causing agent, in 81 samples of materials taken from 52 different schools. So far, though, no asbestos has been found in school buildings in Charlevoix.

Business Manager Vince Olach has examined the architectural and construction plans of the school buildings and has not found any asbestos, which is considered a good insulator of sound, electricity and heat.

Olach admitted he is not certain what type of material was used to insulate the pipes at the elementary school. He said the insulation is encased and that there is no split in the casing so a sample of the material can be analyzed.

A state official told the Courier that most of the samples tested - and found containing asbestos - have been used for pipe insulation. He added this would be easy to control by boxing in the pipes.

Olach said he will keep a watchful eye on the situation. He said the pipes are above the ceiling so if the casing should split the ceiling would act as a protective cover.

According to Dr. Lyman Condie, of the Environmental Prote:tion Agency, the asbestos hazard in schools is real but not widespread.

"Although more than 20 percent of Midwest schools probably contain asbestos sprayed material, the percentage of children that may actually be exposed to that asbestos is relatively low."

He emphasized that asbestos is dangerous only when asbestos sprayed material is damaged and asbestos fibers are released into the air.

"Once the fibers get into the lungs through the nose or mouth, they stay there for life," Condie said. "Asbestos fibers are very hard to detect inside the body, and they're virtually indestructible."

The EPA banned the use of asbestos in 1973 when it was discovered that it could cause lung cancer. Prior to 1973, however, the interiors of many buildings were sprayed with materials containing asbestos.

"Our major concern is schools, where damaged or deteriorating ceilings and other asbestos coated surfaces may expose a large number of children to airborne asbestos fibers," said John McGuire, of the EPA. "Since school children are young and since asbestos related cancer takes 20 years or more to develop , there is a good chance that exposed children may succumb to cancer within their lifetimes.

"That's why we must take precautionary measurers now," he added.

All school officials are being asked to check buildings for asbestos materials.

Vietnamese refugee arrives in Charlevoix, but little is known about him

A smiling but perplexed 21-year-old Vietnamese refugee arrived in Charlevoix late Thursday night.

And almost a week later, still not much is known about Dang Phuec Ngoc - except he has a hard time talking and understanding English.

Dang came to Charlevoix through the resettlement program of the Church World Services in New York City. The United Methodist Church of Charlevoix is the sponsor and Dang is staying with Bob and Fran Hooper.

It is known that Dang was born in Vietnam and lived near the Cambodian border. He attended a university in Hue for three years.

But that is about all that is known about him.

It is believed he has a family, but the whereabouts of his family is not known. It is also unclear why he left his homeland - and when.

Mrs. Hooper plans on taking Dang to Traverse City later this week where a woman who speaks Vietnamese lives.

Mrs. Hooper called the woman over the weekend and let Dang talk to her. She said Dang seemed "quite happy" to have talked to someone who speaks his language. Mrs. Hooper, however, didn't understand too much of the conversation. She hopes to find out more about Dang when they visit the woman in Traverse City.

So far, the Hoopers have been showing Dang the area to get him familiar with the surroundings.

Happy faces

Billy Graham crusade coming in July

Eight churches and pastors of Charlevoix are uniting together in the presentation of a Billy Graham Gospel Film Crusade for five successive nights, beginning Sunday, July 8th through Thursday, July 12th at Charlevoix High School.

The program will present some of the messages and music of the Billy Graham Crusades, through the medium of full-length major films, produced by the Billy Graham film organization. A different film will be featured each night, beginning at 7:30 p.m. A prelude of Gospel Music will be presented 15 minutes before each program.

Rev. Dan Abner, pastor of Charlevoix First Baptist Church, has been chosen as chairman of the Crusade. He has chosen Rev. Walt Hastings, pastor of Charlevoix Community Church of God and president of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association, as his co-chairman.

The first of a series of "Steering Committee" meetings was set in motion Sunday evening, March 18 at the Community Church of God. Each cooperating church was asked to send their pastor and one lay-person to work to lay plans for the crusade. Many other individuals will become involved as plans proceed.

Secretary for the Crusade will be Mrs. Hal (Wanda) Hill. Publicity will be chaired by Rev. Austin Regier, pastor of the United Methodist Church, with the assistance of Rev. Larry Grooter, pastor of Community Reformed Church, and Rev. Abner. The Finance Committee will be chaired by Rev. Ernest Knight, pastor of Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene. Parking and Transportation will be chaired by Harry Potter. William Coeling will be chairman of the ushers. A Music Committee will be chaired by Rev. Walt Hastings, assisted by Rev. Roger Ames, pastor of Christ Episcopal Church. Three other committees have not yet been filled. Several subsequent meetings are yet to be held to which pastors and their representatives are invited, whether they attended the first meeting or not.

Annual school election set for June 11, board agrees to girls softball

By FRAN MARTIN

The Charlevoix Board of Education Monday night approved an election resolution and a girls' softball program, discontinued the position of assistant girls' track coach, granted tenure to three teachers and discussed the financial projections for the year, the forthcoming bond issue and the school calendar.

A resolution designating June 11 as the date of the annual school election was approved. At that time, two trustees will be elected to the board and any other issues requiring a vote will be on the ballot. Candidates for the two vacancies on the board are reminded that they have until 4 p.m. Monday, April 9, to file a nominating petition.

A girls' softball program, which has been in the discussion stage for some weeks, was given the approval of the board with the understanding that only transportation will be funded by the board the first year. Parents and interested persons must finance the remainder of the program.

Because of the lack of interest in the girls' track program, the board decided not to fill the position of assistant track coach for the program. Dennis VanGuilder will be the coach of the team.

Three members of the faculty who have completed their probationary period were granted tenure. They are Kay Fiedorek, who teaches middle school math, Mary Gengle, special education at the high school, and Nancy Nagurka, middle school reading.

Supt. Gordon VanWieren discussed the financial projection for the year stating that he was concerned about the limitations that may be placed on school finance by the Headlee Amendment which will become effective this year. He added that at the present time it looks as though the financial increase will be approximately 7.7 percent. However, the financial commitments are more than this. The Finance Committee of the board will meet this week to discuss alternatives open to them to meet this problem.

The Building Committee is scheduled to meet Wednesday night to discuss the high school bond issue and make decisions regarding its presentation.

The school calendar for 1979-80 which has to be negotiated each year though teacher contracts have been agreed upon, was brought up for discussion. However, no firm decision was made regarding school vacations and other items.

An over-night request so that five high school girls may attend a Sports Awareness seminar at Central Michigan University with a student teacher was approved. All over-night trips by students must have the approval of the board.

The next meeting is scheduled for April 16.

Township board delays Medusa rezoning request

The Charlevoix Township Board has postponed indefinitely a decision on rezoning 230 acres of agricultural and scenic reserve land to industrial for the Medusa Cement Company.

It was expected the board would discuss the request at its meeting Monday night. But, according to township Clerk Jo Ann Elzinga, it's the board's intention to have the township zoning board study the present industrial zoning classification.

"It is necessary to update our ordinance to conform with changes enacted March 1 by the legislature in the Township Rural Zoning Act," she said. "To insure adequate control we have given the zoning board resource material and other zoning ordinances covering mining and mineral extractions for study and possible incorporation.

"When the zoning board is ready to make its recommendations a full public hearing will be held," she said. "Notice of this hearing will be published in the Charlevoix Courier."

The township hall was packed last month when the rezoning issue was discussed. Several people asked that the rezoning be delayed until Medusa's new dry process is in operation and residents have a chance to see if the noise and dust is reduced. Trustee Don Smith made a motion to table the request for 18 months. Trustee Dale Glass seconded the motion. But that was all the support it had. The motion was defeated 3-2. A motion was then passed to consider the request this month.

Medusa officials have indicated that the 230 acres - south of Bell's Bay Road - would be used for quarry operations.

Women's Resource Center offers two workshops here on personal growth

The Women's Resource Center will be offering two workshops in Charlevoix. They will be held at the Charlevoix Public Library and are scheduled to begin next week.

PERSONAL GROWTH I will begin on Wednesday evening April 11, at 7 p.m. This workshop is an introductory course designed to encourage self exploration in an informal group setting. Selected readings, structured exercises and group discussions lead to a greater understanding of how we perceive ourselves, how others perceive us, and how we respond interpersonally.

PERSONAL GROWTH II, also scheduled to begin on April 11, will be held from 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. Personal Growth II is a continuation of PG I with greater emphasis on identifying and working on individual goals. The format of small group interaction is followed; there is less structure and more discussion in this workshop. You must have had PG I in order to sign up for PG II. Both workshops meet weekly for six weeks. Nancy Stewart, Connie Ebenhoeh, and Barb Godwin will be the group leaders, heading the workshops. Workshops are $15 per members and $18 for non-members. Membership in the WRC is $5.

This time of year is often house hunting times for many families. We feel it important to once again pass on some tips. Check ventilations. Peeling on the outside of a frame house often indicates poor ventilation in the walls with too much moisture retained. New venting is not a major problem, however Chimneys that are thin-walled, single-brick-thickness can be dangerous as is the lack of fireclay lining top to bottom. With respect to wiring, an eight to twelve room house needs sixteen to zero circuits and a circuit breaker panel for modern operation.

THE BURIAL PLOT in Brookside Cemetery of the unknown persons who died in the burning of the Propellor Champlain near Fisherman's Island on June 16, 1887 will be marked for all time by the dedication of a boulder on Memorial Day, May 28. WHEN THIS CAR crossed the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix on the Ironton Ferry back in the early 1930's, the driver did not have to pay a penny's fare. The ride wes free. But just as the models of automobiles have changed, so have ferry rides. They have cost money for some time -- 10 cents, 25 cents, 35 cents, 50 cents, 75 cents, and NOW $1.00! The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners last week set the new, higher rate to an attempt reduce the deficit in ferry operation ceused by increased labor and fuel costs. Books of 20 rides will sell for $15.

Wall Street.

Following the radiation leak at a nuclear power plant in Pennsylvania, stock in nuclear power plants went down. Meanwhile, stock in Columbia Pictures went up.

And it's because of the Three Mile fsland nishap that Columbia Pictures stock did rise.

Columbia Pictures is now showing "The China Syndrome," a motion picture about a near disaster- at a nuclear power plant. The movie, which stars Jane Fonda, has been getting a lot of hype. Now it will get even more.

Washington.

A survey shows that the number of. non-White House federal officials using chauffers rose from 148 to 175 in the past twa years.

It was two years ago that President Carter issued his no-frills, cost cutting edicts to federal officials.

How well they listen.

No wonder people like California Governor Jerry Brown's type. Here's a man who disdains the Governor's Mansion for a, simple, moderately priced apartment and who walks to work instead of riding in a chauffered limousine.

East Lansing.

Feminists in East Lansing are mad. And I think others should be, too.

Seven of the eight Michigan State University Board of Trustees went to Salt Lake City at university expense to see the NCAA basketball tournament.

Last year the board passed a resolution forbidding university compensated travel to states - like Utah - that have not ratified the Equal Rights Amendment.

The trustees said this trip was an exception because "the national prestige generated for the university" by the basketball team "would be enhanced by the presence" of the board.

f find that hard to swallow.

f believe the seven trustees should have paid for the trip out of their own pockets.

Charlevoix.

Not being a trustee, I watched the tournament on TV. In fact, I was at the Townhouse Monday night for the MSU-fndiana State game. ft was packed.

"Not even Ali could draw this many," said an observer.

From a business viewpoint, it was one of the biggest nights of the year for the Townhouse. Only Venetian , New Year's Eve and the Saturday of the Michigan-Ohio State football game are bigger.

There was green and white everywhere. They roared with every MSU basket. Even during the commercials it was crazy. The sound on the TV would be lowered and a tape player blaring the MSU fight song would be cranked up. It was wild.

When the game ended, It was hard to tell who enjoyed it more - the players or the fans.

Bill Vogel, of WVOY, and f decided to go to East Lansing the next morning and celebrate.

Of course, that was before we had left the Townhouse.

The next day neither of us were in any condition to go.

East Lansing.

Several bars went dry Monday night - before the game even ended. They haven't had that many people on Grand River Avenue since the war demonstrations. It was one party after another.

State officials decided to honor the Spartans on Wednesday. So, they had a parade. The parade was to start at a shopping center near the campus. It was to follow Michigan Avenue to the capital. Thousands of spectators lined Michigan Avenue to watch. The parade started with the area's top high school teams leading the way. All was going smoothly except the Spartans were still at Jenison Fieldhouse waiting to be picked up and taken to the shopping center.

When the error was corrected, the Spartans were put on a fire truck. All except Earvin Johnson and Greg Kelser. They rode in a Volkswagen convertible. And, incidentally, were mobbed.

On Friday, the team had its banquet. Officials had to turn over 8,000 people away. So, It was televised.

Life can be fun when you're a winner.

Is N-Power worth risks?

What are we doing to this big, beautiful world of ours with nuclear energy?

After last week's events at the Three Mile faland Nuclear Plant at Middletown, Pa., f believe it is time to pause and reassess the dreadful consequences of nuclear energy before another atom is split or another nuclear generating facility is built.

I am convinced that we stand the risk of losing Planet Earth to nuclear devastation, not because some paranoid giant on the international scene pulls the trigger, but because some little, inoffensive functionary at a second-rate nuclear plant in Podunk pulls the wrong switeh.

f have been aghast over the weekend to discover that the Metroplitan Edison Co. officials responsible for bringing the Three Mile Island reactor under control do not seem to know what they are doing or even how to go about doing it.

Furthermore, it appears that the residents of Middletown and Harrisburg, Pa., have received little more instruction than the residents of Charlevoix and Petoskey on what to do when something goes wrong at our friendly local nuclear generating plant. Do we jump in our cars and flee? Do we hide in the basement? Or do we go about our business, pretending nothing has happened?

As of Monday morning, pregnant women and pre-school children had been evacuated from a five-mile area around the Three Mile Island plant. Additional thousands have left of their own accord and the remainder have been urged to remain indoors as much as possible.

In the event of a meltdown – or an explosion of the hydrogen gas bubble in the reactor – you can be sure there would be a wholesale rout from eastern Pennsylvania.

Even in the face of our worsening petroleum shortage, the world must turn away from nuclear energy. There are two good reasons:

–There is no such thing as a safe dose of radiation with respect to cancer, leukemia or genetic mutation injury. This is the opinion of John W. Gofman, M.D., and Ph. D., the same man who discovered the fissionability of Uranium-2333 with slow and fast neutrons, making possible today's nuclear plants and nuclear weapons.

–Secondly, there is absolutely no way we will ever be able to solve the nuclear waste disposal problem, short of loading the garbage on a stor ship and sending it to the sun. But the consequences of a misfire arc too frightening to even contemplate. What complicates the waste disposal problem is the fact that plutonium, one of the by-products of nuclear fission, has a half-life of something like 500,000 years and will have to be held under lock and key at least that long. Unfortunately, no social institution on earth today holds promise of lasting such a long time.

If radiation in any amount is harmful, as Dr. Gofman says, and if there is no solution to the nuclear waste disposal problem, why do we continue to pursue nuclear energy as the power source of the future?

That's a hard one. f think the fact that we don't know where else to turn may be part of the answer, coupled with the fact that Americans already have plowed billions of dollars into nuclear generating plants. We don't want to lose our investment. Furthermore we have a cadre of highly polished young technicians running our nuclear plants, fellows whose training would go down the drain if the United States turned its back on the nuclear rainbow.

Then, too, there's the turmoil in the Arab world that could shut off our supply of foreign od in a twinkling. Yet I, for one, would rather try to cope with an oil shortage than I would a re-enactment of the Three Mile fsland nuclear tragedy at Big Rock Point.

If we could somehow render radiation harmless, and if we had 5,000 Albert Einsteins and 5,000 Robert Oppenheimers at the controls of our nuclear plants, we might be able to survive in the nuclear age. But so long as radiation remains dangerous and so long as our nuclear plants are operated by mere human beings who are prone to make errors, llien we are in deep trouble.

How can you and I put the brakes on the nuclear age? For one, ask your senators and representatives to repeal the Price-Anderson Act which virtually exempts the big nuclear power companies from making good on the damage or injury they inflict upon their neighbors.

ff utilities were forced into full accountability, how many would be willing to risk the creation of an atomic wasteland?

Secondly, make sure that your local city council does not make the nistake of committing your tax dollars toward the proliferation of nuclear madness. Many customers of Consumers Power, including several cities in Northern Michigan, recently won the right to invest in two nuclear generating facilities now under construction: Detroit Edison's Fermi fl plant at Monroe and Consumers' new plant at Midland.

It is no secret that the two facilities need additional funds. And the future of both facilities is iffy without participation by municipal governments.

In the meantime, I suggest that you acquaint yourself thoroughly with the problems and the risks inherent in nuclear proliferation, including Dr. Helen Caldicott's new book, "Nuclear Madness." You owe it to yourself, your children and to generations yet unborn.

Marlene Caszatt

Read the label

It's getting harder to find a bargain all the time, no matter what department you're shopping in. Many products once thought of as economical have risen more in price than their more expensive competitors.

Comparison price shopping is still one of your most effective weapons against the rising cost of living. Careful price comparison benefit your budget and could lead to a new emphasis on price competition in the market place.

One good way to make comparisons help you determine if you are getting your money's worth ls to read the nutrition label on food items. The nutrition label is not only a good guide to the nutrients in a particular food item – it also can help you choose less costly, but equally nutritious, substitutes for more expensive foods. For example, many canned and packaged foods such as dried peas and beans are good sources of protein at reasonable prices.

Along with helping you make good nutrition and cost comparisons the label will help you count calories. All nutrition labels tell how many calories are in a serving of food.

The labels will help you avoid substances such as cholesterol or sodium which your physician may have advised you to cut down on. And you can learn what's in new foods you see on the grocery shelf. ff you are not in the habit of looking at the labels try it the next time you shop. You may find them a real help!

'Flight 1050 goes to Detroit all right, but ...'

The husband and the wife were vacationing at Marco island, Florida, where the temperature was around 80 degrees. She was wearing wool gloves.

"Why are you wearing gloves?" he asked.

"I'll tell you if you tell me why you are wearing a blue sports jacket, a blue shirt, a blue tie, blue socks, blue shoes and BROWN pants," she said.

"This is my blue ensemble except you forgot to pack 'my blue pants," he explained. "My brown jacket and shirts and socks are all dirty. f have to wear these blue things. ft's fortunate f'm one of the few men with sufficient savoir-faire to wear a blue striped jacket with checked brown pants and still look stylish. Tisb Jett will want to write about this outfit."

"If you put your blue pants on the bed, f packed them," the wife said.

That's how the husband packs for family vacations. He piles everything he wants to take with him on the conjugal bed. The wife then stuffs the pile into the bottom of her garment bags, to keep her shoes from chafing each other. Once she accidentally packed a chenille bedspread. he wore it in Mexico, a tufted serape draped to the knees of his checked brown pants. He frightened several bulls.

"I'll swear f put my blue pants on the bed, but we'll find out when we get back home," he said. "In the meantime, tell me why you're wearing wool gloves with your bathing suit."

"I'm wearing gloves because my wand is too hot," she said.

This is a true story. The wife was about to curl her hair. She has to pinch the wand of the curling iron against her hair. If she doesn't wear gloves, the wand burns her fingers. She wants to sell the glove idea to the Ladies flome Journal.

The curled hair and the blue ensemble with brown pants were worn in Miami Internationai Airport to board the airplane back to Detroit. Flight reservations had been made 30 days earlier to assure a minimum of hassle and cost. You bet.

"f'm on flight 1050 to Detroit," the husband told the Delta baggage man who looked puzzled, and then looked into his schedule book.

"Flight 1050 goes to Detroit all right," the Delta man said, "But it goes from Atlanta, not Miami."

"Can we walk from Miami to Atlanta in time to catch our plane?" asked the wife who has always been exceedingly enchanted by her husband the experienced traveler. Once, outside Boston, he left her in a ffoliday fnn to buy a bag of dinner at a nearby McDonald's. When he returned, be couldn't make his key fit his motel room door and he couldn't get the wife to open it and let him in. ffe took his troubles to the motel management.

The management pointed out that he was in the wrong holiday Inn.

But f digress. This time, it was pointed out by Delta that the husband's travel agent had made a horrible mistake. Several Delta people seemed pleased to imply travel agents often make horrible mistakes but Delta never does anything wrong. You bet, again.

Delta put the husband and wife on a later flight. They had to change planes in Atlanta, after an hour layover. The Atlanta plane taxied out onto the runway and stopped, seemingly forever.

"We're having technical problems and will have to return to the terminal for repairs," the pilot announced.

By now it was 10 p.m., 2 hours past the time they were supposed to be home, and they still had 600 miles to go. "f don't care," said the husband, "f have a good book to read."

fmmediately, the reading lights went out.

90 minutes later, the pilot announced everything was fixed and he took off. The reading lights still didn't work.

"The pilot is probably Charlton fleston and he will fly this mother through a Cincinnati bowling alley and use his bare hands to pick up George Kennedy, the only electrician in the universe who knows how to fix the reading lights," the husband said. He spent the next hour hunched in a corner, trying to read by the light from an Exit sign.

The husband and wife ultimately got home. The blue pants were still in the cleaners. Onward and Upward.

Will the styles of the 60's return?

"Four Strong Winds"
as sung by Neil Young
Ian and Sylvia
e. f963 Vanguard Recording Society, Inc.

Four strong winds that blow lonely seven seas that run high all those things that don't change come what may But our good times are all gone and f'm bound for mavin' on
I'll look for you if f'm ever back this way

Think f'll go out to Alberta
Where there's good there in the fall
Got some friends that I can go to workin' for Still I wish you'd change your mind if f asked you one more time
But we've been through that a bundred times or more

If I get there before the snow flies and if things are goin' good you could meet me if I sent you down the fare
But by then it would be winter there ain't too much for you to do and those winds sure can blow cold way out there

Twenty years. That seems to be how long it takes for the cycle to come around full course, for things to come back into style. I can remember saving clothes just in case. But f never seemed to save them long enough. A year after the Volunteers of America truck had come and gone, f was the one regretting my donation of two wrap-around skirts.

There's some consolation in the theory that pack rats are one of the main causes of domestic pollution. After realizing in the 70's that the 50's were back, f mourned the loss of my grade school bobby socks and saddle shoes and two 45's, entitled "Honeycomb" and "Green Door". Who was to know that my kids would want them for reference material for the Spring Program? I think now that I have a little more foresight. f will definitely pack away my Mighty Max blower dryer and Jox tennis shoes in moth balls. Maybe our grandchildren will be able to use them for props in a skit in the 2000's.

Already the 60's are showing all the signs of becoming the next rerun. ft's tline. 'Four Strong Winds' are blowing in, bearing out the truth of what I say. And now, I can't wait. Here's an era I can really get into. fn the 60's I came to be. Olivia and John may have slicked back their hair and jitterbugged their way through high school, but I was already bubbled and doing the twist. It was in the 60's that I graduated from shoes into the hootenanny-ed halls of campus life. Boys wore V-neck sweaters and short hair. Girls wore nylons and long straight hair. Either could play guitar if they wanted to. Blue Grass was in; the Christy Minstrals, the Brothers Four, Hootenannies, folk festivals, Joan Baez was Queen. Our concert choir made tours singing with other colleges. Performances invariably ended in afterglows flowing with beer and Peter, Paul and Mary. ft was kind of a cozy time, pre-psychedelic when lights dimmed late in the evening instead of blinking at you.

'Four Strong Winds' was originally done in 1963 by a Canadian twosome fan Tyson and Syliva Flicker, ft is an original song by Ian, who, haunted by the transciency of the Canadian migrant worker, hoped to sensitively convey the lack of security which was lhe fabric of their gypsy existence. Neil Young does the 1979 version.

Folk music, is never really out of vogue. ft's a cultural child that sometimes sings a little softer than at others. I have a feeling that the folk music of the 60's may be experiencing it's 20 year face lift. I also have a racoon collar moldering away in a bottom bureau drawer someplace. It may be time to extract it.

Headlee implementation begins

Faced with The state's new constitutional limitation on taxation, the House Taxation Committee last week tackled the first implementation bill to determine which communities will receive how much of a reduction. Depending on how the constitutional amendment is interpreted, there will be little relief to communities or none at all. In communities where property values are increasing faster than the rate of inflation, millage rollbacks will give some relief. But stable or slow growing communities and most large cities are not expected to qualify for rollbacks.

Last week the House Taxation Committee plunged into the controversy over whether the rollback should be from "maximum authorized" tax rates or "actual rate levied." On a 12-4 vote, the Committee reported out a bill that states the rollback will be from the "maximum authorized" level when assessed valuations outstrip inflation.

For instance, if a community has an authorized rate of 20 mills and qualifies for a rollback to 19 mills, the new authorized rate is 19 mills. A rollback the following year would be from 19 to 18 mills; the year after that the rollback would be from 18 mills to 17 mills, and so on. But if the community does not qualify for a rollback the next year, the authorized rate would automatically be returned to 20 mills without a vote of the people.

In other words, the bill specifies that once the maximum authorized rate has been reduced, a new maximum is established. If a further reduction is not required the next year, the rate may be restored up to the original law or charter authorized maximum without a vote of the people. However, if a further reduction is required the next year, then the new maximum established by the previous year's rollback must be reduced. Unless the people have voted for a higher millage in the interim, in which case it becomes the one subject to re'lback.

Most of the Republican members of the committee agree with William Shaker (a primary drafter of the amendment): Once the rate is reduced a new maximum is established and should not be increased without a vote of the people. fn a fast growing community, however, where the authorized rate is 20 mills but it was only levying 15 mills, the rollback would cause no change in taxes.

During the 1930's depression, most Michigan towns set a ceiling on millage to protect property owners. It is this ceiling that is the so-called authorized rate, and it is not levied in approximately 20 percent of the state's communities.

According to some specialists, about 300 taxing districts in Michigan levy less than the authorized millage rate. During hearings on the bill the Governor's office and state budget officials argued that the amendment should -be interpreted to allow reductions in actual millage levied, so most property owners would see some relief.

The draft of the bill reported by the committee makes it fairly certain that at least three-fourths of Michigan property owners will see no change at all in their tax bills.

City gets $2,762 from state

Twenty communities in the 103rd District will receive $140,967.01 from the State Police's disaster fund as part of extra money approved by the House of Representatives recently, state Rep. Ralph Ostling reported today.

The House passed and sent to the Michigan Senate a supplemental appropriation bill that gave the fund $2.3 million in extra monies for the current fiscal year.

"The extra funds are necessary because of the aumber of outstanding elaims on the fund from communities across the state," Ostling explained.

The fund currently has a balance of $650,000, but the number of claims approved for payment totals more than $2.4 million. When all the claims are paid the fund will have a balance of about $500,000.

The disaster contingency fund is used to assist communities which suffer unanticipated costs due to natural disasters such as floods, severe snowstorms or tornados.

"Though this supplemental appropriations bill must first be approved by the Senate and the governor before the communilles will receive the funds due them, I am nonetheless pleased that the legislature is on the road to approving payment for these claims," Ostling added.

Among the communities in the 103rd District whose claims will be paid from the amount approved in the bill are:

Antrim County	$20,000.00
Vdlage of Bellaire	$1,857.88
Village of Central Lake	1,040.04
Village of Elk Rapids	5,294.45

Racquetball

The fastest growing indoor sport in America

The game of racquetball has come a long way. It was first introduced, sports annals say, at a prison in England.

Debtor's Prison, in fact. Where inmates, seeking some form of diversion, made paddles or racquets from wood and hit a ball against a prison wall.

The first king of racquetball, Robert Mackey, made no secret of the fact that he learned the game in a London jail.

Even Charles Dickens, in the Pickwick Papers, supports the theory that the jail house was the birthplace of the game.

Through the years, the game has changed immensely.

There are now over 700 private racquetball clubs in the country. It is estimated that from 5,500,000 to 8,000,000 people play the game. Most are between 25 and 45 years of age, are in the middle income bracket and are considered professionals. About one-third of the players are women.

The sport is growing by leaps and bounds. It is already considered the fastest growing indoor sport in the nation. Not bad for a game that was invented in a prison.

"It's addicting," says Dan Alder, a top racquetball player who works at Medusa.

"It's an easy game to learn," he added. "Satisfaction comes early."

"And it's a nice clean way of getting exercise."

It is said that once you try the game you won't be able to quit.

"You're hooked," says Greg Grambeau, racquetball pro at the Little Traverse Racquet Club.

"It's fun and it's psychologically relaxing. And it's not a bad way of taking out your aggression. You can go onto the court and hit the ball as hard as you want."

Racquetball is actually a speeded up version of handball. If that doesn't help you understand the game, maybe this will:

The game is played on a court with four walls. The court is about 20 feet X 40 feet . Using a condensed tennis racquet, the object is to return your opponent's shot before the ball hits twice on the floor and , of course, to keep your opponent from doing the same.

To start the game the server drops the ball on the floor and hits its on the first bounce against the front wall.

You can make a point only when you serve. The serve - after striking the front wall - must reach the rear of the court behind the service zone, with or without ricocheting off a side wall.

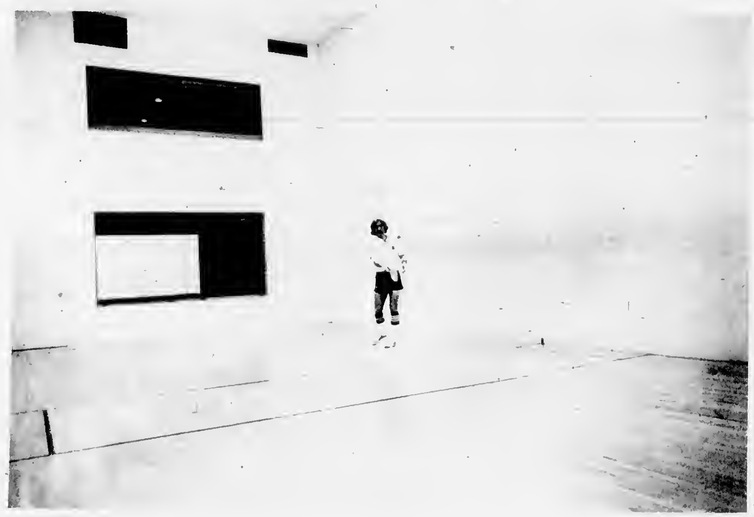
You can return a serve by hitting the ball in the air or after the first bounce. It has to hit the front wall before striking the floor again, but you can get it to the front wall by earoming it off the ceiling, back wall, side walls or any combination thereof.

The first player to reach 21 points wins the game. A match is won by the first player to win two of three games.

Sound simple?

It might, but it's important to learn how to play the game properly before developing any bad habits that might be hard to correct later.

"First, what we try to do is to get the players familiar with the game," said Grambeau. "Once they learn the objective, they can get on the court and play. And it's very important to spend time on the court."



It's important to hit the ball low.

Once a player gets a feel for the game, Grambeau can teach more of the specifics – like positioning.

If you're a tennis player, Grambeau says, one of the first things you'll learn about racquetball is that you keep your wrist fluid – not stiff – when making a shot. It's also important to keep the ball low, whereas in tennis, the ball must be hit high enough to clear a net.

"The lower you let the ball drop before you hit it the lower it will hit on the wall and the harder it will be to return."

A big mistake for the beginner is failure to watch the ball at all times.

"I've seen people play who never watch the ball, they're always looking at the front wall," Grambeau says. "That's one of the basic flaws. Watch the ball at all times."

And it would be wise to wear protective eye glasses while playing.

"An eye injury is about the only serious injury you can sustain playing racquetball. I've been hit near the eye six times and even wearing eye glasses it hurts. Steve Hughes (who also teaches racquetball at the club) was in the hospital not too long ago. He was hit in the eye and was temporarily blinded. I wouldn't play without wearing eye glasses. It's not worth the risk."

Another risk is making a spur of the moment decision to play racquetball – without a reservation – during the evening.

"Usually, you'll have to call three or four days in advance if you want a court anywhere from 5 to 8 p.m.," he says.

To help alleviate the problem, the club is building four new courts, bringing its total to eight. Grambeau says the courts should be completed in five weeks.

Alder, however, does not play nearly as much as he did before. He says he plays about three times every two weeks.

"I miss it. It's my favorite form of exercise. I love playing hard. And I feel differently now that I'm not as active as I was before."

Alder, who has won state and national championships in racquetball and paddleball, still plays the tournaments, though. A couple weeks ago, he competed in a national tournament in Ann Arbor and placed in the top 16.

"I was pleased because I played in that tournament without training."

In 1975, Alder was ranked as one of the top eight players on the pro circuit.

Grambeau, too, has also won his share of tournaments.

"I was ushered onto the court early," he says. His father is the intramural director at the University of Michigan and a very good paddleball player in his own right.

Teaching racquetball with Grambeau and Hughes at the club is Mike Rahaley.

And to think this all started in Debtor's Prison.

And to keep out of your opponent's way.

Whenever an artist is needed to work on community projects, people around town turn to Swanee Lee Alden. This week, the Courier talks with this talented young women about some of the things she has done.

COURIER: How long have you lived in Charlevoix?

ALDEN: Since October, 1974. I came here from Erie, Pennsylvania.

COURIER: What was the first project you worked on?

ALDEN: I made the original design for the City of Charlevoix flag.

COURIER: Then what?

ALDEN: In 1975, I worked with Grey Gables on their centennial celebration I painted scenery for their stage show and designed a coat of arms for them, among other things. I also worked on the World's Largest Cherry Pie project, the pie that got into the Guiness Book of Records. I painted signs and posters for that.

COURIER: Now you're working on the Charlevois centennial celebration, right?

ALDEN: Yes, I've done a lot of drawings of historical sites on Beaver Island, the Mormon Print Shop, King Strang's house, places like that. I've also done pictures of Charlevoix in the early days, streets and buildings and the harbor. I've also done a portrait of King Strang. I've read a lot of books on the history of the area and paint my pictures from old photographs. The Beaver Island Historical Society sent me a lot of pictures, and Bob Miles' book on Charlevoix has been very useful.

COURIER: What's the post office project?

ALDEN: I've made a design for a commemorative centennial envelope which will be stamped and cancelled in the Charlevoix Post Office.

Meet Charlevoix

Swanee Lee Alden

COURIER: What else?

ALDEN: I designed a bulletin for distribution at State Highway Information Centers telling about the Battle of Pine River and other festivities over the Memorial Day weekend. I also did the proclamation that was tacked to the City Hall door.

COURIER: What do you have left to do?

ALDEN: One big job will be to paint the fronts of the buildings that will be set up in East Park for the Battle of Pine River and letter the flip cords and credits for the movie.

COURIER: What is your regular job?

ALDEN: I'm secretary in the County Department of Building Inspection. I do my art work outside of business hours.

COURIER: Do you ever do work for private businesses?

ALDEN: Yes, I make advertising signs, posters, special greeting cards, things like that. I also do some portrait work.

COURIER: Did you have formel training in art?

ALDEN: Just a home study course. I was awarded a scholarship from the Women's Club in Erie to go to art school, but I couldn't take it. When I was in high school I took three periods of art and studied everything from photography to bronze casting to jewelry making. My favorite medium is oil pastels. I do my portraits in oils.

COURIER: Did you ever have a full-time job working in the field of art?

ALDEN: No. I studied shorthand and typing in high school and I like my job in the Building Department. People don't like to come in to get permits so I help them all I can and try to leave them smiling.

COURIER: What are your hobbies?

ALDEN: I like to sing. I'm a soloist at the Nazarene Church and used to sing professionally with the "Trail Blazers" in Erie. I also did Red Cross Benefit Shows. I like to write poetry and slogans, too. I collect slogans, especially those pertaining to life, and humorous ones. I also like to collect friends; I like everybody.

COURIER: How many children do you have?

ALDEN: Three. Kristin is 12, Darlene is eight, and Jeff is seven. I moved here because I had vacationed here and thought it would be a good place to raise children. There's so much planned for them to do.

This week the Courier presents the first chapter of memories of Charlevoix sent to us by Jessie Hamlin Short of Traverse City, who grew up in Hayes Township):

Charlevoix History

Part I

I am writing about times way back in 1820 and 1825, many years ago, about my people and Charlevoix.

My grandfather, Nemiah Weaver Hamlin, and Esther Cram Hamlin, his wife (my grandmother) lived in New York State and migrated to Charlevoix, Michigan, Charlevoix County, Hayes Township. He was a hunter and trapper. He took up two homesteads in Hayes Township near a small place called Burgess, named after old Mr. Burgess (father of Gene Burgess who worked in Cooper's Mill at Oyster Bay on Pine Lake).

There was a grocery store there, and post office run by Horas Newson. Burgess used to be seen on the map, but when the store was torn down later, it was taken off the map.

My grandfather built a log house, chinked it up with clay between logs. It had a thick door in front. He had five sons and one daughter. My father was next to oldest, born in 1850. They cleared some land there and hoed in wheat between logs. It grew abundantly as the soil was rich. They planted other crops like corn and potatoes, and tapped maple trees to make maple syrup. The corn was put in corn cribs to keep it dry.

My grandpa (on my mother's side) was Gustave Jerichow, who came from Germany. Came to New Holstine, Wisconsin, then moved to Charlevoix County, Hayes Township, on a homestead beside my father's place. My father met and married Anna Jerichow there in Hayes Township. They had two oxen, "Bill" and "Jerry". They worked like horses and were steered by saying, "Gee" and "Haw". They had a yoke to pull with so was guided that way.

Four children were born to them, two girls and two boys. My sister, Esther Hamlin, my oldest brother, Loren Hamlin, my youngest brother Forest Hamlin, and myself, Jessie Hamlin. By then we had a wood frome house and in time the log house was torn down. We had a barn to store grain and hay in, and the livestock had their stalls there, also pigs and chickens. In 1900, my father put up a large barn that still stands strong. It was put together with wood pegs used as nails.

In those days, they had barn raisings. The neighbors come to barn raisings, took pike poles to raise sections of beams in place. In this way they put up a barn in one day.

My grandfather died in 1877 and was the only white man buried in Greensky Hill Indian Cemetery with a headstone marker at head of grave. At that time some of the old settlers were buried in Undine Cemetery close to Horton's Bay. The small community of Horton's Bay is still there, named after Sam Horton, one of the old settlers.

On my father's place, we had no electric or any conveniences like they had later on. We had candles made by my grandma is candle molds that made four candles at a time with beef tallow with a wick string in the center. We used them in evenings when we needed them. We also got oil lamps with wicks.

We lived about seven miles from Charlevoix, where we traded. It took all day to go to town and back. We had a heavy team of horses and a wagon to ride to town in. There were hitching posts on Birdge Street to hitch horses to while we got our trading done. In winter we took a sleigh with a box on it and hay or straw in to keep worm on the way. We also had hot bricks to put in the straw to worm our feet.

Permit sought for boat ramp

Robert Cummins of East Jordan has applied for a permit to construct a cedar log boat ramp in Lake Charlevoix.

The ramp would be 8 foot x 10 foot and would accomodate the launching and retrieval of small pleasure craft.

Cummins is seeking the permit from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Anyone wishing to comment on the proposal may do so by writing the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Box 1027, Detroit. Written comments must be received by the Corps by April 21. Comments should refer to the proposal as public notice process number 79031/79-5-12. A lack of response will be interpreted as meaning that there is no objection to the permit application.

Bill introduced to lower license plate rates for farmers

A freshman Republican representative has introduced legislation that would significantly reduce the costs of licensing vehicles used by wood producers in Michigan.

State Representative Steve Andrews, R-Gaylord, introduced a bill Tuesday that would permit wood producers to use the lower agriculture license plate rates now available to farmers.

In addition to Andrews, Representative Charles Varnum, R-Manistique, and Ralph Ostling, R-Roscommon, are also sponsoring the bill.

"Currently, wood producers, even though they are heavily engaged in agricultural production, must pay normal commercial license plate fees while farmers are able to pay lower rates," Andrews explained.

"It only makes sense that all agricultural producers -- farmers and wood producers -- should receive equal treatment. The bill I've introduced would eliminate that inequity," he added.

Andrews says that wood producers pay about $200 more per year than farmers in commercial license fees because they do not now qualify for the reduced agricultural rates.

"If enacted, this bill would be especially beneficial to the small, independent hauler, cutter or logger throughout Northern Michigan," Andrews continued.

"Wood production is every bit as challenging and marginal a business as farming. They both have limited financial resources. Wood producers should pay the same fee that mink farmers, nursery operators, as well as food farmers, now pay," the Gaylord Republican added.

A number of recent court decisions have granted agricultural status to wood producers in labor matters, Andrews noted. As presently written, however, the farm rates in the Michigan Vehicle Code, have been interpreted as not applying to wood producers.

Area cited in magazine

A 1,000-mile drive around Lake Michigan through four states and some of the Midwest's finest scenery – including the Charlevoix-Petoskey area – is featured in the April issue of Automobile Club of Michigan's Michigan Living/AAA Motor News magazine.

"One week is needed for the trip through Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois and Indiana so that you can do justice to the sights and enjoy a relaxing ride," Auto Club's 1.2 million members are told in an article entitled, "Drive Around Lake Michigan."

With more than two-thirds of the trip through Michigan, motorists also can enjoy side trips to spectacular sand dunes, top-rated resorts, the Soo Locks, Mackinac Island and dozens of interesting communities along the way, the article states.

"As you motor north, you come to Charlevoix and Petoskey two towns popular with summer vacationers for as long as anyone can remember," the article points out.

"They are beautiful, cool in summer and quite sophisticated. Petoskey's ships, especially, are set up for the carriage trade, and their owners spend the winters in Palm Beach or Fort Lauderdale."

Local agency gets $218,740

Charlevoix County will soon apply to the Michigan State Transportation Commission for funds to operate a bus system within the county.

Under a new state plan, called the County Incentive Plan, the state will furnish the buses needed by a county, and will provide 100 percent of the funding for the first two years of the program, followed by 75 percent of the funding the third year, and 50 percent of the funding from the fourth year on.

The program is designed for rural counties and will be available for only 20 counties in the state.

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners last week adopted a resolution stating its intention of applying for funds under the County Incentive Plan and naming Art Saworski of the Commission on Aging as Transportation Coordinator to act as official liaison between the Board of Commissioners and the state.

The County Commission on Aging presently operates two buses for senior citizens and handicapped persons, but they are being driven and managed by persons employed under the Comprehensive Education and Training Act (CETA) which will not be funded after September 30.

Under the County Incentive Plan, as many as five buses will be made available to participating counties for use by all citizens of the counties, not just senior citizens and the handicapped.

A delegation of senior citizens accompanied Saworski to the Board of Commissioners meeting last week to request that some kind of bus transportation system van be maintained in the county.

County to apply for funds to operate bus system

Gov. William G. Milliken has announced that Michigan has received an $8.8 million award for a Federal Supplemental Crisis Intervention Program.

"These much-needed funds will provide assistance to low-income families with emergency energy needs brought on by the severe Michigan winter," Milliken said. "The funds may be used to meet such needs as emergency heating restoration, food, utility, deposits, furnace repair, clothing, transporation and shelter.

"Until society can cope with the spiraling cost of energy, we must ensure that low-income families – especially those on fixed incomes – are not overwhelmed," he added.

Milliken said the $8.8 million is in addition to two previous grant awards of $1.04 million, and $1.3 million for emergency heating assistance.

The funds were requested by the governor through the Department of Labor's Bureau of Community Services and awarded to Michigan by the Federal Community Services Administration in Washington, D.C.

In compliance with federal regulations, the funds will be administered by the 29 community action agencies in the state.

The funds are for emergency energy expenses incurred between Jan. 1, 1979 and May 31, 1979. Low-income families meeting federal poverty guidelines can apply at one of the local community action agencies.

The Northwest Michigan Human Services Agency (services Emmet, Charlevoix, Antrim, Kalkaska, Missaukee, Wexford, Grand Traverse, Leelanau and Roscommon counties) received $218,740.

Portraits to be taken April 27-28

A picture-taking project is again being undertaken by the Parent Advisory Council at the Charlevoix Elementary School.

Photographers will be at the school April 27 and 28 to take individual and family portraits.

The project is fund raising endeavor of the Parent Council, according to Shirley Roloff, vice-president of the organization.

An 11 by 14 color portrait will cost $5 and additional pictures may be purchased if desired.

"This is a good opportunity for grandparents and senior citizens to have portraits taken for their families," Mrs. Roloff suggested.

Appointments with the photographers must be made in advance by calling Mrs. Roloff at 547-6169 or the elementary school at 547-4361.

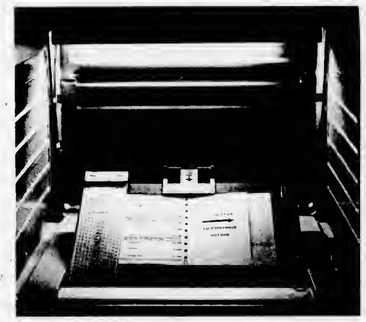
Paper ballots may be a thing of the past in county



Punch card voting machines may soon replace lever machines and paper ballots in Charlevoix County.

Eleven townships and two cities have expressed interest in obtaining the machines after learning how they operate. Charlevoix, Wilson, Evangeline, Bay, Bay, Norwood, Hayes, Hudson, Boyne Valley, South Arm, Chandler, and Marion Townships and Boyne City and East Jordan.

The City of Charlevoix has not yet indicated whether it would like to make the change.

According to county Clerk Clarence Rabach, the most practicable way of changing over to the punch card system would be for the individual townships and cities to buy the voting machines and the county to buy one central computer for counting purposes.

A central computer would cost approximately $50,000, Rabach says. The matter is now being considered by the Ways and Means Committee of the County Board of Commissioner.

Tax laws to be clarified

Tax laws and regulations regarding disposition of estates are rapidly changing. In an effort to clarify new laws and help individuals plan for their futures, Munson Medical Center's development council will conduct its eleventh Estate Planning Seminar each Wednesday evening beginning April 4 through May 2.

Two expert panelists will present up-to-date details of one facet of estate planning each evening of the seminar. They will discuss in-depth such topics as will's trusts, insurance, stocks, taxes and the legal aspects of estate planning. Panelists will be local attorneys, certified public accountants, stock brokers, insurance men and bank officers.

The five sessions, lasting from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. will be held at the hospital.

Real Estate Is A People Business And Ski & Shore Wants You To Know Its People

This week Ski & Shore would like you to meet Hagen Manker.

"I bought my first house when I was nineteen and have been buying real estate since then." The Mankers moved to Northern Michigan from Indiana after vacationing in the Charlevoix area. "We enjoy skiing and sailing but have found that working doesn't allow us much time to take advantage of the recreation."

Manker is a graduate of Wabash College where he was awarded a B.S. degree in Political Science and minored in Chinese. He speaks French and Spanish fluently. "I lived with my family in Nicaragua, Bolivia and Spain six years and attended La College Cevenol in southern France during the summers of my high school years.

After graudating from Wabash, Manker was associated with H. H. C. Industries in Indiana. He held a supervisory position in the International Sales deparment, which took him to Columbia, South America. "I spent a lot of time away from home, which was a factor in changing my career. I have always believed that real estate is a good investment and my experience with it helps me to advise others."

He is currently involved in a Real Estate Investment course and hopes to obtain his Associate Brokers license. "My wife sells real estate for Ski and Shore, Petoskey. We feel the Ski and Shore offices are staffed by knowledgeable and professional people. We enjoy working with them."

K of C fund drive April 6-8

The fourth annual fund drive to assist the mentally retarded locally and in Michigan will be conducted by the Fr. Pierre Charlevoix Council Knights of Columbus on April 6,7 and 8, Dr. Harry Custer, council Grand Knight has announced.

Last year, statewide, the Knights of Columbus, a Catholic men's fraternal society, collected $483,933 in the three day drive. Locally, $2,000 was donated to the Bergmann Center in Charlevoix.

Under the program, which is carried out in most of the 185 K.C. councils in Michigan, people are asked to donate money to the mentally retarded and are given a tootsie roll candy in appreciation of the gift.

Eighty percent of the net income from the donations is retained by the local council, and the rest is forwarded to the state council to meet expenses and make donations in behalf of all of the 63,500 knights in Michigan.

The state council recently donated $40,000 to the State Association for Mentally Retarded Citizens to aid the organization's volunteer program.

State Deputy William J. Walsh of Albion, the highest ranking elected K of C official in Michigan, said there are over 265,000 mentally retarded citizens in Michigan.

An "overwhelming major concern of Charlevoix County residents is the loss of prime, good agricultural land/wetlands/forestlands to irreversible uses."

This fact was brought to light through a series of open meetings held last fall by the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District in cooperation with several government and private groups.

The meetings also brought forth some suggestions that point not only to governmental units, but to the general public as well:

•Revision of the Farmland & Open Space Act to make it more acceptable to the land owner.

•Broader enforcement of the Soil Erosion & Sedimentation Act to include agricultural and mining uses.

•Farm income must be increased to be more profitable or competitive with other occupations.

•Erosion from county, townships, private roadways, stream banks, lakeshores, agricultural croplands and other critical erosion areas is a problem that needs attention.

•More education and technical and financial assistance through the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District, in cooperation with other governmental agencies, are needed to assist landowners in designing and installing erosion control measures.

•Local units of government should consult with Soil Conservation District and other local natural resource personnel prior to developmental approval. Out-of-country engineers, planners, etc. do not know local problems that could occur.

Land

Residents concerned about loss of farm land

•Cost limitations of $2,500 per farm in ASCS-ACP programs should be eliminated to make the cost-share per farm more realistic compared to cost of erosion control measures.

•Solid waste disposal within the county should rate top priority. Eliminate red tape so that grants are more readily available.

•There is a need for federal and state funding for sewer, water, and waste disposal systems.

•There are not enough public access sites to streams and lakes to meet the demands of the public.

•There is too much overlapping of programs and duties by the state at local levels. Revise these programs so that local units of government can function with adequate funding.

•Better enforcement is needed to control all-terrain and other motorized vehicles.

•The area is becoming saturated with recreational and related developments which eventually cause technical, political, and economic stresses and problems to local units of government.

•Preliminary studies should be made at township and county levels to determine what effects development will have on adjacent land.

•Soil Conservation Districts should be properly funded so that they are able to respond to the responsibilities delegated to them in legislative laws.

•Due to a three-year drought, weather conditions seem to be changing. Research into irrigation programs may be necessary.

•Forests represent at least 61 percent of total acreage in Charlevoix County. This resource is the largest natural resource that is not being effectively managed. Lack of markets, fragmentation of ownership, high property taxes, and red tape do not encourage proper forest management.

•More-multi-use of forest resources and products should be researched.

•Establish a monitoring program to preserve and protect the clean streams and lakes that we now have.

•Develop lake and stream watershed programs where needed.

•Air pollution from both agricultural and mining operations appear to be a major concern.

•Zoning ordinances should be revised to meet current needs and direct future land use trends.

•More enforcement locally (or above) is needed and this enforcement should have the backing of the courts.

•Good and effective, variable conservation should still be continued. If there is de-emphasizing of these programs and practices, conservation momentum will be lost.

Local townships meet

By FRAN MARTIN

The five townships in the western section of Charlevoix county that met Saturday, with one exception, had one thing in common ... the attendance was poor. The exception was Norwood Township where 35 residents turned out The others attracted 20 persons or less besides the township board.

Interest in Norwood Township was on a number of issues as well as the budget.

The residents of Norwood Township have always had a keen interest in their township park. However, they have had a number of problems so they are applying for a federal grant through the Michigan Coastal Management Program for a feasibility study in the hope that the study will give them some answers to the problems. These include use of the park as a launching ramp by Indian fisherman, ORV activity, vandalism and garbage. Other concerns are dune and beach erosion.

The residents of the township learned only recently that it has been deeded 20 acres for use as a park by the DNR. At the present time they do not have the exact boundaries of the property. They also need a topography study which they hope to incorporate into the feasibility study. The property is east and north of the existing park which is also 20 acres in size.

Mrs. Nancy Ritsema, township clerk, said that as long ago as 1977, the township had been advised that with the concentration of population the township has at Norwood proper, there should be some recreation plan. However, there has never been developed. It is hoped that some recommendations will result from the study.

Mrs. Ritsema did say that Mike Davis, youth activities coordinator for the county, was planning a recreation program for the children of the area this summer.

Roads again came in for discussion. The township's priorities regarding roads was discussed at length. The township, one of the smallest in the county, has little money to spend on roads but roads such as Warner, Clipperview, Lake Shore Drive and Gennett roads, to name some, are in need of attention. Mrs. Ritsema said the board would have to decide whether to spend that funds it has on one road or whether to stick with basic building and gravel. Last summer the township allocated $1200 for brine to keep the dust under control. This year $1400 has been earmarked for this.

A proposed budget of $32,000 was approved. However; anticipated revenue falls $9,766 short of meeting the budget. Anticipated revenue from various sources totals $22,343.

Income from taxes will total an anticipated $5,500; state revenue sharing, $8,000; tax collection fees, $1800; county delinquent taxes, $900; balance on hand from 1978, $5,668. The amount of revenue from swamp tax has not been determined but it is hoped this will be doubled or tripled over last year's total of $275.

Among the major expenses are $3,000 for the township park; $3,000 for fire protection and ambulance and $4,480 in salaries, up from $3,075 in 1978.

The township has no voted millage. A millage vote for roads was defeated last year.

At both the St. James and Peaine township meetings on Beaver Island the proposed purchase of five 10-acre lots on Iron Ore Bay in the southwest area of the island for a park was discussed.

The two townships have joined forces to apply for a Michigan Land and Trust Fund Grant in order to obtain funds to underwrite the cost of the property which is owned by the Iron Ore Bay Corporation, a realty firm.

Mrs. Matthew Hohn, whose husband is director of the Central Michigan University Biological Station on the island, is spearheading the drive which has the support of the island residents.

She said that the land, besides boasting Lake Michigan shoreline, has sand dunes, wetlands, a deer yard and an open area adjacent to the Beaverhead Lighthouse Property owned by the Charlevoix School District.

The Nature Conservancy is assisting in the writing of the grant Mrs. Hohn said.

Should the funds be obtained, the island residents will vote on a millage issue to come up with matching funds. It would probably be necessary to obtain funds from other sources also she said.

Both townships already levy two mills to underwrite the cost operating the airport. In addition, they are retiring bonds authorized to build the new runway on a matching fund basis.

Both townships also levy millage for operational costs for roads.

St. James Township levies four mills for operational costs. This year this will bring in $13,968 and the 1.0 mill allocated another $3,492 toward a proposed budget of $29,000. Other incomes will come from revenue sharing, $13,700 is earmarked for public restrooms and $1,500 for planning and zoning.

St. James Township also has a special levy to purchase the former U.S Coast Guard Station for use as a township hall.

In Peaine Township which takes in the southern part of the island, the township voted to set aside $12,000 from the Public Improvement Fund for the purchase of property as a site for a new township hall.

A proposed budget of $21,000 was approved with revenues to meet it to come from allocated and voted millage and other federal and state sources. The township receives the revenue from five mills levied including four voted and one allocated mill. The township has also earmarked $7,000 toward a fund to be used for lighting the island airport.

In addition, the townships support the Air-Vac six passenger plane.

In Hayes Township which has an estimated 700 voters, six people other than the board attended the annual meeting where a budget of $165,853 was adopted.

Included in the budget is $68,653 for a township hall. Mrs. Sandra Somerville said it will probably be built near the present hall on Old US 31 and Burgess Road.

Another $25,000 has been set aside for work on roads such as seal-coating and maintenance; $15,000, fire protection; $4,000, ambulance; $8,000 assessing; $13,500, salaries; $5,000 for purchase of a Sunputer Election System; $1,000, planning and zoning; $1,200 postage and supplies.

Revenue to balance the budget will comes from 1.0 mill allocated ($23,983) state revenue sharing, $16,129; funds derived frtun zoning and appeals, interest on savings, tax collection fees, delinquent taxes and other sources.

In Eveline Township where fireworks had been promised by some resident of the township only 17 residents besides the township board attended the meeting.

A proposed budget of $70,176 was approved. Of this amount, $17,000 was earmarked for work to be completed on Ridge Road and Mountain Road, both located east of the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix.

Mr. and Mrs. James C. Alger, Sr. of Charlevoix announce the engagement of their daughter, Tori Lynn, of Petoskey to Tim Fisher, also of Petoskey. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Fisher of Boyne Falls.

The bride-to-be teaches mathematics at the Charlevoix Middle School and her fiance is owner of LeCycliste Enterprises of Petoskey.

Miss Alger graduated from Charlevoix High School with valedictorian honors and from Central Michigan University with magna cum laude honors. She was also initiated into Delta Psi Kappa and Kappa Mu Epsilon, physical education and mathematics honors fraternities.

Fisher is a graduate of Petoskey High School.

A June wedding is being planned, after which the couple will make their home in Petoskey.

Wrestling tourney here Saturday

Students in Charlevoix enjoyed a week off from school last week, but for 16 boys from the middle school it did not mean a week of rest and relaxation.

The boys participated in a wrestling tournament Saturday at Benzie Central (Started at 6:30 a.m.).

Two youngsters, Allan Bergmann and Dean Kerridge, won gold medals to help the Rayders capture fourth place in the six team field.

Other seventh and eighth graders from Charlevoix who placed were: David Batdorff, Shannon Reynolds and Rick Gallant, second place; Rick Bartz, Pat Kerr, Steve Kenifeek, Ed Sarasin and Tim Young, third place.

Also competing but not placing were: Wayne Bergmann, Robert Charbeneau, David Umlor, Tim Novotny, Dean Hartnett and Scott Louiselle.

Jerry Puhl filled in for Norm Probert and coached the boys at Benzie Central. Probert was on vacation.

Grayling won the tournament with Benzie Central finishing second and Frankfort third.

Most of the boys who competed in the tournament will be coming to Charlevoix Saturday as the Charlvoix Knights of Columbus and the Charlevoix Wrestling Club holds its first annual middle school wrestling tournament. Nine mats will be in use as the tourney gets underway at noon in the high school gymnasium.

Besides seventh and eighth graders, third, fourth, fifth and sixth graders (boys and girls) will also compete. Last year there were 388 entries and officials are predicting just as many this year.

The tournament will be divided into divisions, depending upon grades. There will be 16 different weight classes - no more than seven pounds separating the classes - in each division.

Teams will be arriving here Friday night and will be staying with families in the area.

Tickets for the tournament cost 50 cents.

FAITH BIDS US OBEY THE LAWS OF THE LAND

The citizens of a free society know that the laws they must live by are the very guardians of their freedom and the safeguards of their lives and property. These laws are kept to the irreducible minimum required to protect us from each other and from the conceivable abuses of government, while at the same time allowing us the widest possible margin of personal liberty. God's laws were set forth throughout the Bible for these very reasons, along with many admonitions to obey the laws of the land as well. It will be to your advantage to learn all about this, by your regular attendance at the Church of your choice.

Where laws end, tyranny begins
—William Pitt, Earl of Chatham

"The law is good, if man use it lawfully."

WEEK IN REVIEW

Charlevoix

Morrie Foster improving

"They're wonderful! I hope everyone will keep the letter's and cards coming" Mrs. Mary (Foster) Lasko daughter of Maurice J. Foster, said in a telephone conversation with friends here last week.

She added that the messages of encouragement, the chatty notes from friends, the get-well cards are doing wonders for his morale as he reeuperates at the Spalding Rehabilitation Center in Denver.

Mrs. Laski added that he was receiving therapy daily, and hopefully, would be able to return to Michigan sometime later this spring. "Tell everyone how appreciative dad is of everything that everyone is doing for him" she added.

His address is room 318-Center, 1919 Ogden St., Denver, Colo. 80218.

Cinnamon in Europe for study

John Cinnamon of Charlevoix left for Europe with other Kalamazoo College students last week to participate in the college's foreign study program.

Foreign study is a standard part of the four-year curriculum of the Kalamazoo Plan, and approximately 80 percent of the college's students study abroad before graduation. As of spring, 1978, a total of 3,726 students had studied in 31 countries since 1958.

The program is designed to accommodate a variety of student needs, abilities, interests, and levels of foreign language proficiency. The difference between program charges to students and the actual costs is provided by the S.R. Light Trust Fund, which forms a solid financial base for the program. Thus, Kalamazoo College students pay little more for studying abroad than the usual on-campus fees, enabling a large number to go who would otherwise be unable to afford it.

Cinnamon is in Madrid, Spain.

Chapman models bridal fashions

Julie Chapman of Charlevoix was one of nine models who displayed the latest in bridal fashions at a Ferris State College fashion show last Wednesday.

The models are all students at Ferris State.

District Court in the black

The Charlevoix District Court is operating on a regular schedule and taking in more money than it spends.

Judge David W. Fershee told the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners last week that during 1978, income exceeded expenditures by $16,426, with income of $85,545 and expenditures of $69,119 (including $11,924 of CETA funds).

These figures compare with an excess of $6,801 in 1977, with income of $71,313 and expenditures of $64,512 (including $16,310 of CETA funds).

Judge Fershee further noted that during 1973, 1974, 1975, and 1976 the court operated in the red, with the greatest deficit, $32,316, showing in 1974.

The average time of waiting from arraignment to trial in non-jury cases is now two months, and in jury cases, three to four months, Judge Fershee said.

He also pointed out that his court is recovering a large portion of the money paid out for court-appointed attorneys: in 1976, $3,342 of $5,625 spent; in 1977, $3,975 of $4,816 spent; and in 1978, $3,342 of $4,841 spent.

District Court is busier than ever, too. The number of cases started in 1978 was 3,949, compared with 3,241 in 1977, Fershee said.

WAAC 'mild and meek'

WAAC, the radio station in Terre Haute, Ind., lived up to its word last week.

Bill Vogel of WVOY in Charlevoix called WAAC Monday morning to talk about that night's Michigan State-Indiana State basketball game (Indiana State is in Terre Haute). Vogel, of course, promised an MSU victory. The disc jockey s at WAAC saw it in a different light. "Ain't no Magic can stop the Bird (Larry)," they said.

So, they made an agreement. The loser would call the winner the morning following the game. Sure enough, Tuesday morning, WAAC called Vogel.

"They were pretty mild and meek," he said. "So I didn't lay it on them too bad."

At least, Bill, they didn't call collect!

Dr. Robert Martin to retire

Dr. Robert G. Martin of Charlevoix, who has served Charlevoix County as Medical Examiner for a number of years, has submitted his resignation effective June 1.

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners received the resignation last week and accepted it with regret.

Dr. Martin suggested that Dr. Richard Mansfield of Boyne City, who has served as a deputy Medical Examiner, be named his successor.

Podskalny receives scholarship

Nancy Podskalny, a second year student at Grand Valley State College, has been named the 1979 recipient of the Jack Rosendahl Memorial Scholarship given annually to a person who has participated in the Charlevoix County Big Brothers/Big Sisters program.

Mrs. Ray Wood, coordinator for the Big Brothers/Big Sisters in the county, made the announcement. This is the second year that Miss Podskalny has received the $200 scholarship.

The daughter of Mrs. Marion Podskalny, Nancy is an art education major at Grand Valley. She is a 1977 graduate of Charlevoix High School.

The scholarship was established in memory of Mr. Rosendahl who was among those instrumental in organizing the program in Charlevoix County. It is available to only those who participated in the program as children or teenagers, Mrs. Wood explained.

Two attend banking session

Kathleen Meggison and Sherrie Loucks met Northern Michigan University President John X. Jamrich during the first-year session of the Northern Michigan School of Banking, held recently on the NMU campus in Marquette.

Mrs. Loucks, of the Payroll Dept. and Mrs. Meggison of Customer Service of the Charlevoix County State Bank, were two of 30 bankers from throughout Michigan who attended the two-year school. The school is sponsored by Groups 1 and 11 of the Michigan Bankers Association and Northern.

No candidates thus far

Monday is the deadline for filing nominating petitions to be on the ballot as a candidate for the Charlevoix Board of Education.

As of Monday afternoon, no one had filed a petition at the school's business office.

There are two vacancies on the board this year.

MRS. JACK Rosenthal (center) presents the scholarship to Nancy Podskalny of Grand Valley State College. With them is Mrs. Ray Wood, coordinator of the Charlevoix County Big Brothers / Big Sisters organization.

Three file petitions for school board election

There will be one contested and one uncontested race in Charlevoix's June 11 school board election.

Three people filed nominating petitions for the two vacancies before Monday's 4 p.m. deadline.

In the contested race, Dennis W. Kusina and Elaine Martin will vie to fill the unexpired term of James Haggard, who resigned because of business reasons after serving less than a year. The term will be for three years. Clem Wagner has replaced Haggard on the board. He will serve until June 11.

In the uncontested race, Charles Elzinga will seek re-election to a four year term.

The earlier a person learns to swim, the better, says Suellen Smith, a local swimming instructor. Holding true to that philosophy, Suellen (left) just completed a winter swimming program for area youngsters. (See page 10)

City officials take oath

It's official. Shirley Roloff and Ivan Whitley are now members of the Charlevoix City Council.

Mrs. Roloff and Whitley joined Mayor Sam Supernaw, Councilman Ray Wood, Treasurer Jim Brinker and Clerk Deanne Balch in taking the oath of office Monday night. Supernaw, Whitley, Wood and Mrs. Roloff were all elected to their positions in November while Brinker and Mrs. Balch were recently appointed by council to their positions.

Mrs. Roloff replaces George Plumm as the 3rd Ward representative on council. Plumm served on council for six years (see page 6).

Whitley returns to council after nearly a five month absence. Shortly after his re-election in November, Whitley resigned from council until his new term took effect. In the meantime, council appointed Bill Bellows to fill the unexpired term. Bellows was appointed in early February. At a recent meeting, council appointed Bellows to the city planning commission.

Gale force winds ravage Northern Michigan

Howling winds, which reached gale force, ravaged parts of Charlevoix late Thursday night and early Friday morning.

Clocked at up to 82 miles per hour in Pellston, the strong winds knocked out power, felled trees and created an ice buildup so thick at the Charlevoix Harbor that it took the Sundew almost three days to break through the ice and into the open waters of Lake Michigan.

The Sundew had been summoned Friday morning to help free at least a half a dozen ships stuck in the Straits of Mackinac. But ice in the harbor was so thick - reportedly reaching to the bottom in some places - that it literally inched its way along. Finally, Sunday night it reached open water.

Several households and businesses in the area were without power as fallen trees wiped out electrical lines.

Workers for Top O' Michigan were busy over the weekend repairing downed lines. Several area residents were without power until Sunday.

Homes and cars were also damaged by uprooted trees. Light aircraft at the Charlevoix Airport broke moorings. Some overturned. A silo under construction at Medusa was damaged.

City workers started cleaning up the debris (primarily tree limbs) shortly after the wind died down.

Children of divorce apt to experience social/academic problems

There's a new slang word for it now – "split."

That's what many people are calling it when a couple divorces. Perhaps "split" is a better word because it denotes something sharp and splintering as compared to the cold legalistic meaning of "divorce".

Last year, in Charlevoix County, 147 couples initiated divorce suits. Of these couples, 95 were parents, with a total number of 208 children. These figures compare with 70 sets of parents and 140 children in 1977.

It is the welfare of these children of divorce that concerns George Ebenhoeh, acting Friend of the Court. Talking with him reveals the sharpness and splintering of "splitting".

According to Ebenhoeh, children of divorce are likely to have more academic and social problems than other children, problems that often carry on into adulthood.

These problems require the help of school social workers, social service workers, law enforcement officials, the courts, and many other public agencies.

A little known fact is that children of divorce are under the jurisdiction of the Friend of the Court until the age of 18 or graduation from high school. At the present time, approximately 1,400 children are under the jurisdiction of the Charlevoix County Friend of the Court. Many of them still live in Charlevoix County, while others have moved to another part of the state or country.

The financial impact of divorce on the community is tremendous. Ebenhoeh says that most of the children involved in divorce cases last year are now on Aid to Dependent Children (ADC) because in today's economy there is no way for most divorced couples to maintain two households without ADC help.

The 1,400 children now under the jurisdiction of the Friend of the Court represent 550 divorce cases, but support money is being collected in only 375 of them. The department's support orders amounted to $440,000 last year, about half of which was collected.

The cost of divorces cannot be measured only in moneys paid out. There is also the time spent by the courts, everybody from clerks to counselors to judges who are involved in the process at the beginning then the time of all the other public agencies which may become involved with either parents or children, or both, until the children reach the age of majority.

Ebenhoeh sees the whole process because it is his job to investigate divorce situations and make recommendations for custody, support, and visitation, and to follow up on the recommendations through the years.

"We get the people after they start divorce action," Ebenhoeh says, "We interview both parties, and in disputed custody cases, we interview the children, if they are old enough, as to their attitudes toward each parent, their schools, neighborhoods, etc., We try to discourage long term legal battles over children. It's detrimental to them."

Today, divorces occur among all social classes, records indicate. There is no longer the great social stigma attached to the action that there once was. And it's easy to get a divorce. Ebenhoeh says there are few contested divorces and in most cases he sees, the attorneys come in with the action "signed, sealed, and delivered."

Why do people want divorces? William Everett, a clinical psychologist with the Northern Mental Health Clinics in Petoskey, counsels many people on the brink of a divorce and has some observations.

"There are emotional changes in people," Everett says, "and social and personal changes. They want to grow. They don't like the idea of possessing each other. All of this may lead to the remark, "He (or she) is not the person I married."

To help prevent the development of these feelings, Everett believes that the whole society has to be better tuned in to teaching young people about sex, marriage, the realities of life, and accepting personal responsibilities.

"If members of society don't intervene, then this high divorce rate will perpetuate," Everett says.

When asked if sex education should be left to the schools, he said that "Ideally, it should be n community endeavor. The whole family should be educated, not just 10th or 11th graders."

In another endeavor, Everett said the Department of Mental Health is developing a program to provide more divorce counseling, including looking at all avenues and alternatives and evaluating how divorce will affect the children in the family. "Divorce is an emotional thing," Everett noted. "As emotions go up, rationality goes down. We have to work around these emotions."

Everett goes back to talking about "a broad education about life": "Even if it doesn't reduce the number of divorces, it could result in reducing the trauma in children of divorce. Parents might give them more consideration. At least one parent should be able to accept the role of a good single parent."

However, Everett does not belive that all divorces are bad, indicating that long-term conflicts can come to an end with benefits to both parents and children.

"Usually there's a feeling that there's a winner and a loser in the divorce," Ebenhoeh adds, "It shouldn't be that way."

Everett is just one of the many counselors in the area working with couples whose marriages are unstable. Every "split" that they can prevent will be immeasurable in human terms.

A DISRUPTIVE EXPERIENCE

Two city managers in the last year is a sad thing for all involved parties. It is a very disruptive experience for professional people to leave their friends, schools and a home for the uncertain future of a new job. Perhaps the past two city managers did not fail as much as other persons failed honestly to help them succeed. And it must be a shattering climax for them doing no different than in their previous job.

The council should know they have a far reaching responsibility in asking a man to risk his entire career on accepting a position not really understood by the persons that selected him. And leaving a job involuntarily always places a blight on a man's employment record. A few of the council may lack the background for making such a important and final decision. In that case, perhaps they should like some of the big incorporations do, use a counseling firm to advise them.

It is duty of the council to make the new charter work. So they should read it thoroughly and understand it's purpose. The most important part of the charter is the manager's position. Now when the city government needs a "Moses" to lead it they should pay more money and hire a above average city manager. And may God help him.

Charlevoix Yesterday

THIS STURDY LOOKING VESSEL, the MARDLD II, exploded and burned off Simmons Reef on August 1, 1936. Its tragic end, as told in "Bob Miles' Charlevoix -- a Century in Pictures", came about as the result of another accident. Several months earlier, an oil tanker, the J. DSWALD BOYD, had gone aground on Simmon's Reef with a full load of gasoline. The MARDLD II was dispatched to salvage the gasoline and bring it to Charlevoix for storage in temporary tanks set up at the foot of Antrim Street, but on this New Year's Day trip, it exploded and burned near the ill-fated J. DSWALD BOYD. Five crew members lost their lives in the accident that was never explained.

Kiwanians turn sap into syrup at the sugar house

The sap buckets on the maple trees tells us that maple syrup season is here again.

And that means the Kiwanis Club is busy collecting, processing and canning most all the sweet sap in town.

The Kiwanis Club has been doing this since 1958. After convincing the city council that tapping the trees would not injure them, the club set up a sap collecting-processing system. At first, the operation was small. But in 1962 the "sugar house" was built on land donated by the late Kit Carson. In addition, $6,000 was spent on equipment. The operation grew bigger.

Today, the Kiwanis Club uses over 1,200 buckets to collect the sap, nearly double what they started with. Most maple trees carry two buckets. From these trees enough sap is collected to make about 500 gallons of syrup (It takes about 30 gallons of sap to make 1 gallon of syrup).

Of course, the amount of sap collected each year varies depending upon the weather. In 1975, for instance, only 208 gallons of syrup was made. Sap usually runs when the nights are cold and the days are warm. This year because of the high snow piles around the trees the club did not get the buckets out soon enough for the first sap run.

When the sap is collected from the maple trees it is taken to the "sugar house." Here, the sap is poured into tanks and then into sap pans. The sap is then boiled at a temperature of 218 and one-fourth degrees. This produces "legal" syrup weighing 11 pounds to the gallon (3 pounds of water and 8 pounds of sugar).

Throughout the boiling process, the syrup is constantly skimmed to remove foam and sedimentation. From the boiling pans it is strained through a nylon felt fabric into milk cans for storage until it is canned. Before canning, it is heated and strained again.

The syrup is sold throughout the area in pints, quarts, half gallons and gallon tins as well as three-quarter pint cans.

Proceeds raised from the sale are used for the club's youth fund projects.

E.J. (Pat) Hawley watches the sap as its drained from a tub on the truck.

Nuclear waste disposal problem must be solved now

It is no secret that finding a solution to the nuclear waste problem is a top priority of the Department of Energy.

Since the advent of nuclear energy, no safe method for disposing of the waste has been discovered. Most nuclear plants are forced to cool the waste in pools adjoining the plant's reactor.

The problem with the waste is that it remains radioactive for hundreds of years. And the human body can only absorb so much radiation without being greatly affected.

Until 1970, the United States dumped low-level waste in drums in the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. But it has been discovered that the drums are leaking radioactive materials. Scientists are now studying the possibility of burying the waste in salt beds, granites, basalts and shales. They are attempting to learn which are most stable and would best prevent radioactivity from leaking into the environment. It might be years, though, before anything conclusive is determined.

Two states, California and Maine, have already banned construction of new nuclear plants until an acceptable solution to the waste problem has been found.

Although we are short on energy – and nuclear energy supplies us with one-eighth of our electrical power – it might be wise for Michigan to ben construction of nuclear plants, too. Sen. Carl Levin is proposing legislation that would place a moratorium on building new nuclear plants. We support his idea because we feel finding a solution to the disposal problem is paramount.

This problem must be addressed and solved now.

No one under 16 allowed unless accompanied by...

A few Fridays ago, I attended the movie "Animal House" which was playing at a local theater. It had an 'R' rating.

Imagine my surprise when I discovered that several students from the eighth grade had also attended the movie, accompanied by other students of approximately the same age.

I thought that an 'R' rating meant no one under 16 was allowed in unless accompanied by a parent or guardian.

I suppose more than one element is at fault here. Because of the ownership of this particular theater, I should think they would have a special interest in the welfare of the community's children and what they are viewing.

But the management is not alone at fault. Aren't parents checking to see where their junior high children are going, what they are seeing?

I have no objection to 'R' rated movies. But, if we are going to insist movies to be rated, then enforce the ratings-parents and theater management.

Let's not let the policy of our community theater become "No one under 16 admitted unless accompanied by the price of a ticket."

Thursday's storm awesome

"Awesome" is the best word I can think of to describe the power of last Thursday's storm which cost Charlevoix so many beautiful old trees.

Like most other folks, I woke up every 15 minutes during the night and was always a little startled to find the house still standing.

About midnight, I could hear the Lake Michigan surf for the first time in three months, a good indication that the spring break-up was at hand.

During the night I discovered that the wind had forced open two porch windows which I swear were locked. How can the wind unlock windows? The next day a cold draft was coming from under the door to the spare bedroom. The "locked" window in a little adjoining bath also had been unlocked by the wind.

I spent no little time Thursday night wondering about the stability of two big maple trees upwind of our house which appear to lean ominously toward our bedroom. If they fell, would the roof hold them? Or would they come crashing right through our bedroom ceiling? Would Judy and I meet our maker impaled to the sides of a maple tree like sap buckets?

At first light of day I went outside to survey the damage and was astounded to see so many old trees – some of them very good friends – had failed to make it through the night.

Evergreens were particularly susceptible to the 82-mile-per-hour winds which Charlevoix experienced overnight. Their relatively tiny root systems just weren't big enough to anchor them in such a gale.

The loss of deciduous trees, of course, would have been far greater if they had been in leaf, like the evergreens. As it turned out, most of them withstood the high winds in fine shape. The wind even did a good job of pruning out a lot of dead wood.

* * * *

THE WORST effect of the storm was the loss of electric power by Top O'Michigan customers throughout Northern Michigan. Most of the power failures were caused by falling trees and the little utility just didn't have enough repairmen to restore electric power immediately over such a wide area.

At last report, some homes were still without power and residents were rapidly gaining a new respect for the role electricity plays in their lives. When the power goes off, so does the furnace, the water pump, the kitchen range, the hot water heater, the washer, the dryer and the refrigerator – not to mention the many little appliances we rely on to make life more comfortable.

The storm had to happen in the spring when many basements are kept dry only because sump pumps are on the job. Water rose in some Charlevoix area basements over the weekend, but sump pumps were useless without electricity.

I would imagine generator salesmen did a brisk business.

We will never know how much food spoiled in refrigerators and freezers during the power outage, because no one keeps track of such minor details. But I would imagine the losses would start to multiple rapidly for those families which have been without power three days or longer.

Fortunately -- or perhaps unfortunately – the storm struck at the end of a long winter when garden produce frozen in the fall should have been pretty well used up. The unfortunate part is that a full freezer will hold its frost longer than a partially empty freezer.

I suppose poets and dreamers found the power of the storm magnificent to behold. But it was a nightmare for those who lived through it and those who have had major disruptions in their lives because of it.

Great Lakes sailors will attest to the fact that our worst storms come in November and April. They are so right.

McCabe takes pay raise because he's loyal

You have to admire John McCabe, president of Michigan Blue Cross-Blue Shield. Despite his extreme devotion to cost containment, he recently sucked in his gut and forced himself to accept a $9,000 raise, putting him at $130,000 a year.

He also gritted his teeth in the face of a new contract which could pay him $250,000 annually by 1983. Surely he didn't want to accept such a generous contract, but he put his own selfish interests aside. He agreed to take the $250,000.

The easy way out would have been for McCabe to refuse the money. He has dedicated his administrative talents to cutting the costs of medical insurance for Blues subscribers, the people who must pay his salary. He must know it looks bad when his friends on the Blues board keep raising his pay.

So why does he take the money? Why damage his credibility and public image for a few more lousy bucks he probably doesn't need?

The answer is loyalty. Every time McCabe gets a pay hike, his friends on the Blues board justify it by saying his salary is in line with that paid to presidents of other corporations the same size. If McCabe refused a raise, he would be guilty of disloyalty to his fellow corporation presidents who depend upon each other to keep their salaries exorbitant.

Whenever a corporation president needs a raise, he gives his board copies of a survey revealing that several other corporation presidents are making more money than he is. It is then a matter of prestige for the board to bring its president up to financial parity. No self-respecting corporation wants to employ the lowest-paid president in the block.

Obviously, if some corporation presidents ever start refusing raises, this would show up in survey results. There might come a day when a president needing a raise would be unable to point to another president getting a higher salary.

Once something like that gets started, there's no telling where it might end. And it's not just salaries. What if a corporation president said he didn't want a membership in the country club or a private gymnasium in his office john? Such heresy could spell he end of stock options and chauffeured limousines.

It's easy to see what John McCabe is up against. As much as he wants to contain costs, he also wants to retain the respect and comradeship of his fellow corporation presidents. He can't betray his peers. So McCabe bravely swallows his cost container and accepts the pay raises.

It is interesting to note that this peer-pressure principle works at both ends of the financial spectrum. Just as it's important for corporation presidents to stay wealthy, it's also important for poor people to stay poor. I explained this to my friend Harvey Luzer, whose name is phony but whose horror story is excruciatingly true.

Harvey is 71, retired, living mostly on Social Security and belongs to the Blues. During the first quarter of 1978, he incurred $100 in doctors' fees, which he paid direct and in full, applying to Medicare for reimbursement.

Medicare allowed only $80 of the fees. They said $100 was $20 more than doctors in Harvey's town should charge (Harvey has yet to meet a doctor who doesn't charge more than his insurance covers). Of the $80, Medicare allowed 80%, or $64. This left $36 gone from Harvey's pocket.

There was also a deductible charge of $80 that had to be paid first. So Harvey didn't get $64 back, he got $4. His share of the $100 in medical fees was $96.

But wait. Each month, $8.20 is deducted from Harvey's Social Security check for Medicare insurance. He also must pay $41.40 to Blue Cross every quarter to protect the areas not covered by Medicare. That's a total of $66.09 for medical insurance in the first quarter of 1978.

Harvey ended up $162.09 in the red for $100 worth of medical care. And this didn't include prescription costs, which certainly must be the leading cause of heart attacks in drug stores.

Harvey is angry about having to pay so much for health care. But I reminded him if it weren't for medical costs, he would no longer be poor. And he would lose the respect and comradeship of other poor people.

Harvey said he didn't care. He's not as loyal and brave as John McCabe.

The Three Mile Island story: Let rationality take hold

WASHINGTON – One of the best moments of the Jimmy Carter Presidency was logged recently when he and his wife walked into the control room of the Three Mile Island nuclear plant at a time when 90 miles away hysterics were talking anxiously of fleeing even farther from the source of the big nuclear news.

Carter studied nuclear science, exposed himself to the hot stuff as a naval officer and realizes the safety record of the commercial nuclear industry is quite good. In going to Three Mile Island when doomsayers were mindlessly prattling on, Carter showed a command quality and a sense of teaching by symbolic presence which deserves a salute.

As I write this, there is good reason to expect that the potential great harm resulting from the accident at Three Mile Island – the worst in the history of commercial nuclear operations – is diminishing, and that rationality will prevail. In fact, it is entirely possible that the Three Mile Island episode will not only result in improved safety at nuclear plants, but also in a greater public understanding about how these plants work.

The ability to reason is what separates mankind from lesser animals. There is great and understandable fear of nuclear power. It was unfortunate that this power was revealed to the world in the horrible form of the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. But then electricity can be a horrible power, too, and so can the combustion of coal, petroleum and gas. Our fears of these energy forms diminished long ago as an understanding of safety overcame the cries and warnings of doomsayers of another time.

Doomsayers are always with us. I was dismayed but not surprised by the quality of commentary during the early phase of the Three Mile Island story. It was the worst case and the likelihood of catastrophe which made the bulletins. At one point, NBC pundit David Brinkley virtually terminated the nuclear industry by doubting whether "it can survive after what happened in Pennsylvania," and concluding that "we might all wonder if they will ever be allowed to build anymore at all anywhere."

We can expect irrationality from the likes of, say, a Jack Lemmon or a Jane Fonda, as dramatized in their film about a nuclear plant. After all, Ms. Fonda went to Hanoi during the Vietnam war, and used that regime's radio to propagandize American troops. She was sure that the Communists and the Viet Cong were nice guys, and she thinks nuclear power is intrinsically evil.

Most people have more sense than Jane Fonda, though, and can learn about radiation and nuclear power. Radiation has surrounded us since the beginning of time. It comes from the sun, and is in the air we breathe and the food and water we consume. If you live in a brick house, you get bit more than in a wooden one. If you fly coast-to-coast you receive five millirems of it. If you live in Denver, you get 52 more millirems a year than if you live in New York because you pick up one millirem for every 100 feet of altitude.

If you live within a 50-mile radius of a nuclear plant you get less than one extra millirem per year. If you live near the Three Mile Island plant, you pick up an estimated 12 additional millirems due to the incident, about half the amount of one dental x-ray. Most Americans receive an annual average of 200 millirems of radiation, well within the safety limits; nuclear power plants contribute an infinitesimal amount of this total.

As of this writing, not one person has been killed or hurt as a result of a commercial nuclear accident – Three Mile Island included. The American Nuclear Insurers, recently noting the "superior" safety record of the nation's nuclear power plants, raised the coverage, and applied a substantial cash credit to continuance of this insurance.

According to government reports, coal mining, oil and gas extraction and electric and gas transmission are far, far more dangerous occupations than nuclear. In 1977, for example, 123 people were killed in coal-mining, 291 in oil and gas extraction, and not one in nuclear.

Yet, there have been serious accidents in commercial nuclear plants. An electrical fire at the Brown's Ferry TVA plant once knocked out all safety curcuits, but was brought under control. In 1969, a breeder reactor at the Detroit Fermi Plant overheated, causing fuel-rod melts, but again, there was no catastrophe, just a scare.

It is the potential danger from a plant "meltdown" which causes nuclear engineers to work so conscientiously, just as it is the potential danger in a flight of a jetliner circling across the globe at 600 m.p.h. which causes pilots to pay attention to their work. It is far more dangerous to be a passenger in a car or commercial jet than to live near, or work in, a nuclear power plant. As one shrewd observer put it: "If you want to save thousands of American lives each year, just prohibit the left turn in traffic."

Still, the Three Mile Island accident must be thoroughly investigated and reported on, particularly as it applies to radiation levels. The nuclear industry must give an accounting for itself, in the wake of this dangerous event. It was grave enough that government officials talked evacuation, and that the President found it necessary to march into the control room.

Getting up every morning, however, is a risk, as indeed are many of our daily activities. We demand electric power, and nuclear is one good way to supply it. The nuclear safety record is superior, and must be kept that way.

Someday, all of us will understand nuclear power, and be more calm about it, just as generations ago, most of those hysterical folk who wanted to attack and destroy the infernal steam engine and first automobile as evil monstrosities found their sense of God-given reason.

Hope diminishes fear

To know Cassie Barrett of The Cracker Factory by Joyce Rebeta-Burditt, you don't have to be crazy or alcoholic. All you have to do is be a housewife; a mother of children, and have had a bad week. From the seventh floor of Shaker Heights Hospital in Cleveland, Ohio, Cassie observes first hand the psychiatric syndrome. She, herself, is a patient in for a term of r&r&r, the third "r" being retro-introspection.

As a reader, you find yourself pulling for Cassie. If she can figure herself out, who she loves, who she is, and what she wants out of life, somehow we will all be cheered. For the brink is that very fine line separating the "loonies" from the "in-tunies". And all of us have felt uncomfortably close to it at one time or another if we are honest with ourselves.

The most remarkable feature of The Cracker Factory is not necessarily the plot which moves with Cassie through a maze of major and minor depressions, supported by the efforts of her psyeliatrist, A.A., and her own desire to get well. Neither is it the theme which grapples with the problem of a woman's search for self-respect. It is the human insight and the tongue-in-cheek humor with which it is related that redeems a very sad story and makes it memorable.

There are episodes involving hovering, well-intentioned student nurses, from whom patients plot to escape by lengthy trips to the bathroom. There is Christmas on the seventh floor which Cassie likens to "Yuletide at the wnx museum." And there is the unpleasant floor nurse who comments on "how nice Cassie looks in that color" when she leaves the ward dressed totally in black.

I remember the feeling I was left with after seeing "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest." It was a conglomerate of sadness and triumph. But even in the triumph there remained an emptiness, a prevailing sense of pity for all the mindlessness, for all the senseless wandering to and fro and eyes staring blankly at what those more fortunate see. It was by and large, a frightening depressing experience, which failed to find much salvation in the way of comic relief.

Not so, The Cracker Factory in which the hope of recovery somehow diminishes the fear and depression. It's a basically heroic story of someone not too much different from any one of us who works through problems not too much different than any of ours. It is the simple story of Cassie's triumph over herself.

Nuclear problem concerns us

Last week the attention of the nation was focused on the potentially serious problem caused by the malfunction of a nuclear power electrical generating plant in Pennsylvania.

What concerned many Michigan citizens is that there are some plants either in operation of under construction in our state that are of the same or similar design.

In a speech on the House floor earlier this week, the House Republican Leader, William Bryant, Jr., outlined a number of potential safety problems at plants in Michigan.

After speaking with a senior radiation technician, Bryant noted that in some instances inspection of safety procedures and systems is done almost solely through a review of written reports filed by the employees of the company which operates the power plant. In addition, Bryant said only about 1% of the written records are reviewed.

Another safety concern is the apparent practice of choosing the lower reading or the reading that doesn't indicate a problem when two gauges disagree on the operation of a nuclear power plant. Finally, the Federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) doesn't consider devices which monitor radiation emission levels as safety-related equipment, and therefore, the performance of these devices is not checked by NRC inspectors.

Bryant has introduced a resolution (which I co-sponsored) that calls on the NRC to investigate these alleged problems and make any necessary changes. The resolution also calls for action by the President and Congress.

While asking the federal government to review safety procedures in our Michigan plants is a good idea, I also support another proposal requesting Gov. Milliken to appoint a special blue ribbon commission made up of legislators, nuclear scientists, and state officials to study the operation of Michigan's nuclear power plant to make sure every safety mechanism is working, that more safety devices will be added if necessary, and that personnel are properly trained.

This effort will hopefully lessen any potential dangers in our existing nuclear plant operations, and in addition, should provide more information for discussion and evaluation of risks vs. needs in considering the construction of more nuclear power plants in Michigan and elsewhere.

Six years on city council educationing, but George Plumm decides to step down

George Plumm, after serving six years, retired this week from the Charlevoix Common Council. Here he tells the Courier some of his thoughts about the accomplishments of the Council during his regime and some of the things that still need to be done.

COURIER: Why didn't you run for re-election?

PLUMM: I figured six years was a good education and someone else should have a chance for a while. Unfortunately, there's not much interest in government. People like to complain but they don't want to do anything about it.

COURIER: What do you remember as important accomplishments of the Council during the past six years?

PLUMM: Installation of the May Street sewer, the Clinton Street parking lot, the abutment wall on the lake shore, and the Ferry Avenue beach dock, among other things.

COURIER: What about the streets?

PLUMM: We're keeping up the paving program, spend $24,000 to $30,000 a year. We have to have a program because it would be too big a job all at once.

COURIER: And the electrical system?

PLUMM: We're still beefing up the electric distribution system and putting in more underground line. We also have the electric distribution system and the water system on maps now.

COURIER: What used to be a problem that the Council doesn't have to worry about now?

PLUMM: The Planning Commission has taken the brunt of permits for condos and other building projects. We used to have to do that. Now the Council just acts as the Board of Appeals and usually goes with the Planning Commission.

COURIER: What is the biggest problem facing the Council now?

PLUMM: Hiring a new city manager. I think we should buy someone away from another city, give him more money and a better contract. The charter takes a lot of duties away from the Council and gives them to the city manager. The Council and mayor have to realize they don't have as much say – so as they used to have. We should welcome a city manager who takes duties onto himself and one who is a good public relations man. This is important, especially in a small town.

COURIER: What other problems must the Council face in the near future?

PLUMM: A source of electrieity. We've had an opportunity to buy into atomic and coal-fired plants. We've been leaning toward the coal-fired plant. Whatever we do will be very expensive but we have to have power and can sell what we don't use. There will probably be more restrictions on atomic plants now. The Council is waiting for a ruling on the Headlee Amendment roll back. There's a possibility they face a $58,000 budget cut, but it seems probable only if the city was operating at the maximum millage rate. The city-township relationship always hrings up questions. I think consolidation with the township would be a good idea for both, but I don't know if it's going to happen.

COURIER: Is being a councilman a time-consuming job?

PLUMM: Not when you have a city manager. Otherwise it is because you have to have more meetings.

COURIER: What do councilmen get paid?

PLUMM: Twelve hundred dollars a year and an additional $150 a year after the first term. That's to encourage people to run for re-election. Then there's $10 for each extra meeting.

COURIER: Have you ever held any other political office?

PLUMM: No, the only other job I've held was Commander of the American Legion for two terms. But I might be interested in getting back on the Council after three or four years' rest. I know I'll miss the Council, knowing what's going on. That's why I wish there were more candidates for office, so people could get a better understanding of how things are run.

COURIER: Have you always lived in Charlevoix?

PLUMM: Yes, except for four or five years. I graduated from high school in Brimley in 1945. I also spent some time in the service.

COURIER: What is your job?

PLUMM: I manage the Water's Edge Resort for Mr. John McGoff.

COURIER: What about your family?

PLUMM: My wife was Maxine McKinzie of Charlevoix. We have a daughter, Jane, who lives in Charlevoix with her husband and two children, and a son, Pat, who's in the Navy in San Diego.

COURIER: What do you do in your spare time?

PLUMM: I like to hunt and fish. Now I'll have a little more time to do it.

Meet Charlevoix

When the mail was brought here by train

Charlevoix History Part II

This is the second installment of "Memories of Charlevoix" written by Jessie Hamlin Short of Traverse City, who was born in Hayes Township in 1893 and spent many years in the Charlevoix area:

We got our mail at Burgess Post office. The Pere Marquette Railroad brought mail in trains. They had an iron hand that snatched the mail pouch and brought it in the mail car. Then they kicked the mail sack out the train. Did not stop, only slowed down. In this way we got our mail. If there were breakable items, many times they were broken.

We had an old mail man that was hired by the government to see that the mail got to the Post Office. He was old and we called him "Grandpa Moore". In those days, things came in barrels, like flour, sugar, molasses, and pork. Also oil or kerosene. The candy came in sticks like molasses. Licorice, peppermint, maple, and horehound.

The old man who kept the store was Horace Newson. He used to make wine and put it in barrels in a dirt cellar with dirt floor. He had a son, Bernie, who got sore with his dad and went to the wine cellar, pulled the plug, and let all of his father's wine out on the dirt floor . . .

I went to the school called Burgess. It still stands, but has been made over into a house now. It is over a hundred years old. There was one teacher who taught grades up through 8th. From there, one could go to Normal School in Charlevoix to study to get to teach school. We had an old iron stove in the middle of the room to keep us warm. stuffed it with wood and it gave out lots of heat. We had a woodshed, a long shelf to set our lunch baskets on, and a water pail with a long-handled dipper to use for all of us. So we all drank from this same dipper. The oldest pupils sat in the back of the room and the smaller ones in front. We had classes in front and recited before the whole school. We had hand-made sleds to slide on the hill at noon and recess. At that time there were woods all around the school.

The famers pastured their cattle down on Mr. Stack's land close to Lake Michigan, or Little Traverse Bay, and we drove them there in the morning and herded them home at evening. There were perhaps eight farmers that used this land for pasture. There were lots of wild huckleberries there to pick, also lovely lady slippers and arbutus flowers.

As I think of some of the old settlers, like Mrs. Rose Nettleton. I used to know her. She as a learned woman. Also Harrison Bedford and Mr. Mason, who had stores on Bridge street. Our doctor was Dr. Theland, who would go out in the country with horse and buggy to doctor an ill patient. There was no hospital there. Many doctored themselves. I think of an old Indian lady called Susan Greensky. She was a medicine doctor, used roots, bark and berries to doctor with. Many sought her good advice. She lived in a shanty by Susan Lake that was named after her family.

Bartha demonstrates the art of Chinese cooking

If you missed the WOK demonstrations last week and would like to know more about Chinese food, there is good news.

According to Linda Mason of Charlee's, last week's demonstrations proved so successful that another will be held this summer.

"I think we had about 80 people here Tuesday night and another 40 or so Wednesday afternoon," she said.

Chef Steve Bartha prepared a variety of Chinese dishes for his audience. While making a particular dish, Bartha would explain step-by-step what he was doing and why. And, then when he was finished, he would pass the dish around so everyone could taste it. Several people in the audience wrote down some of Bartha's suggestions and some of his recipes.

Bartha formerly owned the Natural Harmony Country Store in Harbor Springs.

Besides another WOK demonstration, Mrs. Mason said that a deep dish pizza demonstration might also be held this summer.

The vegetables used in the demonstrations last week were supplied by Edwards.

Prosecuters want stricter penalties for gill netting

Charlevoix County Prosecuter Scott Beatty and two nther area prosecuters met last week with representatives from Gnv. Milliken's office to discuss the problem of Indian fishing rights.

Attending the meeting besides Beatty were Jim Young, Antrim County prosecuter; John Forsenian, Grand Traverse County prosecuter; Ken Franklin, the governor's legal advisor; Jonathan Cain, an aide to the governor; and Charles Guenther, chief enforcement officer of the Department of Natural Resources.

According to Beatty, this was the first time representatives from the governor's office had met with local prosecuters in connection with the fishing problem.

"This meeting gave us (the prosecuters) a chance to have some input in the negotations the governor is having with Northern Michigan Iribes to close Lake Michigan waters south of Good Hart to gill netting by members of the tribe, as we agreed upon last year," Beatty said.

He pointed out that last year's agreement was not effective because the only penalty involved was "a slap on the wrist" by tribal leaders.

"All three of us (prosecuters) feel that if another such agreement is made, there should be significant penalties which would act as real deterrents," Beatty added.

The prosecuters also asked for the solicitor general's and attorney general's support in any action that is taken.

Another suggestion that came out of the meeting, Beatty said, was that a three member biological assessment team be appointed to study fish resources in the area. The team would be made up of a member of the DNR, a member of the Indian tribes and a neutral biologist.

"There is no biological data to back up the feeling that our fish resource is being depleted," he explained.

Max Novak reappointed

Gov. Milliken has announced that Max Novak has been reappointed to the Michigan Public School Employees' Retirement Board - subject to Senate confirmation.

Novak, who is retired, spent 40 years in the Charlevoix Public Schools. He is president of the Charlevoix Board of Education. Active in memberships include the Charlevoix Area Hospital Board of Directors, Northern Michigan Educational Counecl, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the Board of Directors of the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club. He is also active with the American Legion Boys' State program.

He was first appointed to the board in 1967.

Area officials learn cost of election system; city's proposed bill - $8,325

All township and city clerks in the county have received a communication from the Ways & Means Committee of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners outlining a proposal for a county-wide computer election system and indicating the cost of equipment for such a system which each unit of government would have to bear.

The communication indicates that inplementation of the proposal is contingent upon a 100 percent favorable response from the townships and cities, and if this response is received, the proposal would be presented to the entire County Board of Commissioners for action this week.

The cost proposal is based on a total equipment cost of $49,937, with the county's investment being $7,114 and the remainder borne by the various units of government based on number of registered voters.

The county's share includes 10 percent of the total cost, or $4,994 plus $2,120 for eight unassigned voting booths.

Each township and city would be levied $1.29 for each registered voter plus the cost of the required number of voting booths, vote carrying cases, and demonstration units.

With 2,643 registered voters, the City of Charlevoix is the largest governmental unit in the county. The initial levy on the city (at $1.29 per voter) would be $3,409.47. In addition, 18 voting booths would cost $4,770, three vote carrying cases would cost $79.50, and one demonstration unit would cost $66, for a total of $8,324.97.

Based on the same formula of number of registered voters and needs, the cost to other area units of government would be:

Charlevoix Township (620 registered voters), $1,952.30. Hayes Township (690 registered voters), $2,307.60. Marion Township (550 registered voters), $1,862.00. Norwood Township (325 registered voters), $1,041.75. Peaine Township (109 registered voters), $763.11. St. James Township (187 registered voters), $863.73. Eveline Township (743 registered voters), $2,375.97. South Arm Township (678 registered voters), $2,292.12. City of East Jordan (1,213 registered voters), $4,095.27.

Kindergarten roundup set for Thursday

Thursday has been designated as the enrollment day for children of the Charlevoix School District who will enter Kindergarten in September.

Parents of children whose last name begins with any letter from "A" through "M" are asked to register the pre-schooler between 9 and 11 a.m. Children whose last name begins with any letter from "N" through "Z" are to be registered from 1 to 3 p.m.

Parents are requested to bring to school only the child to be registered and the birth certificate and immunization record for that child.

Mrs. Geri Brady, the school nurse, will be present to confer with each parent and to begin the school health record. At this time an explanation will be given as to the requirements of the State of Michigan relating to the health records of each child. A date will be given in August when parents can bring this information back to the school to qualify their child's entrance into Kindergarten.

Vision and hearing screening will also be done on Thursday.

The Charlevoix Board of Education recommends that children entering Kindergarten be five years of age by Sept. 1.

There will be school on Thursday for the present Kindergarten children.

April 15-21 - private property week

Mayor Sam Supernaw has proclaimed April 15-21 as Private Property Week in Charlevoix and has urged citizens to join with the more than 700,000 realtors and realtor-associates nation-wide in marking the observance.

During this annual event, which carries the theme, "This Land is Your Land", the 200 members of the Andrim-Charlevoix Board of Realtors calls attention to our inalienable right to own real property.

But in his proclamation, Supernaw warned that "we sometimes take the land for granted. But the bounties of the land, while they offer what seems to be limitless enjoyment for every member of the family, must not be taken for granted.

"We must learn to preserve the land; we must learn to nurture it, protect it, develop it, watch it grow," said Supernaw. "For without a planned effort at preservation of the land, we may see in this country a deterioration of the land and a deterioration of citizens' rights to own the land," added Supernaw.

Supernaw called the right each of us has to own real property, "a right secured by our colonial forefathers and passed down to us as a heritage of freedom...a heritage that has helped to make this country great."

In asking the citizens of Charlevoix to observe Private Property Week, Supernaw labeled the occasion "a week dedicated to reaffirming our right to own real property, to call attention to our duty to preserve the land, and to celebrate our inalienable right to enjoy that land."

Real Estate Is A People Business And Ski & Shore Wants You To Know Its People

This week Ski & Shore would like you to meet Joe Morris

"I have been involved in the business world for thirty years." Joe Morris and his wife, the former Keith Freyhof, are originally from Cincinnati but met in Charlevoix over thirty years ago and for the last five years have been year round residents.

Since moving to Charlevoix, Morris has become an active participant in the city's civic and governmental affairs. He is a former Councilman, a regular member of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, President of Charlevoix House and a member of the Lion's Club.

Morris is a graduate of the University of Cincinnati, where he concentrated his studies in Economics and Engineering. After spending five years in the Army, he was discharged as a Captain, returned to Ohio and served as assistant to the president of an International Paper Industry. He has been a Distribution Consultant and owned a truck and trailer building company for eleven years.

"The people contact and the various phases of real estate that the Ski & Shore office of Charlevoix offers appeal to me." Morris believes it is a realtor's obligation to keep his finger on the pulse of the community, thus enabling him to offer the most profitable real estate guidance to his customers.

The Stolt family of Hayes Township and the Regier family of Charlevoix, made it a clean sweep Saturday night when modeling awards were handed out at Charlevoix County's annual 4-H Achievement Day program at the new Boyne City Elementary School. Also, winning $15 trip awards Sue Stolt, Allison Clock, Lisa Fox, Julie Fall, Lisa Stanek, Traci Fenwick, Tari Howard and Vicki Falting also won a trip award. The awards may be used either for Camp Dequeoc or on Exploration Days. Jennifer Clock is shown modeling here.

Davis introduces bill for meat inspection

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- Michigan's meat quality standards will remain among the highest in the nation, according to Northern Michigan Congressman Bob Davis.

Davis has just introduced a bill in the U.S. House of Representatives which would give a $2.8 million supplemental appropriation to the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) meat inspection program. The supplemental would provide $220,000 to Michigan's program – the amount needed to maintain the current inspection program.

"If this federal supplemental bill is not passed, there is a good chance that the money will be provided by the state legislature," Davis said. "Either way, I am confident that Michigan will be able to maintain its high standards."

Meat inspection programs operate on a cost-sharing basis between the individual states and the USDA. The Meat Inspection Act states that the federal government may provide up to 50 percent of the cost of the state programs. If the state program is ended, federal inspectors would completely take over.

Michigan law prohibits the use of soybean products or internal organs – such as kidneys, liver, spleens, glands, intestines and tongues – in the manufacture of hot dogs, sausage, bologna and lunchmeats.

Swimming

It's natural instinct to swim before you're two

Suellen Smith believes the earlier a child learns to swim, the better.

"It's a natural instinct to swim before you're two-years-old," she says.

So this winter Suellen, a native of Grand Rapids, decided to do something about it. In conjunction with The Lodge, Suellen offered swimming lessons for area youngsters.

"I think it's the first time this sort of thing has been done here," she said.

By word of mouth, six babies - ranging in age from five to nine months - were recruited. The class met twice a week between Feb. 28 and April 2. Classes were conducted at the pool at The Lodge and each class lasted 30 minutes.

More than anything else, the babies learned to respect and enjoy the water, but not fear it. Often times a baby would spend the class time with a parent in the water. The parent would support the child and let it float while the child's arms and legs would paddle. Eventually, the parent or Suellen would dunk the child - simulating a dive - and then bring the child back to the surface after a few seconds.

"It didn't take them long to learn to shut their mouths underwater," Suellen said.

She added that class was not only a learning experience for the baby, but a social experience, too. Not only did the class allow for the babies to intermingle, but it also was a special time for the parents since they worked directly with their own child.

Although the class is over, Suellen does plan to offer lessons each Thursday afternoon from 1-2 p.m. at The Lodge. The lessons are $3 each. The lessons will conclude May 17. Hopefully, she adds, a second class will start up in October.

Other Knights and members of the Charlevoix Wrestling Club assisted in other capacities.

This event closed out the regular wrestling season at the Charlevoix Schools.

Coach Norm Probert expressed his appreciation to all those who assisted, especially the Charlevoix Council K. of C. for sponsoring the event. He also singled out Ken Wojan for the use of his truck; Pat and Mike Carland, Nancy Plummer of Traverse City, Phyllis Hilton and Terry Hodge for working the head table.

The Knights of Columbus cooked breakfast for all the wrestlers.

Tennis team starts season Thursday

The Charlevoix Rayder tennis team will open its 15-game court season Thursday when the team travels to Grayling for the season opener Coach Chuck Wright has announced.

On the following Tuesday, the Rayders will play at East Jordan and on Thursday will host Boyne City in their first Michigan-Huron Shores game.

In announcing the opening of the court season, Wright said he felt good about the forthcoming season. The team which boast some veterans and several regulars from last season plus several who have had some experience though they were not starters looks good. "The team has a lot of work to do. With the weather they haven't been able to get on the courts. However, I'm confident they will come along alright" Wright added.

Among lettermen who are returning are Mark Lignell, Dave Morgridge, Geoff Nelson, Ed Engstrom, and Jeff Cockfield, all seniors, John Grooter, a junior, and Denny Morgridge, a sophomore.

Others are Lynn DeMoor, a senior and team member last season, Jim Fowler, Scott Dunkleberg, Bob Hanger and Tim Hoffman, the latter who played as freshmen, seniors: Richard Hodgson, a junior; Rick Rajewski, a newcomer to the school, Kris Lignell and Patrice Staley, all sophomores and Jeff Morgridge, Lisa Staley and Lisa Hoffman, freshmen.

The team finished the season with a 9-5 record in 1978; won the Class C Regional title and finished ninth in the state Wright said.

Several area high school coaches attended Charlevoix's Sports Medicine Seminar Saturday. Speakers included: Reed Freidinger, M.D. -- Internal Medicine at Charlevoix Area Hospital; Matthew Houghton, D.C. -- General Practice at Traverse City Osteopathic Hospital; Loyal Jodar, M.D. -- Orthopedic Surgeon at Little Traverse Hospital; Ken Kopke, trainer at Central Michigan University; Richard Mansfield, D.D. (left) -- General Practice at Charlevoix Area Hospital; and Donald Trimper, D.D. -- Emergency Medicine at Riverside Osteopathic Hospital in Trenton. Discussion centered on athletic injuries and how they can be detected and treated.

Little League Auxiliary meets tonight

An important meeting of the Little League Auxiliary has been called for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the community room of the First State Bank by the president, Mrs. Condit Drury.

Mothers of all Little League and Senior League players are members of the Auxiliary.

Mrs. Drury has asked that all members attend so activities for the 1979 summer season can be planned. In asking for a good turnout, Mrs. Drury said "Little League functions on funds raised by the Auxiliary. To insure the continued success of the program the support of the parents is not only needed, it is required. That is why it is so important that mothers of all players in both the Little League and Senior League as well as parents of prospective members attend this meeting."

Among the first events to be planned for the 1979 season is a casserole luncheon at the American Legion Post Home on May 3.

Rec facility in Charlevoix?

A public meeting to discuss the need and feasibility of a community recreational facility will be held at the Charlevoix School of Gymnastics, 203 E. Upright Ave., at 8 p.m., April 24.

Spearheading the movement is the Gym Bag Association, a nonprofit group of the School of Gymnastics which is headed by Jim Mitchell.

"I have discussed the need for such a facility and many agree that there is a place in the community for a building that would house many of the needs" Mitchell said. He went on to list such things as tennis and racquet ball courts, sauna baths, an area where gymnastics could be taught as well as dancing, a senior citizen meeting place and, a pro shop supplying athletic needs. "It could include any of a number of recreational facilities and not be limited those mentioned" Mitchell added.

He said a number of professional people have volunteered to serve as resource persons at the public meeting to which the public in invited.

Wind surfing gaining popularity, sport introduced in Charlevoix

It's fast, wet, and wild.

That's the description that best suits the new sport of wind surfing which in recent months has become the fastest growing water sport in the world.

Speed and performance seem to be the key reasons for the growth. Wind surfing boats claim speeds up to 20 mph, making them the fastest mano-hull sailing craft. The sensation of speed, however, is even greater. As one enthusiast put it, "When you're going 20 mph and hanging out over the water, it seems like 50 mph.

Another reason for its growing popularity is that the sport fits today's "natural lifestyle." It's a pure form of sailing that allows the rider to get in touch with the elements around him.

The complete rig consists of a 12 foot fiberglass surf board, a sail, mast and boom. The sail is connected with a flexible mast bottom that allows the mast to fall freely while the board remains stable in the water. Control and direction are accomplished by the rider standing on the board and moving the sail forward or back. At the same time he shifts his body weight as a counterbalance against the wind filled sail. As a result, the rider develops a unique relationship with the wind and the water. You can feel the wind on your back before it fills the sail. Then you pick up speed, as though you're riding on the wind.

The combination of the speed, closeness to the elements, and exercise that the sport offers makes it the perfect new activity for any performance sports enthusiast. Although a beginner can learn the basics in one day, it takes more than a casual interest to become expert. Veteran board sailors are continually seeking and finding new ways to enjoy their boards. Hawaiian board sailors are combining the surf with on-shore winds in a non-stop flight to shore. Some enthusiasts find racing the greatest challenge. The most agile get involved in hot dogging, which includes tricks like rail riding on the edge of the board and body and head dips where the rider bends back dipping his head in the water and regains the normal standing position without wiping out. For most, however, it represents an economical and convenient way to get outdoors and challenge their skills with good friends.

The sport is being introduced locally by Silent Sports North who offer a complete line of Sailrider boards and accessories. Silent Sport is offering free wind surfing instruction manuals.

Clearly wind surfing isn't for everyone. But for those who thrill to skiing down a fresh powdered slope, jumping the wake behind a high powered speed boat on water skis or going aloft in a hang glider, wind surfing is a new and unique challenge.

Two wind surfers brave the elements Thursday afternoon on Round Lake.

Jack Crinnion inspects Darrin VanLoo's rustproofing work.

Tuff-Kote rustproofing opens shop in Charlevoix

A Tuff-Kote automotive rustproofing franchise has opened in Charlevoix. Located at 1209 Bridge Street, Tuff-Kote opened its doors here about two weeks ago.

The franchise for Charlevoix and Emmet counties was acquired by three people, including Jack Crinnion, former employee at Birchwood Farms.

Crinnion explained that Tuff-Kote uses a six-step process in rustproofing vehicles:

1)Several holes are drilled in the vehicle to allow access to the closed, boxed-in sections.

2)High-pressure spray tools are used to insure complete coverage with Tuff-Kote's chemical sealants.

3)Various rotatable spray tools and nozzles are used to reach different interior surfaces.

4)All hidden areas are probed and spray-coated with Tuff-Kote Dinol penetrant and sealant.

5)Special attention is paid to those areas where moisture and corrosives tend to collect.

6)All holes are closed with plugs and the excessive sealant is wiped clean.

The penetrant, Crinnion says, is used to stop existing rust while the sealant is applied to keep new rust from starting.

"That's our big advantage," Crinnion says. "We're the only rustproofer that rustproofs a car twice."

The penetrant works in two ways, according to Crinnion.

First, it gets deep inside the car's body to all places where moisture has seeped to cause rust. And second, it cuts through that rust, displaces the moisture, and then chemically bonds itself to the metal neautralizing existing rust.

By using a penetrant, Tuff-Kote is able "to do something about the existing rust" whereas "other rustproofers usually just cover it up."

The heavy, abrasion-resistant, aluminized sealant then is applied to prevent new rust from starting.

And it's all guaranteed, Crinnion says.

"Tuff-Kote stands behind its product. It's to our financial interest that we do the job right."

Good Friday service at United Methodist Church

The annual Union Good Friday Service sponsored by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association will be held at the United Methodist Church beginning at 12:30 p.m. and continuing until 2:30 p.m.

Theme of the solemn service will be "The Last Seven Words" with meditations on the words spoken by the Saviour from the cross on Calvary.

The Rev. Walter Hastings of the Community Church of God will give the call to Worship, the Rev. Austin Regler, pastor of the host church, the invocation and the Rev. Harold Kruse of the Ironton Congregational Church, the benediction.

Others participating in the service will be the Reverends Daniel Abner of the First Baptist Church, Roger Ames of Christ Episcopal Church, Raymond Giffin of the First Congregational Church, Larry Grooters of the Community Reformed Church, Earnest Knight of the Church of the Nazarene, Harold Kruse of Ironton Congregational Church, James Plackner of Bethany Lutheran Church and, Fred Spring of the Assembly of God.

Special music for the service will be by Kris Fiedler who will play a trumpet solo; Mary Horton, a flute solo; vocal solos by Mrs. Jeanette Miller, accompanied by Nancy Abner; Vincent Chew; Mrs. Frances Tollas and; Candy Booth; a duet by Mrs. Sally Nelson and Geoffrey Nelson and a quartet selection by James Hayden, Gene Dziedzic, Phyllis Pidek and Mary Ann GCudd accompanied by Mrs. Jeanne Brewster.

Steven Stargardt will be the song leader; Mrs. Jeanne Jensen, the organist and Mrs. Glenna Willis, the pianist. Sinus Baker will be the lead usher.

The offering will be used for the work of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.

If you come in after the service has started, the usher will seat you during the singing of a hymn. If you wish to leave before the end of the service at 2:30 p.m., you are asked to leave during the singing of a hymn.

First Congregational announce Easter services

The First Congregational Church of Charlevoix will observe Maundy Thursday with a service of Communion and Tenebrae, beginning at 8 p.m.

The service is an adaptation of an early 4th century "office" of the church. There will also be a tableau of the Last Supper, with members of the church taking the parts of Jesus and His disciples as pictured by Leonardo daVinci in his famous painting.

On Easter Sunday, there will be two services, an informal workship in Fellowship Hall at 7:30 a.m. followed by breakfast, and the traditional Easter worship in the sanctuary at 11 a.m.

The cost of the breakfast will be shared by those attending and reservations must be in by Friday afternoon. The public is invited to the 11 a.m. service. Since there will be no Sunday School, families are urged to attend church together.

Ski accidents decrease

Northern Michigan Hospitals' Emergency Room reported decreases in two out of three types of winter recreation accidents during the winter of 1978-79. Both downhill and cross-country skiing accidents decreased while snowmobile accidents took a jump.

Downhill skiing accidents totaled 518 and represented a 10.4 percent drop from the 1977-78 winter's total of 578. This decrease maintained a trend that has seen reported downhill skiing accidents shrink by well over a third since the peak winter of 1971-72 when 816 patients entered the emergency room of Little Traverse Hospital alone. (Lockwood-MacDonald statistics for that year were unavailable).

Cross-country skiing accidents decreased by 23 percent, dropping from 18 such accidents to 14.

Reasons for the decrease in both categories given by the Emergency Room staff included safer equipment (especially bindings) and better snow conditions for the season as a whole.

The largest single kind of injury remained fractures for these two categories, with approximately 30 percent of all skiing accidents involving some kind of broken bone.

Snowmobile accidents, on the other hand, increased by 28.3 percent during the past winter. What didn't change was the severity. Snowmobilers continued to suffer more severe injuries including more internal injuries and open fractures.

Emergency Room staffers cited the unsafe practices of night riding and people traveling at high rates of speed over unfamiliar terrain as two of the major causes of snowmobile accidents.

For skiers, the staff recommended a thorough knowledge of the skiing area and proper adjustment of bindings before hitting the slopes. The staff also commended area ski patrolers for their first aid work and the comforting of accident victims throughout the season.

Will city and township consolidate? Stay tuned

You've probably heard the question a number of times before: When will the City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township merge?

For years, it has been nothing more than talk. But now something is being done.

Petitions have been circulated in the city and the township that ask the State Boundary Commission to consider a consolidation of the two governmental units.

The petition drive has the support of the Charlevoix City Council.

"This is the first of four steps in a consolidation procedure," Mayor Sam Supernaw said. "We simply want to find out if the State Boundary Commission would approve of a consolidation."

If the commission approved, then the second step could be carried out. The second step is for the township and or city to petition to put the issue of consolidation to a vote of the people. If the township or the city votes against consolidation, then the consolidation effort is defeated.

The third step, if it would get this far, would be for the township and city to elect a charter commission for the purpose of drawing up a charter to govern both bodies.

The fourth step requires that both the township and city approve the charter by a vote.

"All of this could take three to four years," Supernaw said. "But first we have to find out what kind of response we'll get from the State Boundary Commission."

The mayor added that Oscar Stroud, the township supervisor, "favors" the petition drive to bring the issue before the commission. However, he added, Stroud has been "non-committal" when asked if he favors or opposes consolidation.

According to city officials, about 200 signatures are needed on the petitions in order for the commission to consider the request (five percent of the population). A map defining the area proposed for consolidation is attached to the petitions.

Why a consolidation? Officials say a consolidation will:

1) Provide a system of government for orderly growth and development in the consolidated areas.

2) Provide for better and expanded municipal and community services at a lower cost.

3) Accomodate Charlevoix Township's immediate need for sewers and electrical services.

4) Broaden the tax base of the consolidated areas.

5) Accomodate future population growth in the consolidated areas.

Supernaw said the petiton drive will be reviewed in early May to "see how we're doing."

Gibbons improving

Officials at St. Joseph's Hospital in Ann Arbor say that Charlevoix Attorney Mike Gibbons is "OK" and is expected to be back on his feet today after undergoing open heart surgery.

A hospital spokesman said Gibbons "vital signs are stable."

Gibbons underwent a coronary bypass operation Wednesday.

Council approves electric rates, five percent penalty if paid late

The Charlevoix City Council Monday night approved new electrical rates.

Rates for residents and cummercial/industrial customers inside the city will be four cents per kilowatt. There will be a minimum monthly charge of $2 to the residents and $4 to the commercial/industrial customers.

Outside the city, it will cost residents and commercial/industrial customers five and a half cents per kilowatt. There will be a minimum monthly charge of $2.75 to the residents and $5.50 to the commercial/industrial customers.

In addition, the fuel cost adjustment charge will passed on to the customers (last month it would have figured out to one-tenth of a cent.)

Interim City Manager Jim Brinker said the new rates should "help balance" the city's electrical fund, which has been operating in the red. The biggest change is the increase to electric users outside the city. Previously, users outside the city paid four cents per kilowatt.

In adopting the new electric rates, council agreed that if the bills are not paid within a 15 day period, there will be an additional charge of five percent.

Council also agreed that non-metered security lights inside the city will cost users $3.75 per month for 175 watt and $8 per month for 400 watt. Outside the city, users will pay $4.75 per month for 175 watt and $10.85 per month for 400 watt.

In addition, it will cost users $8.50 every time a city worker has to make a trip to service the security bghts. Previously, this was done at no cost to the customer.

Besides electrical rates, council also increased the tap-in fee for sewers.

The tap-in fee for residential and multiple units will now be $300 per unit for the first two units and $200 for each additional tap-in.

The billing procedure was also changed. City residents will be divided with half paying water, sewage and electric bills the first of each month and the other half paying during the middle of each month.

Brinker said this would even the work load in the billing department.

In other action, Council:

+Approved a request from the Charlevoix Public Schools to spread the school taxes with the city taxes.

+Approved an electrical extension to Brumm's Studio.

+Adopted a resolution thanking Annabelle Cunningham for her 19 years of service to the city.

+Agreed tu purchase two new police cars from Fochtman Motor.

+Denied a request from the Charlevoix Public Schools for a lot split and a variance for property on May Street.

+Delayed a variance request from Captains Watch, which is seeking to cover 12 parking spaces. The parking spaces are 25 feet from the sideyards and the city ordinance stipulates that a covered building be 40 feet from the sideyards.

+Signed a Grant-In agreement with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources for 50-50 grant for a harbor improvement study. The grant is expected to be for $5,500. The city would also chip in $5,500.

+Discussed extending the sewer along U.S.-31 into Charlevoix Township. Township offieials have said they would pay for the installation of the sewer (two-thirds of it is in the city) and then turn it over to the city for operation and maintenance. Council is concerned, however, about "uncontrolled" growth along the highway and asked to see a copy of the township zoning ordinance to find out what is permissible under present zoning on the undeveloped parcels.

+Heard from Al Hodge, of Daverman and Associates, Inc., on a study of the city's future power needs. Council is considering buying into a nuclear plant, a coal-fired plant or both. Hodge had no recommendation for council, but said the study should be completed in about two weeks.

+Adopted the city code.

+Agreed to a 60 day extension of a rezoning for property on May Street. Council approved of the rezoning from R-1 (single family) to R-4 (multiple) in September. However, the developers, the Economic Development Group, failed to start construction on a proposed apartment complex within six months so the zoning reverted back to R-1. Council stipulated that construction must start within 60 days. Developers hope to start the 54 unit complex next month. Council did agree to rezone another part of the property that was zoned commercial (behind the Holiday Gas Station) to multiple family.

School board seeks six mill renewal

The Charlevoix Board of Education, at its regular meeting Monday night, voted to ask for the renewal of a 6.0 mill tax levy for one year in the June 11 school election.

A 6.0 mill tax level to underwrite operational costs expires this year. Voters in the school district will be asked to renew the 6.0 mills when they go to the polls June 11. In discussing the urgency of the need, Vincent Olach, business manager, said that if the millage went down in the election it would mean the loss of $600,000 to the 1979-80 budget.

The $700,000 bond issue to support an addition to the present high school was discussed. The amount was that recommended by a special Task Force. The question then arose: Suppose the bond issue is approved and bids for the proposed addition came in at less than $700,000. What would the board do with the "extra money" should this come to pass, the board adopted a resolution starting that should this happen, should the bond issue pass and should bids come in at less than the stipulated amount, the board would levy only that millage that would raise the amount of the bid. This, they felt, would take care of the possibility of any "extra money".

The bid for $277.77 submitted by the First Baptist Church of Boyne City for a 1968 Ford bus was accepted by the board. It was explained that the bus had more than 100,000 miles on it and while the motor was fairly good rear brake drum was in serious need of extensive repair. It had been held as a stand-by bus for two years after it could no longer be used on a regular route.

The resignation of Mrs. Marian Kohn was accepted with regret. Mrs. Kohn has taught English in the school system since 1955 and will conclude her service when she retires in June.

Vane H. Smith, high school principal, relayed the North Central Association report he had received recently, stating that the high school had been warned regarding the high school library. This is not the school's first warning for this infraction. Smith explained that the library, by North Central standards, should seat eight percent of its enrollment. The local school library presently seats 40 as opposed to the necessary 52. The second offense was inadequate school facilities which relates to the use of a portable classroom and the lack of adequate laboratory facilities. In making the report, Smith said that the school stands to lose its North Centeral rating if these things are not corrected.

The re-instatement of the National Honor Society in the High School was discussed. Supt. Gordon W. VanWieren made the recommendation that the program be re-instated. It has been eliminated about 1968 during a time when millage was badly needed and the National Honor Society was disbanded to save money. The cost includes national dues and the cost of an adult advisor.

The problem regarding the library in the K-5 building was also discussed. The board was advised that Mrs. Marie Webb had resigned in March and that about the same time the library aide had quit. Mrs. Betty Potter, a faculty member and certified bbrarion, was asked to supervise the project with the aid of parent volunteers and one CETA employee working four hous daily. Ralph Raymer, K-5 principal, said the program was working well to no additional cost of the school.

Gymnastics booming

The gymnastic movement has reached Charlevoix.

And in case you're unaware, more than 125 residents of the area are involved.

That's how many are presently enrolled in classes at the Charlevoix School of Gymnastics.

Once a sport that was seldom talked about, gymnastics has gradually taken hold of the American public. Why the sudden interest? Jim Mitchell, founder of the Charlevoix School of Gymnastics, explains it this way:

"The popularity seems to be a product of the space age. We now do less work and have less physical exercise and more free time. Gymnastic skills are the most graceful of all and can be applied to other sports. They help with posture, body awareness, and mind and body control."

Because of the increasing popularity of the sport, and other sports like racquetball and tennis, Mitchell and several other members of the community have formed a Board of Directors that is presently studying the feasibility of a recreational facility in Charlevoix.

A meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, April 24, at 8 p.m. at 203-E. Upright Ave. to further discuss the possibility of a community recreational facilty. The pubbe is invited.

For more gymnastic photos see page 8.

Eight judges reviewed 177 entries Saturday morning before determining the winners that afternoon. The contest was divided into three age groups.

Justin Drenth, 4, of Ellsworth, was the winner in the 2-4 age bracket. For his efforts, Justin received an Easter basket with candy, a coloring book and a stuffed animal. Angela Abranczyk, 4, of Kalkaska, was second. Richard Hartwell, 3, of Petoskey, received honorable mention.

Jennifer Frabis, 7, of Charlevoix, finished first in the 5-7 age group. Her prize was an Easter basket with candy and a Texas Instrument Little Professor. Shelley Moore, 7, of Boyne City was the runnerup. Jennifer Sumner, 6, of Charlevoix, received honorable mention.

A.J. Wiitthoft, 12, of Charlevoix, was No.1 in the 8-12 age group. A.J. received an Easter basket with candy and a Kodak camera. Dawn Gennett, 12, of Charlevoix, was second. Kristen Zaika, 11, of Petoskey, received honorable mention.

All second place finishers were awarded toys.

According to Dan Miller, of Ben Franklin, judging was difficult. Miller said the races were "very close." Because there were several entries of high quality, Miller added, it was decided that an honorable mention category be established.

Merchants in the shopping center sponsoring the contest were: Glens Market, Crown Drug, Puff's Appliance, Barb's Hallmark, Captains Kids, Weatherford-Walker, Ben Franklin and the Poly Clean Laundry.

Charlevoix Yesterday

Today, it's Williams Dockside Pharmacy, but when this picture was taken, the drug store was known as the home of "The Jeff", an ice-cream delight that was concocted at this soda fountain. Edith Balch, who is employed by Williams, thinks the picture dates back to the 1920's.

The purchase price of a home can sometimes be met by paying cash even in this era of inflated prices. However, it is generally not the wisest course of action. It is still necessary to consider occupancy costs in relation to income. Usually, the higher the price of the house, the higher will be the taxes, insurance, repairs, and operating expenses. This may become particularly significant to an older family that may now have the resources to pay cash but faces a tight income situation in the not too distant future because of retirement with fewer family members making contributions.

CHIP works with jail inmates, try to stop revolving door syndrome

Prisoners in Charlevoix County Jail who have been sentenced for terms of 90 days to a year may participate in a group counseling session under the direction of Charlevoix's CHIP Counseling Center Therapist Terry Smith.

CHIP Center has volunteered counselor Smith's time for this rehabilitation program.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater explained that he asked CHIP Center to conduct these sessions because "As Sheriff I feel I have an obligation to attempt to rehabilitate people sentenced to the county jail.

"We want to try to eliminate the revolving door pattern, where we see the same people returning soon after they have been released," Lasater continued.

"We want to eliminate it because it is destroying their lives and it is very expensive to the citizens."

Sheriff Lasater explained that he went to CHIP Counseling Center for assistance because people, convicted of larceny related crimes, are now being sentenced to serve up to a year in county jail, instead of Jackson State Prison. Many of these individuals have emotional problems, he said.

Smith, commenting on Jackson, said, "It is common understanding that if you take a 19 year old and send him to Jackson there is a great likelihood that all the stories you have ever heard about state prisons are true, only doubled.

"He will come back a much more distant person. Prison is a debilitating experience," Smith continued.

Smith and Lasater both said they think an individual has a better chance of salvaging his life if he stays in the county jail.

Lasater emphasized he was not speaking of people convicted of assault or more serious type crimes, "who should, in my opinion, go to Jackson."

Smith added, no matter what rehabilitation programs exist, being locked up is the primary concern in the prisoners lives.

In his weekly sessions, Smith works with a group of six individuals.

"Self-image is their biggest common problem," he observed, stressing that the names of the participants, their individual problems and crimes are kept in strictest confidence. Smith cautioned that he could not discuss any specifics from this therapy sessions.

"These people see themselves as losers. They may be street smart, but they are in jail and this is evidence, to themselves, of their own failure," the counselor continued.

"Without a change in self-image they will be in Jackson," he said.

Smith said that the therapy sessions provide an opportunity, in privacy and confidence, to express hopes and fears and desires.

"This is an experiment in trust," Smith said.

The first agreement Smith and his clients reached was that they would talk openly about themselves, among themselves.

"We agreed to trust each other. We can sit and b.s. or we can tell facts," he said, straightforwardly.

The goal of the therapy is, according to Smith, for the "individuals to take responsibility for their own change, if there is to be any."

Talking about the experience of being jailed, Smith said, "you are never as alone as you are in jail."

He said a person's view of himself and society can become very distorted in jail. Smith said that in order to survive in a jail setting, prisoners often withdraw within themselves, within a protective shell.

"We want to find the inner person. We want to help people know that their inner person is worthwhile, that dignity works from inside out and that self-respect is attainable behaviorably," Smith observed.

The approach is rehabilitation through therapy, and the key, in CHIP's method, is that individuals take responsibility for themselves: that if they really believe they are worthwhile people they will take responsibility for their own behavior.

Putting it in street language, Smith said, "If you don't want to get burned you'll have to clean up your act."

And as a therapist he concluded, "Therapy works on the issue of how you put it together so it is sensible.

Sheriff Lasater explained that this rehabilitation program, as with others conducted at the Charlevoix County Jail, is run by volunteers, with no cost to the taxpayer.

The CHIP therapy sessions are a pilot program which will continue for six weeks.

Crowd ordinance strengthened, concert license to cost $500

Marion Township is largely an agricultural community, but events of the last two years have made it necessary for the township to amend and strengthen its "Outdoor Gathering Ordinance".

According to Marion Township Supervisor Robert Potter, the need for the amendments was brought about by problems of traffic, noise, litter, and conduct of the crowds of people attending rock concerts at Castle Farms.

The preamble to the ordinance is even more specific: "The Board of Marion Township finds and declares that the interests of public health, safety and welfare of the citizens of Marion Township require the regulation, licensing, and control of assemblages of large numbers of people in excess of those normally drawing upon the health, sanitation, fire, police, transportation, utility and other public services regularly provided in this township."

The ordinance states that application for a license to conduct an outdoor assembly "shall be accompanied by a nonrefundable fee, which shall be set by the Marion Township Board annually." Potter says this fee has been set at $500 a concert as compared with $50 previously charged for a seasonal license.

"This increase reflects costs to the township brought about by these gatherings," Potter explained. He is responsible for carrying out provisions of the ordinance.

An "outdoor assembly" as defined in the ordinance refers to "any event attended by more than 500 attendants, all or any part of which includes a theatrical exhibition, public show, display, entertainment, amusement or other exhibition, including but not limited to music festivals, rock festivals, peace festivals, or similar gatherings," with exceptions made for events sponsored by governmental units on publicly owned land; events sponsored by tax exempt entities, and events held entirely within the confines of a permanently enclosed structure.

The ordinance sets forth in detail how to apply for a license and what information must accompany the application, including plans to provide for police and fire protection, food and water supply facilities, health and sanitation facilities, medical facilities and services, vehicle access and parking facilities, camping and trailer facilities, illumination facilities, communication facilities, noise control and abatement, facilities for clean up and waste disposal, and insurance and bonding arrangements.

Potter explained that one important amendment to the ordinance has to do with access and traffic control so traffic lanes will be kept open for use by ambulances, fire equipment, helicopters, and other emergency vehicles.

He further noted that although the sheriff is not required by law to enforce the ordinance, he has accepted that responsibility in areas referring to his duties. The same is true of the District Health Department in such areas as water facilities, restroom facilities, and waste disposal.

The ordinance is based on a model ordinance prepared by the Michigan Township Association with assistance from the Governor's office.

Bonnie Whalen, Wardrobe Coordinator, adjusts the costumes as members of The Michigan Opera Theater rehearse Verdi's "La Traviata" which will be presented for northern Michigan audiences Thursday and Saturday evenings, April 19 and 21 at 8 p.m. on the Petoskey High School stage. The opera will be sung in English. Through poignant music and elaborate costumes and sets it tells the love story of a Paris courtesan. Tickets will be $10 for patrons (which includes an afterglow with the cast on Saturday evening following the performance), $5 for adults, and $2 for students. Tickets can be purchased in advance at the Apple Tree or Reis Gallery in Charlevoix, The Chamber of Commerce in Petoskey, Shafer's Books in Boyne City, Hite Drugs in East Jordan, or at the door.

Dr. Jerrian VanDellen was honored Thursday afternoon by friends after retiring as medical director at the Grandvue Medical Care Facility. VanDellen had been the director at the facility for nearly 30 years. While serving patients at Grandvue, VanDellen also had a private practice in East Jordan, which he operated until five years ago. Auxiliary members presented VanDellen with a cake which had a horse and buggy design on it, reminiscent of a sign that once hung outside his office.

Punch card voting rejected

Punch card voting will not come to Charlevoix County in the immediate future.

The proposal for purchase of equipment to initiate the system was not accepted by several townships in the county, or by the cities of Charlevoix and Boyne City.

This information was relayed to the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners last week by its Ways & Means Committee which had prepared the proposal.

The proposal was based on total equipment cost of $49,937, with the county assuming $7,114 of the cost and the remainder being borne by the various units of government based on number of registered voters.

Each township and city would have been assessed $1.29 for each registered voter plus the cost of the required number of voting booths, vote carrying cases, and demonstration units.

Those turning down the proposal indicated that they thought the county should bear a larger portion of the cost, probably the total cost of the central computer.

Under the proposal, the City of Charlevoix share of the system would have been $8,325, an amount which the Council felt was prohibitive.

After refusal of the original proposition was determined by the county board of commissioners, Keith Annear, a member of the Ways & Means Committee, presented his own alternative proposition which called for the county to assume $21,639 of the cost of equipment, including that of the central computer.

The discussion that followed indicated there was no ready source of money in the county budget from which to pay this amount. As a result, the whole question of securing punch card voting equipment was tabled for the time-being.

If and when the subject is brought up again, the equipment will cost more money. The quoted price of $49,937 was firm only until April 10, after which there was an increase of approximately $4,000.

Second wind storm strikes

Officially, the winds that swept through town late Wednesday night and early Thursday morning were not nearly as strong as the winds of the week before.

Two weeks ago the winds reached a peak of 82 miles per hour. Last week the winds were clocked at 53 miles per hour. Both caused destruction.

Last week's wind storm brought down the traffic light at the corner of Bridge and Clinton streets (above); toppled several trees including one behind the Michigan Bell Telephone Company building which in turn took down a power line; knocked out windows at WVOY, the Charlevoix County State Bank, Parsel's Garage and Alice Jane Dows; and levelled barns owned by Robert Currey (below) and John Elzinga.

Most residents had power throughout the wind storm - a far cry from the storm a week before when some 15,000 Consumers Power customers in Northern Michigan lost power. Consumers Power crews worked "round the clock for 3½ days" trying to restore power after that storm.

The 82 mile per hour winds left some aghast.

"In my 14 years at Top O' Michigan, I have experienced many bad storms, but I've never seen one where winds were so intense over the entire system, and causing as many scattered individual outages as this one," said Roger Westenbroek, general manager at the electric company.

Over 16,000 Top O' Michigan customers were without power.

One term for Jimmy?

It appears more likely with every passing day that my old hero Jimmy Carter will be a one-term president. Sometimes I wonder if the nation can survive another 20 months under Carter without going belly-up.

And I keep asking myself two questions:

–Where did Carter go wrong? and:

–Should we Jimmy (pardon the expression) with the Constitution so that we're not buying a pig in a poke every time we go to the polls to elect a president?

–Not many of us really knew Jimmy Carter when we elected him President in November of 1976. But after the villainy of Richard Nixon and the heavy plodding of Gerald Ford, the cocky little born-again Christian from Georgia looked pretty good.

Furthermore, I liked what Carter had to say about the staggering costs of government bureaucracy and how he was going to pare Uncle Sam down to size once he got in the White House.

Come to think of it, that's the last time the subject came up. There certainly hasn't been any evidence of government economizing since Carter took over, aside from the threatened closing of a few military bases which are no longer strategically important – and probably never were.

There should be some way a president could be made accountable for his campaign promises.

I am convinced that burgeoning government employment and its terrible drain of tax dollars into non-productive chanaels will be the downfall of the American republic. It simply poses too much of a burden for the working men and women of the country.

Two years ago Carter said he agreed with me and I voted for him. Now that he is among the recipients of tax dollars, however, Carter apparently has decided to let the issue die a natural death.

It is too bad you can't sue presidents for breaking their campaign promises.

Of course, inflation will hurt Carter more than anything else at the next election – providing he makes it past the Democratic convention. And the worst part of inflation is that Carter and Carter alone has it in his power to stop the steady erosion of the dollar.

The American people are literally yearning for the president to talk to them like a Dutch uncle about the economic maelstrom they have created. They would accept virtually any program he would care to impose – including energy rationing and wage and price controls – if it would mean the value of their bank accounts and paychecks would stabilize.

So what does Carter do? He gives us vague, voluntary guidelines that are an open invitation to defiance.

The best recent example is the Teamsters contract, which the union itself acknowledges comes to something in excess of 30 percent over a period of three years. And goodness knows the nation's truck drivers need that much if they are going to keep up with current levels of inflation. But they would have settled for less if Carter had insisted upon it.

But instead of raising hob with the Teamsters and the trucking industry over their inflationary contract, we find the president and his aides claiming that – after several important fringe benefits are excluded – the contract carries a pricetag of only 22.5 percent, precisely what he has called for in his voluntary guidelines.

The door is now wide upen for a full round of the most inflationary labor contract settlements the nation has ever experienced, with the value of the dollar decreasing with every passing day.

When will it all end, you ask. Don't ask me. I only work here.

Volunteers are like yachts

Volunteers are like yachts.

No matter where they are, they arouse your curiosity. Who are they? Where do they come from? Why are they here?

They could stay moored where it's safe and still justify their being, but they choose to cut through the rough waters, ride out storms and take chances.

They have style. They're fiercely independent. If you have to ask how much they cost, you can't afford them.

Volunteers and yachts have a lot more in common these days. They're both a part of an aristocratic era that is disappearing from the American scene. They're both a luxury in a world that has become very practical.

Day by day, the number of volunteers decreases in this country as more and more of them equate their worth in terms of dollars and cents.

Three years ago I did a column on volunteers in an effort to point out that they don't contribute to our civilization. They ARE civilization – at least the only part worth talking about.

They are the human beings on the face of this earth who reflect this nation's compassion, unselfishness, caring, patience, need and just plain loving one another. Their very presence transcends politics, religion, ethnic background, marital status, sexism, even smokers vs. non-smokers.

Maybe, like the yacht, the volunteer was a luxury. And luxuries are too often taken for granted.

One has to wonder. Did we, as a nation, remember to say to the volunteers, "Thank you for our symphony hall. Thank you for the six dialysis machines. Thank you for sitting up with a 16-year-old who overdosed and begged to die. Thank you for the hot chocolate at the scout meeting. Thanks for reading to the blind. Thanks for using your station wagon to transport a group of strangers to a ballgame. Thanks for knocking on doors in the rain. Thanks for hugging the winners of the Special Olympics. Thanks for pushing the wheelchair into the sun. Thanks for being."

Did the media stand behind them when they needed a boost? Did the professionals make it a point to tell them they did a good job? Did the recipients of their time and talent ever express their gratitude?

It frightens me, somehow, to imagine what the world will be like without them.

Time to get the facts on the nuclear accident and blame the guilty

WASHINGTON — It is time to analyze what happened at the nuclear plant on Three Mile Island, question those responsible, and frame new rules to prevent such accidents in the future. The nation needs nuclear power, but wants more confidence in it. A thorough investigation is the best deterrent to that gathering claque of demagogues yelling hysterically on the nuclear issue.

Several elements in the Three Mile Island picture deserve intense scrutiny. The first has to do with bucks. Did Metropolitan Edison Co. rush the nuclear plant into operation in the last hours of 1978 to save $40 million in taxes and also to qualify for an increase in electricity rates?

If it did, certainly the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) was running alongside this sprint, and had not only the duty but ample opportunity to blow the whistle, if indeed it deserved blowing. The plant didn't have the best record in 1978. It was shut down 71 percent of the time, and experienced problems similar to those which led to the worst accident in the history of commercial nuclear operations.

Next is the matter of Metropolitan Edison closing three auxiliary cooling pumps for maintenance for two weeks or longer before the accident – a clear violation of NRC regulations. "There would have been an entirely different outcome if they had been operational, as they should have been," observed Harold R. Denton, NRC's director of nuclear reactor regulation.

Once the cooling pumps story is verified by testimony, hell should be raised and severe penalties administered. But what to do about the subsequent series of fouled operating procedures?

They are: failing to react correctly to a stuck relief valve, shutting off pumps driving the emergency cooling system, misreading gauges, pumping contaminated water into an auxiliary building not designed to hold it, thus spewing gases into the atmosphere.

So there's plenty to dig into, and we must hear the entire story from: Walter M. Creitz, president of Metropolitan Edison; G.P. Miller, superintendent of the Three Mile Island station; Dr. Joseph M. Hendrie, NRC's chairman; Harold R. Denton; and Boyce H. Grier, director of the King of Prussia NRC regional office which monitors the Three Mile Island facility.

Many others should also be summoned by the NRC for its investigation, scheduled to be conducted privately, but with its findings to be made public.

At least two senators are also probing the nuclear question: Sen. Gary Hart (D-Colo.), chairman of the subcommittee on nuclear regulation, is holding hearings, and Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) is taking elements of his subcommittee on health and scientific research to Utah to study effects of radiation caused by atomic testing by the military o generation ago.

No industry in the Republic deserves closer regulation than nuclear energy, and no industry should be called on for stricter accounting and penalties than nuclear.

The present civil law provides for fines of $5,000 on nuclear plants which violate NRC regulations, with no more than $25,000 in fines allowed in one month. The NRC asked Congress last month to legislate a $100,000 fine for each single-violation penalty, and to put no limit on the amount of fines levied in one month.

There is also a criminal penalty of $5,000 and/or two years in prison for any willful violation of an NRC order, but it is difficult to get a conviction on a criminal count.

President Carter has asked that NRC inspectors be permanently assigned to each nuclear plant – an expense he justifies even at a time when budget trimming is in order. Meat packing houses have federal inspectors on the premises, and one constant challenge is to keep the foremen from getting too cozy with the inspectors.

Anyway, despite all the howls on television and radio about Three Mile Island, rationality will have its day. There was no meltdown or explosion. No one was killed or injured in this accident. There was no radioactive cloud of dust over the area – as Jack Anderson reported.

The milk, water and food in the area do not contain dangerous levels of radiation as a consequence of the accident. The latest NRC reading is that people living in the area received an accumulation of 80 millirems of radiation from the accident, less than half of what they would get in a so-called normal year.

Before Jimmy Carter took his wife to the plant during the worst of it, NRC officials double-and triple-checked the radiation levels to make sure we wouldn't wind up with a President who glowed in the dark. He doesn't and won't. He was exposed to six-tenths of one millirem going in and 1.3 millirems per hour going out, so altogether he got about one millirem – an infinitesimal amount.

In his prepared message on energy, Carter was sensible enough to list "improved, safe, advanced nuclear technologies, including breeders," as one of "three major candidates for the production of electricity." He also urged that "the nation respond with care and reason to this accident, recognizing that 13 percent of our nation's electricity comes from nuclear power."

We are fortunate that the President is rational and not demagogic about nuclear power.

Dale Gonyea: It looks like he's made it

I Need Your Help, Barry Manilow
Music and Lyric: Dale Gonyea
©1979 Ray Stevens Music (BMI)

My account is overdrawn
My car slid down the hill
I'm giving up, I've got no more to give My beagle bit the vet
My daughter's on the pill
My ficus plant has lost its will to live

I owe Mastercharge my life
I have adolescent skin
The doctor says I can't use any salt
My waist is getting thick
My hair is getting thin
My house is on the San Andreas Fault.

I need your help, Barry Manilow
I'm miserable and don't know what to do
Sing me a song, sing it sad and low
No one helps me suffer quite like you.

My shrink is out-of-town,
My lovelife is a joke.
My ex-wife sold my diary to Rona
All the ashtrays overflow
And I don't even smoke.
My sinuses came back from Arizona.

(Spoken)
Hello, Mandy ... it's me.
I'm here at the Copa, you know ... the Copacabana?
Hey, I know I don't write the songs that make the whole world sing, but I do know one thing, Mandy ...
I can't smile without you.
Forget Lola!
Remember that weekend in New England?
I thought then that this could be the magic at last,
And here I am, tryin' to get the feelin' again.

I need your help, Barry Manilow,
I'm all alone and sitting on the shelf
Sing me a song, sing it sad and low,
I feel like feelin' sorry for myself.

I need your help, Barry Manilow
A thousand knots are tied inside my tummy
Sing me a song, sing it sad and low,
Never have I ever felt this crummy.

I need your help, Barry Manilow,
Your songs can really comfort the unlucky.
Sing me a song, sing it sad and low
I wish I didn't have to feel so yucky.

I wish I didn't have to feel so yucky.

Ah, yes. The lucky break. Recently, old friends and former Charlevoix residents, the Mike Ready's came up from Traverse for a visit.

"I don't mean to take a free ride on the laurels of family fame," Jan sprang to her own defense, "but have you heard my cousin Dale's song yet?"

I used to bore our friends with our own tapes, but Jan always assured me they were used to it. Dale's mother had been circulating his material for years just in case he ever made it. Tapes, I decided, were just a variation on the theme of home movies. There is a lot to be said about the endurance of the captive living room audience. There should be a day observed in honor of their support. Where would aspirants to stardom be without it? For Dale Gonyea there was a lucky break following upon years of practice, performing, hard work, and yes, tapes. Now his family and friends are glad they didn't fall asleep during this one. Dale Gonyea is making it, meaning recognition, and dollars on a song that started out as a joke.

Dale is a 29 year old native of Monroe, Michigan. Displaying a natural talent for the piano at an early age, his first actual performance was a recital at the age of six. From there, under the tuteledge of a nun from Dale's school he was schooled in classical concert piano. Later, Dale's talent was to take different directions in the areas of popular music and college musical productions at the University of Michigan where he continued his training which included more classical study, musical theory, wind and string instruments, voice, choir and five to six hours a day of practice. After college it was a summer spent touring Russia with the University Chamber Chorus and subsequently more touring as the lead singer of a lounge act, "Everybody's People," which did the USO circuit of overseas military bases. For the past six years, he has been enduring the ups and downs of Music City, trying to establish himself in and around L.A.

His act, after perusing a stack of newspaper reviews from L.A., San Francisco, Hollywood and London, has been more than favorably received in Victor Borge, combined with the hilarity of some of the modern day comedians like Bill Cosby, Flip Wilson and George Carlin. His concert attire is rather bizarre: tucks and tails, patched blue jeans and red velvet tennis shoes. He solemnly places a candelabrum fashioned from a bathroom plunger on his grand piano at the beginning of the performance. He carries a tote bag which his mother gave him for a gift – an enormous tennis shoe. To quote a review in the Friday, Oct. 7, 1977 edition of the Los Angeles Times, "Dale Gonyea is a one-man smash hit musical review."

Dale's agent/manager in L.A. is Don Williams who happens to be Andy Williams' brother. That would seem to be a good contact in itself. It's also how the joke became a novelty hit for Dale and singer Ray Stevens. Dale's sister Pam, was kind enough to pass along the story of the birth of the song. It was on a real down-and-out slump day for Dale that he walked into Don's office with a little quip to spice up the stagnation all performers molder through during the course of their careers. "Hey, you should hear the song I just wrote. It's called 'I Need Your Help, Barry Manilow!'"

"I like that," Don replied enthusiastically. "Let's hear it." The truth was, Dale had never written such a song, but upon the encouragement of that reaction went home and dashed it off that very night. The next day, when he played it for Don, the reaction was even better. Barry Manilow was impressed too. Here is the telegram Dale received, not long after the wheels started turning:

Dear Dale, I was most pleased that your demo got to me before the finished record. The song just knocked me out.

I can't tell you how flattered I am that you chose me instead of Neil Diamond. I hope it's a big hit for you and Ray because I don't have a single right now. Love, Barry Manilow

Dale will be doing some upcoming appearances on "Don Kirshner's Rock Concert," "The Merv Griffin Show," "The Comedy Shop" (Norm Crosby), "The Alan Kanamel Show" (Canadian), and for those who would like a first-hand look-see in Michigan, a benefit concert in Monroe on May 8th. This week "I Need Your Help Barry Manilow" is No. 54 according to Billboard Magazine.

Well, Dale, as Barry would put it, "looks like you made it."

Vote by mail bill passed

Although I opposed it, the House approved a bill last week that would allow all Michigan citizens to cast their ballots by mail. I'm sure you're aware that under current Michigan law the elderly, the ailing and those planning to be out of town during an election are the only persons who can mail in their ballots.

The legislation, which provided the first major test of the Legislature's intentions to stick to the guidelines of a portion of the Headlee Amendment does not require the state to pay for additional costs incurred on local governments by state-initiated programs. An amendment that would have required the state to pick up the additional costs of voting by mail was narrowly defeated, 51-50.

As you may know, a similar bill passed the California Assembly last session and became effective the first of this year. Officials in California predicted their new vote by mail system would raise the cost of each statewide election by $70,000 if they experienced a 10 percent increase in absentee ballots. Each absentee ballot would cost $3.10 to mail out and tabulated.

The sponsor of the bill in Michigan, State Representative Jack Legel of Detroit, said he believes the legislation would double the number of absentee voters in the state. If that does occur, the legislation could cost local units of government around the state some $300,000 for each statewide election.

Supporters of the bill argue that it would lead to a more informed citizenry by giving voters a chance to study the ballot before making their choices.

The bill's opponents, however, argue that the legislation would place an expensive burden on local governments and increase voter fraud.

The Senate is expected to consider the issue in the next few weeks. It is my hope that it dies there.

Ralph Ostling represents the 103rd district in the Michigan House of Representatives.

Irwin co-sponsors bill citing "gasohol day" in June

Seeking to draw public attention statewide to the potential benefits of gasohol, state Sen. Mitch Irwin (D-Sault Ste. Marie) announced today that he will co-sponsor a resolution in the Michigan Senate to declare a day in June "Michigan Gasohol Day" and will be a co-chairman of the day's event.

The event was initiated by state Sen. Dick Allen, a Gratiot County farmer who will serve as chairman of "Gasohol Day". Once appropriate national speakers and experts on gasohol have been arranged, the exact date of the event, featuring an all-day meeting in Lansing, will be announced.

Gasohol, a mixture of unleaded gasoline and ethyl alcohol made from agricultural products and by-products, is currently being marketed on a limited basis in Michigan and in several other states. Tests upon the alternative fuel have demonstrated that gasohol has a higher octane rating than gasoline and burns cleaner.

In police work since World War II, Byron Stockwell has seen lots of changes

Byron Stockwell, Under-Sheriff of Charlevoix County, has spent most of his adult life in police work. This week the Courier talks with him about his career.

COURIER: How long have you been with the Sheriff's Department?

STOCKWELL: This is my second tour of duty. I first went to work under Sheriff Glenn Rose in 1964. When Philo Sunner became sheriff, I served under him, from 1966 to 1971. Then I went to work for the City of Charlevoix as assistant Police Chief, from 1971 to 1976. In 1976, when George Lasater was elected sheriff, he asked me to come back as under-sheriff, and I've been here since then.

COURIER: How long have you lived in Charlevoix?

STOCKWELL: I came here from Lansing with my wife and two children in 1963. I was born in Three Rivers and went to a country school and high school in Charlotte.

COURIER: When did you start your career in police work?

STOCKWELL: After World War II, with the Eaton County Sheriff's Department as a deputy. I received on-the-job training. They just hung a badge on me and said "enforce the law". I was there a couple of years, then went to the East Lansing Police Department, where the pay and benefits were better. I also received some training from the senior officers.

COURIER: Did you have trouble with the students in East Lansing?

STOCKWELL: No, the biggest thing in those days was panty raids.

COURIER: What did you do when you first came to Charlevoix?

STOCKWELL: My first job was operating the Ironton Ferry. Then I worked for Courter Electric and Weathershield until Sheriff Rose asked me to join the force.

COURIER: How did you become interested in police work?

STOCKWELL: When I was in high school, I wanted to be a State Police officer, but in those days the officers had to live at the post and I wanted to get married.

COURIER: What changes in law enforcement have you seen since you entered the field?

STOCKWELL: When I started out, if you looked good in a uniform, they put a badge on you and you went to work. Now they require an applicant to be psycho-analyzed to determine if he's qualified for police work, he must complete a minimum of 10 weeks at a police academy, and when he goes to work, he's put on a year's probation to determine if he's really suitable for the job. The Miranda decision brought professionalism to police work. In the old days, we used to throw a few intoxicants in jail, handle domestic complaints, and issue traffic citations. Then Northern Michigan began to grow and crime came with it. The court used to be a Justice of the Peace. Now we have full-time judges and magistrates to help them with the work load. Another change is the sheriff's posse, the group of dedicated local young men who help the dispatching officer and work with the road patrol officers. When I went to work here in 1964, there were only two deputies, Joe Etienne and Jim McCallum, and we worked 12 hours a day.

COURIER: How many officers are employed by the Sheriff's Department now?

STOCKWELL: There are 12 Road Officers and five Correctional Officers. The Correctional Officers manage the jail and take care of the prisoners. The Road Officers are responsible for Department complaints, road patrol, civil service in the 90th District Court, manning the courts when in session, working with the prosecutor and friend of the court, manning the radio, dispatching for the City of Charlevoix and East Jordan after five o'clock, and animal control, which is a full time job. The Animal Control Officer's job is tough because he is unpopular with animal lovers. This year he had to kill two dogs which had chased and caught two deer.

COURIER: Speaking of deer, how many are killed by automobiles each year?

STOCKWELL: Last year, 87.

COURIER: How do you handle these cases?

STOCKWELL: We dispatch a car, fill out an accident report, and issue a permit to the person hitting the deer so he can keep it. Most of them take the deer, but if they don't the DNR picks up the deer and buries them. We used to be able to give them away to places like Grandvue, but not any more. Right now, any does that are hit are being studied by the DNR to see if they're with fawn. That study will be over the first of May.

COURIER: What are your specific duties?

STOCKWELL: To help Sheriff Lasater run the jail, including feeding prisoners. That's my primary job, the jail first and the people there, to be sure they're properly taken care of. I also delegate complaint work, keep the records, both criminal and civil, and fill in when we have a shortage of officers. I'm responsible to the sheriff for everything that takes place, to see that the work gets done. One big job is keeping track of grant money. We have to keep a close budget to see where it goes. This money is important to us because it helps us do a better job. So far, from our last grant we've been able to buy a car and some radio equipment.

COURIER: You were a prisoner of war, weren't you?

STOCKWELL: Yes, I was a Marine for six years, three and a half of them as a prisoner of war. I was taken prisoner in the Philippines in 1942 and set free by a Russian tank column in Mukden, Manchuria on August 14, 1945. The Japanese broke their prisoners up into groups and sent them to different places. In our group there were 200 Americans and 200 Englishmen. It was an unhappy experience but not as bad as that of many Viet Nam prisoners. Some of them were prisoners for 10 years.

COURIER: What are your hobbies?

STOCKWELL: Fishing and traveling in our trailer to local parks.

COURIER: What about your family?

STOCKWELL: My wife, Mary, and I have a daughter, Jean, who is married to a career Navy man, and Jack, who is a fish biologist at the Pellston University of Michigan station. We also have two grandsons and three granddaughters.

No gas shortage in early 1900's

Charlevoix History Part III

This is the third installment of "Memories of Charlevoix", written by Jessie Hamlin Short of Traverse City, who was born in Hayes Township and spent many years in the Charlevoix area.

There were Indians lived all around there at Burgess. One was Jim Clemens and his wife who did work for farmers and were paid in produce from the farm. These Indians were from the Ottawa Tribe and were friendly. Old Susan taught me some Indian Words. They carried their groceries in a "Maskimoose" on their backs and walked so straight, like soldiers. I knew the Olvers. Mrs. Oliver was a much loved woman who was a Christian, also Old Tabusha. They lived to be quite old.

I know when the old bridge was over the channel. Now the new one is modern and good. Whitford and Crams had a lumber mill out close by Pine Lake. Also, later there was a big sugar factory built there.

My grandmother was related to Ransom Cram. He was her brother. Also, Clara Whitford was her sister and Dell Whitford Nowland was her niece. I, too, remember the Fountain City House and John Baker's Beach Hotel. Also the resorters who lived on Michigan Avenue. They were the News and Teesdale's. Very wealthy. They had black horses and a buggy and a driver. They rode out in the country to get eggs.

I worked at the Beach Hotel and waited on the Florsheim's of the Florsheim Shoe factory and the Singer's of Singer Sewing Machine Company. There were many wealthy people who summered there.

We did not travel far from Charlevoix. We had no automobiles, only horses. There was a train that ran from Bay View near Petoskey through to Traverse City called "The Dummy". It ran back and forth. This helped us trade some in Traverse City. Also, the railroad put up a big hotel called The Inn close to the depot. There were many resorters came there for the summer.

I can think of much more, but this is enough of what I remember of years gone by. I have taken the Courier for many years and my folks took the paper before the Sentinel paper.

I have lived a long time. Am 85 years old, was born in 1893. I don't feel old.

Bell's Bay Road to be completed July 1

It cost the Charlevoix County Road Commission $1,361,392 to operate during 1978, the commission's annual report shows.

Total receipts amounted to $1,376,276, most of it coming from Motor Vehicle Highway Funds. Other sources were county raised revenue, federal aid, and trunkline maintenance revenues.

Within the county, eight townships (Bay, Chandler, Charlevoix, Evebne, Hayes, Marion, Norwood, and Wilson) contributed $125,626 in matching funds for road construction, and the County Board of Commissioners appropriated $34,651 for the purchase of a truck with underbody scraper and plow.

The Charlevoix County road system is 719 miles long. During 1978, 4.53 miles of Lakeshore Drive in Charlevoix and Norwood Townships were abandoned, and 1.03 miles were added to the system by subdivisions and new roads.

Work was begun last November on Bell's Bay Road from the Medusa Cement Plant entrance to U.S. 31. Contract completion date for the project is July 1. Construction of this segment of road will feature a cement stabilized base and is designed to carry heavy truck traffic. Funding for the project was financed by a construction grant from Medusa in the amount of $229,000 out of the total project cost of $239,000.

Maintaining the county road system accounted for $843,288 of total cost of road commission operation. The report indicates that this cost is approximately the same as the previous year, but that revenue from Motor Vehicle Highway Funds was down two percent and operating costs were continuing to rise.

Equipment replacement continues to be a major problem for the road commission due to declining revenues and increased operating costs. Total equipment expense last year was $507,004.

Appearing before the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners last week, members of the road commission indicated that this year they will concentrate their efforts on maintenance "to keep the roads we have," with very little construction work being done.

Over $275,000 in permits issued

The Charlevoix County Department of Building Inspection issued 28 permits during March for construction amounting to $276,090.

Four residences will be built at a cost of $124,145; there will be $29,754 worth of residential remodeling; and $19,000 worth of residential garages.

In the commercial category, seven addition and remodeling projects will cost $69,486.

Permits were also issued for demolitions, mobile homes, mobile home additions, and storage outbuildings.

So far this year, the department has issued 55 permits for construction valued at $486,270.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

The Charlevoix County Road Commission will accept sealed proposals until 10:00 A.M. on May 14, 1979, at their offices at 1051 E. Division Street, Bayne City, Michigan 49712, from bidders offering to purchase the following used equipment:

1. Equipment Number 155 - Peerless Gravel Screening Plant with double screen, 24"x50' frame, Model Year 1974.

2. Val-6 Sign Face Applicator; manufactured by 3-M Company.

Further information and bid documents may be obtained from the Road Commission offices.

The Charlevoix County Road Commission reserves the right to waive the irregularity of any bid, or to reject any or all bids, or to make the award as may be deemed to be in the best interest of the Commission.

Living Stations of the Cross

SEVENTH AND EIGHTH grade students, recently confirmed members of St. Mary's Church, provided an inspiring supplement to the Good Friday Services last week. Pantomiming scenes depicting the 14 Stations of the Cross, scenarios from the Passion and Death of Christ, the boys and girls took an active part in the Holy Week Liturgy - one effective way of expressing the spirit of Christian community within the parish. Playing major roles were: Kyle Bremmeyr, Connie Borths, Brian Yats, Erin Campell, Jaque Erber, Mike Martin, Pat Kerr and Tom Egler. Ten additional boys formed a human curtain so that scenes could be changed between readings. Fr. Dale Magoon and Sr. Ellen Mary Lopez assisted in the presentation with prayers and readings.
